They gave a war back in the day... Miccolis didn't show up then, either.

One can embarass you without your consent

My wife is female. I am bisexaul,. logicaly she might be too

If I had "married" a man that fact would not embarass me, it is not emabarishment that causes me to contest the liies aout my wife it is my wifes wishes that does that (and the contiue posting of the lies of course)

you have still enagaged in blackmail, I have your post and so does Bloogger as I understand the matter for what 5 years? is that the

I do wish you would realy show some reading skill Dloyd, any skil at all or is it just a pathology that you have to lie about what folks say? Never said "have to be" but "might be"

you realy have trouble confusing meaning of words like your insistantce that all killing amoug humans is automatacaly murder and how do you know he is not BI, BI the way he might well be bi, many bi's do stay in the closet. On the sources of the fighting/harrasing of me in this NG was the result of Robeson assuming I was in the closet instead merely being on topic and trying to leave out that irelavant titbit al those years . He demend I do various and threatened to out to RRAP if I did not comply with his demands but I crossed him and realy set him t a fury that has lasted for 9years now byt outing myself on RRAP at first with no mention of Robeson blackmail and then when he flamed me for bringin up my sexaulity I exposed his blackmail by posting some of his email to me provoking further outrage andetc

I dislike many people without wanting to kill and I have never except in your tromented mind ever sugested that merely disliking someone was a legal reason to kill them

one may kill a criminal in the course of his comiting his crime almost always, the full limits of that have never been tested for ongoing cyber crimes as is the case right now between us

did not know? does this mean you NOW know it is fake frankly I am shocked you have not receieved dozens of such emailI have received at least 40 of them claiming to be from from YOU promising my death at your hands

such things are part and parcel of the stalker that seek to provoke combat on RRAP for their entertainment

a faction that you are either part of or a tool of not sure which you are referring to I do recall clearing a post perporting to you that I added a further sugesting I belived it likely a forgery

I also submit you have alose admitted you know there are many forgers trying to inflame RRAP

Indeed that is one reason I can never acced to your stated demand that refrain from replying to your posts since if I agreed to such I rather suspect every one of the RRAP forgers would suddenly be "Dloyd Lavies" and I could not post any replies at all another being I often don't look at who is posting but resrict my comentary to meat of the post

thrid of course being Principle as I see it any demand I refrain excerising my free speech right esp by means of a threat as you is extrotionate attack on my civil rights

If you accept the email as fraud I demen that either remove at once,

You can't even understand that by the fact I created it, it was mine, and you jacked it. BTW, found any other bisexuals on HF?

I disagree. I put them as MORALLY and ETHICALLY WRONG.

"They" don't like to be told that, but snit on them. "They" have been trying to force THEIR way on the rest. "They" lost.
TS.

>one can say it is wrong You, me, others have done so and by god we >were listened too by the Govt and the very Nation fo the world >sometimes I am turely in awe of what forces were moved and against >such odds

What "forces?" It was just a matter of explaining the situation in logical LEGISLATIVE terms that the FCC has always worked with in radio regulation here. Code testing didn't really have a chance of survival in this modern day and the FCC already knew of it. If there were any "forces" at work, it was the uber-traditionalists still thinking in 1930s terms and trying to get "their" way, because "they" had to do it that way (so everyone else must).

>I will now paraphrase Ben Franklin, We were starting a new Ham radio >against haser odds then kinder god would have allowed"

NOT the proper quote, Mark. Forget the wise-words quoting.

Franklin was many things. His biography is fascinating.
Besides being a dirty old man, he was also a free-thinker unafraid of change. He grew up with strong ties to the English crown but switched sides on entering middle age.
He was a REBEL with a cause from middle age onwards.

>> I didn't really consider getting an amateur radio license until >> February 17th of this year.
>Len you talked about in that famous (or should it now be refered to as >Notorous) post those 7 years ago......

Oh, bullshit. That was a throwaway line...but it was something that Miccolis HAD to keep forever and ever in order to ease his personal spite later.

Seven years ago I was also retired from an electronics career as a design engineer, had obtained a First Class Radiotelephone (Commercial) Radio Operator License in 1956. I'd already been ON the air operating radios in various radio services, from the ground, from the air, and from the sea (not far out to sea, but certainly on water). Had I then really, really "wanted" a ham license, I could have gotten one. I just didn't see THEN that doing all that code practice was personally WORTH IT to me.
Just WHAT would an AMATEUR rank-title-status-privilege DO for ME? I'd already been a pro for years.

>but Len from that moment the only doubts I had to you obtain a ham >license shortly after no code was enacted were based on the fact you >might not have lived long enough

"Lived long enough?!?" Good grief, Mark, what do you think happens when one lives a long time? One day we suddenly turn into stereotypical "old folks" confined to wheel chairs with oxygen and intubation/extubation all over?

WE, (said collectively and all-inclusive) can be dead in a flash through accidents or stroke or heart attacks - or other things at ANY age. ANY age. NOBODY is immortal.
Not even pro-coders... :-)

>I had had my concerns you might of fallen prey to enough of those >detractors added to the occasionaly mind numbing bordom involved to >not manage it but I was indeed wrong and glad to be proven so

Total bullshit. THESE neophyte beginners in computer-modem communications going to psychologically affect ME? Good grief, I've had 22 1/2 years of practice at that, been a moderator on BBS public boards, been a co-sysop on two others. I've seen about all the types of posturing liars and boasters there are in-person as well as on-line. The group in here is just second-rate on that kind of thing. The only thing different about this group is that they have federally-granted amateur radio licenses.
BFD. That doesn't make any of them superhuman...or even "better than others."

Amateur radio is just a HOBBY. It is supposed to be for personal enjoyment. The militant arguers in here, the filth-mongers are just busy, busy trying to wage an amateur Word War III. They lack the ammunition to do it effectively, cannot use "tactics" worth a damn. Mark, they pick on YOU because you fall into their Word War trap by answering nearly ALL of their trolls. You MUST break away from that habit. It isn't working FOR you. It is working for THEM...and it has already annoyed the hell out of the few of us who care to talk about radio regulation policy and radio.

thus you cnceed the efectiness of the technique that has been efective was demontrated to RRAP By Steve Robeson with the diruptive "More Markie (then Morkie) Mulakie" posts I then studing his technques learned to exploit to to counter him and final drive him largely away from the NG, an act jsufied by hsi staus as someone that the NG has been slowly recovering from those days complicated by Steve

why?

I don't have that right why do you claim it for yourself

you have the right to post and no one has the right to blackmail in not posting, no one has any duty to stand by and say nothing in why do you have that that right not I or for that matter not Lloyd

Len, you told us back on September 22, 2006 that when the Morse Code test was eliminated you would leave this newsgroup. But here you are, griping and snipling and complaining because someone dares to disagree with you.

So typical.

A revolution? Hardly.

In 1990, it became possible to get a US amateur license of any license class with only a 5 wpm Morse Code test and a medical waiver. The waiver required only a simple doctor's note.

On Feb 14 1991, the Technician class license lost its Morse Code test.

On April 15, 2000, all Morse Code testing except 5 wpm was eliminated in the USA.

You're projecting again, Len.

What was morally wrong, Len? Accomplishing something that you had not?

Is it wrong to be proud of an accomplishment?

Really?

Was ex-KG6IRO Morse Code tested?

You are right about one thing, Len: Almost nobody came.

We were told many times that the Morse Code testing was stifling "growth". That many "otherwise qualified people" were being kept out of amateur radio by the "barrier" of even a 5 wpm Morse Code test.

We were told that a bright and shining New Era would dawn when it went away.

Yet the number of US hams as of March 27 2007 is less than it was on Feb 22. 2007.

Perhaps that's just a daily anomaly. We shall see. But it's clear there's no flood of new people at all. So much for the "barrier".

You've made that same, tired old mistake for years, Len. It's just wrong.

Yet it was you who proposed banning anyone under the age of 14 from amateur radio in the USA.

The US population has been getting older. Median age in 2000, as measured by the census, was over 39 years - up by more than four years since 1990. Americans are living longer, having fewer children, and having them later in life.

Who denied changes, Len? Not me. Some changes are good, others aren't.

You resisted changes to the zoning in your neighborhood. You didn't want it to CHANGE from the way it was when you bought your house there. Let the others go someplace else - you wouldn't accept that change!

It happened anyway.

> I didn't really consider getting an amateur radio license until > February 17th of this year.

Your own words prove that to be completely false, Len.

For example, back on January 19, 2000, you wrote:

"I'm going for Amateur Extra "out of the box." "

(handy link to the post)

http://tinyurl.com/c5qyv

That was soon after the dropping of all but the 5 wpm code test. You have called it a "throwaway line" and "taken out of context" but never said what that's supposed to mean.

Anyone who bothers to click on the link and read what you wrote can see what you clearly intended. KB9RQZ remembers it clearly - is he wrong? Is everyone else who read your "out of the box" boast also wrong?

Or were you just lying to us then?

But that's not the only example

Back on July 15, 2005, you wrote these words in one of your long insulting diatribes:

"Tried to learn morse for 13 WPM back in the early 60s, reached about 8 WPM, and GAVE UP. "

(handy link)

http://tinyurl.com/25opue

Anyone who bothers to click on the link and read what you wrote can see what you clearly intended. You were trying to reach 13 wpm so you could get a General or Conditional class US Amateur Radio license.

Or were you lying about 8 WPM?

Back then, some classes of US license only required 5 wpm Morse Code. But a "Novice" or "Technician" weren't good enough for you then. Or now.

> I'd had (and still do) a commercial >   license since March 1956.

But not an amateur license. Not a license that would permit you to have your own amateur station, nor a license that would permit you to operate another's amateur station.

> But, it would be, I thought, a FUN >   hobby in my retirement years.

It's been fun for me these past 40 years. No need to wait for retirement at all.

> I don't need the experience to >   "further my career" (I've had one, reasonably successfully) or >   "give back" anything to anybody.

All besides the point. The truth is that you did consider getting an amateur license long before Feb 17 2007. Otherwise, why were you trying to learn 13 wpm in the 1960s?
Why did you make your "out of the box" claim in 2000?

> I was not interested in >   "emergency work" or volunteerism in radio...I am a volunteer

OK, fine. Nobody says you have to volunteer.

The truth is that some amateurs do volunteer and do provide emergency and public service communications. You may deny that fact, but it's still true.

It is, Len. It's been FUN for me for 40 years - so far.

It's interesting that you say "it should be a lot of FUN" - speaking of the future.

Do you have your Amateur Radio station set up yet? Made any interesting contacts yet?

Kinda like people not wanting the zoning in their neighborhood to change, ever? Not wanting "APARTMENTS" anywhere near them, even though said "APARTMENTS" were actually in-law suites?
Not wanting a 15 acre piece of private land to be developed because doing so might 'ruin their view'?

In other words, you've had the license a month but haven't done anything with it. That's OK...you don't have to do a thing except follow the rules.

Yep. All those folks who were going to be hams and bring the New Era...

Sure would be. Some of us were saying that 40+ years ago, too.

It's a pretty common way to raise money. The person doesn't usually have to be dead to get their name on a paver, though.

Some years back the local historic society wanted to renovate the local (Wayne PA) train station. They did the pavers thing and raised enough to do a really nice job.

There's a walkway at the nearby Agnes Irwin School
with the names of alumnae on some of the pavers.
They contributed to a major renovation/expansion.
Some of the names are famous, others virtually unknown.

> I am not about to memorialize anyone

I've never seen anyone do that at the places I mentioned.

Then don't! Nobody is saying you have to or even should.

It's just a fund-raising scheme. Didn't originate with ARRL and won't end there.

These fund-raising schemes are done rather than raising dues and/or advertising rates. Some of them permit contributors to target where the money is spent rather than just pouring it into the common pot.

I wish taxes worked that way!

> Build a wall with the bricks, or anything else
> other than a "walk on you daddy" place.

What would be really cool IMHO would be to have one's name/call on an actual working brick in the W1AW station building!
But I don't see what all the fuss is about in this thread. If someone wants to buy a paver, fine, it's their money spent on a good cause. If not, there's no requirement to participate. Lots of other worthwhile ARRL things to contribute to.

Nope it isn't. And is Avagaye a telling nickname since Gavi(n) is as gay as you are, or is it pig latin since neither you nor your "wife" are very creative.

No, stupid, you are the one making all those atacking blogs. You are

No, Mark, Miccolis just doesn't WANT to face reality...or anything else that will disagree with His view of everything.

For example, I've said in the past that I will leave this newsgroup once the code test is eliminated.

News Flash: I CHANGED MY MIND ABOUT THAT! :-)

Somehow, in Miccolis' odd view of life and things, one CANNOT EVER CHANGE THEIR MIND...about anything
once it is stated!

Remarkable inflexibility. Not a good thing in a technology area that is constantly changing the state of the art.

Miccolis wants the comfortable, the secure (because he made it long ago), the unchanging from His point of view.
Apparently Miccolis swore some kind of oath long ago
to FOREVER hold the old, trite, worn-out traditions, policies that were imprinted on his brain years ago. He can't abide arguments against that world-view and takes out his spite on all his challengers.

I like to keep flexible, both in technology and traditional things. Tradition has its place but is really an emotional thing that does not necessarily hold forever and ever.
The technological arts have been constantly changing in ALL electronics ("radio" is a subset of that) since before the first demonstration of radio as a communications medium in 1896; the Morse-Vail Telegraph System was first operational in 1844 and spread throughout the world yet there is no manual "morse code" telegraph working in North America today and hasn't been for over 40 years.

Why on earth should the FCC have held to the morse code exam for an AMATEUR radio license that has operating privileges BELOW 30 MHz so long? The rhetorical answer is POLITICS. USA politics. The sort of politics practiced by a minority group of radio hobbyists who prefer morse code mode over all other modes and insist that all newcomers DO AS THEY DID.

Inflexibility with high seasoning of control-freak opinion.
It was nonsense to hold on to the old for so long. The FCC had enough and removed the code test...which shows that the FCC is not the staid old government agency that some think it is. The FCC is progressive but it is also hindered by the politics of opinion (as are all governmental agencies).

In early February I was thinking of all this politics nonsense and it was obvious that an opportunity presented itself to me to add one more radio license to my life experience. I simply changed my mind about the whole situation, took the tests, passed all of them, got another callsign (the PLMRS business radio had been cancelled) and the now-lifetime GROL was still intact. Okay, now I'm an amateur extra class amateur radio licensee. Have I had my "first experience"
"with my own radio" as a result of that? Hardly. Been there, done that, several different ways long ago. But some of the unreal argument-for-argument-sake idiots in here seem to think that a ham license is the ONLY way one can get such 'experience!' :-)

The inflexible mind-set presented by Miccolis has nothing to do with the situation on testing (or even newsgrouping) behavior. It is just his way of GETTING BACK at his detractors in here. It doesn't work (obviously) but he keeps on trying. It must be irritating to others. To me it is just a familiar pattern in all of computer-modem commications media...their respective egos are just personalizing their responses and they aren't thinking farther than their own in-group of similar-activity devotees. I've seen it long ago and will - no doubt - continue to see it on these venues.

If Miccolis wants to pretend he is Judge and Jury and Executioner, let him. He can wear black robes and a veddy English formal wig if he likes. He doesn't have the authority, doesn't have the judgement, doesn't have much of anything upon which to "judge" or "sentence" anyone. He is just a gavel-banger, making a lot of noise because he loves the noise. "Court" dismissed.

Watch out, he will accuse of a hacking and a slew of other bogus "crimes" too, and he will have to meet with the D/A, Sheriff, and his attorney to report you of a "low level crime". He reminds me of that big mouth girl in "Rooster Cogburn" who kept threating everyone with her attorney the entire time through out the movie. His buffoonery never ceases to amaze me.

Your right Andy, his blog is more about me than it is him. He has turned into what he says he hates, a stalker.

it is even odder than that you also may not acording to Rip EY do what you said you were going to do, in your case decide to follow though on the statement he alleges was a promise, while you did not believe it I did awhile suspecting you were just making an offhand remark, I hardly well since certain folks are bring up my interest in medevil reanactment I will bring up that it is hard for something roughly a centrury old to be truly traditional, i respect that others do but with my interests dating back to events in 1st dynasty Egt and the clays of Sumer and UR thought roman era (in which I also reinact) the midleage and Renasance, the Civil War for which I sometimes recreated the character of Col Morgan ala Morgans Raiders, well I looks at the last 100 years as current events not realy history yet politics and to be fair inertia both of which tend to dominate the often Torporid rank of the US Govt 'Crats

as I said I am sometimes amazed the FCC moved and moved against the expressed wishes of the ARRL. the total rebuff of the ARRL's efforts
while in this case were good of the ARS makes me have even more serious doubts about the ARRL's ability to act for the interest of the michigan case number is CCU-48-07. you can find contact info for the michigan state police online I will not provide it since I am so often accused of having somehow set up some vast fake network to divert call from anywhere in the world to me the case number wa s only assinged a bit before noon (the email seending it to me was time stpamped at 11:43, like I said it is a low priority matter to them

That's why I don't do any of that anymore either....if you really want to know who I am you can look on ebay and figure it out, I sold tons of gear in the last month or two on ebay.

Double standard Mark uses the death of a child as a weapon against the father. Why don't you answer why it is OK for you to do that.

Honestly no I did not

OTOH since you enage in nit pikcing my psots I must why you ended a question with a period?

> You don't restrain >your posting.

no I do not
> You attacked Steve and tried to use the death of his >daughter as nail to drive through his heart to get at Steve, ...

Indeed I did after 8 years on contiued harrasment I got tired of taking it

but unlike steve attacks on Me I used simple facts sprun a bit to look as bad as possible, while stave and woger have been using pruefantasy and peusdo science to attack me as you have you for that matter

>......... You made >light of the death of a child,....

No I made a very grim and serious matter of it

>......... and said she should have been aborted which was and is a true statement of my belief in the matter Steve had been a passion out claiming I shoul;d be aborted retroactively if possible

>and somehow he was responsible for her death, as he has claimed I am responible for various death tit for tat

> how anymore dispicable >can you get, to attack the fact that someone has lost a child.

it needed doing, Steve would respond to nothing less

I ignored much your psot when they degenerate into ranting

I make no claim I keep it to the net

which is online and steve himslef anouced that death here in RRAP >obtain information, and use the death of >an innocent child to further his harrassment of Steve.

I did not harrass Steve when staeve refused to cease and desit his years of harrment of me I finaly resorted to lighting a cyber back fire against his flame war

> Mr. Morgan is >a peice of human dung. Yet with his double standard, when someone >does the same, he calls foul.

I di not to you what steve did to me

did I call your home and deliver a death to your ailling father?

did I enage in calling you a theif then child molestor and rpist over an 8 year period?

did I make flase report that you molested achild or anal raped your own father?

did I thereby case your father to have ahulmiating interview with a social that only ended when he got up and slugged her telling once agian to shut her foul mouth and leav him in peace while you were forced to stand out side able to hear my father being agitated this way with a State trooper on hand

the perp in the action is known to be a LPN form TN as Steve is he has adknowledged making reports of elder and child abuse to michigan here on RRAP I am assuming that the incdents in question are related to one that steve adknowledes, I have stated that assumtion and Steve while confrim the contents of his "reports" does not dispute them either

after that Yes I took the offensive, futher shouldmI see an opertunity to prusue matters even further with Steve i will take it up

Ladeeees and Gentlemen! I looks like tonight's posting frenzy is off to a wonderful start! Mark Morgan is leading the pack as he dashes toward the 2,000 post goal. Will he make it? A few more days will tell, but the stands are going wild in anticipation!

The spam fans love him. He's their favorite, and they're pulling for him to win. If he should win, there won't be a dry eye in the house.

Go, Mark, go!!!

Apparently, after posting your wedding registry, you are the one know knowing whether they are coming or going, spammer. Of course, you had a big headstart in that from day one.

Agreeing that you don't know if you are coming or going? Or agreeing that you are a lying hypocrite?

Oh, Mark know this full well. He's lying, of course, and we are all aware of that.
One thing that wedding want list was lacking though...an oat bag for Gav.

Only your opinion Markie, off course you can take your opinion and shove it next to your head which is up your ass as usual. Because it is obvious to many that you are probably retarded from methene poisoining.

Rest of this thread is boring, more of Marky fantasy of eating poo..
Funny how the posted started out about Markies best buddy, N9 Old Gay Lover, and got to Markies poo fetish...

funny I can recall enaging in a conversation at all with you?

are you confusing this sock puppet with some other sock puppet perhaps?

I can recall Dloyd making demands and slanous staments about me and my wife my sexaulity my relious beleifs and my morality and heclling me on these points till I decided to respond to them

you only seem to wish to converse on total off topic and that doing a manner I found insulting

all I have seen is you demands that I comform to YOUR moral viewpoint on everything and not express my own opinion on anything without you enaging in name calling sorry Dloyd are seemingly engrossed by them as you keep coming back for more no matter how boring I make them

perhaps you could point some where where we had an ontopic

this makes it proper and good idea ?

why do you seem to want to make another of your Jihads over some folks expressing they don't like something I have not read (I may have missed it) say it is ilegal accuse the ARRL of wrong doing, etc

it justs seem well "tacky" to some of us and we said so and frankly since you want to this thread going dehumanizing it is callsigns that are being put not names

I am Mark Morgan, not KB9RQZ, indeed I have never esp liked the presumtion on this NG that is was proper to refer to me by mark or markie or frankly anything but MR Morgan without my leave but till your penadantic insistance, I ahve been reasonable content to bear it (perhaps the facts I am a caregiver to the Elder Mr Morgan a title he gets to enjoy automaticaly and I have fight for if I want it has something to do with it)

you have the power to stop maters I don't you attacked I counter atacked in self defense you can go away or not you are the defensive... good that is where I want if I can't have you siting in jail or dead (by lawful means of course)

you started off a seris of events without considering the cost to yourself

the prudent and logical thing to do is to make you pay as as high a price as I can for admited acts of agression and those I merely suspect.

this hopefully will serve as a deterrant of contiuing to go after the wifes and families as was the Hallmark of K4YZ till finaly I grew tired of that, given I suspect you hof BEING K4YZ and I am not alone in that suspisaion it would seem (BB) a policy of assuming you asre him thus will respond ot nothing than he would also seems prudent to me

you lie about me you lie about what I say you try to impose your will on my online posting by threatening further attacks (while dening you made any in the first place)

you can go away as Dloyd to no dount emerge as some new annymouse soon enough or you can stay and coninue to submit what you claim find undesirable and as offensive as the humilation my father was forced to endure ,very posibliy at your hands.

I don't like ANY ANNYMOUSE I tolerate some of them most of the time but I don't like I consider the tactic imoral and dishonorable, thus I would those labels on you personaly if I only could Neither are you or hot-ham-and-cheese, old sojer. You two act like

Just a couple of days ago you ridiculed someone who wrote about the Vietnam War Memorial. You bleated something about Korea. You didn't serve in Korea during the Korean War. You made up your classic tale of what it is like to undergo an artillery barrage. Your embellishment of >politics and to be fair inertia both of which tend to dominate the

>often Torporid rank of the US Govt 'Crats

I have a much lesser view of "inertia" (failure to "get going" on some problem) that is supposed to be in government. I see such "inertia" as simply the time required in having to consider ALL citizens' input, not just one group that thinks they are the 'only' ones who can be righteous on some viewpoint.

>as I said I am sometimes amazed the FCC moved and moved against the >expressed wishes of the ARRL. the total rebuff of the ARRL's efforts
>while in this case were good of the ARS makes me have even more >serious doubts about the ARRL's ability to act for the interest of the >ARS

First off, it is pretty clear that the ARRL has "acted" mainly in the interests of its MEMBERSHIP. In most interpretations of any membership organization's formal constitution, that IS what they are obligated to do. They owe NO allegiance to all amateurs despite their own propaganda.

It should also be clear that the ARRL was standing rather alone in world opinion on the code test on up to the start of WRC-03. The IARU wanted amateur radio regulation S25 rewritten to let each administration decide for themselves whether its applicants should test for morse code skill. Right after WRC-03 and the rewriting of S25 (almost all of it), the ARRL remained "neutral" towards code testing. I.E., they wouldn't commit one way or the other, perhaps finding the position of the lone opponent to world opinion being a bit strong and wrong.

When it came to Comments on FCC 05-143, the ARRL proposed a half-way scheme of some classes having to test for code but other classes not to test for code. That satisfied no one but those licensees who were adamantly opposed to code test elimination. That was no "solution," only a reworded system of class distinction based on code skills that was just another form of what already existed.

The ARRL is showing SOME signs of starting to look at the larger picture of amateur radio in the USA. Not a great deal and one must look very closely at what it now does and says publicly. They must try to entice ALL classes to join. There IS attrition happening in amateur radio ranks. The numbers show the trend has begun, despite the denial of some. Newcomers are generally younger and aren't buying "the old guy's club" stuff like the old guys did when they were young. A dropping membership means a smaller demographic for selling ads in QST and a lesser income from the ARRL's huge publications factory. If their income decreases they will have a tougher time meeting budgets for the staff and plant and their "free services" to members (only) will reduce. That has to happen if their membership drops.

My opinion is that the FCC thinks LESS of the ARRL than it might have two decades or more ago. The FCC isn't fooled by the political word phrases of Chris Imlay in describing the ARRL. DC is the heart of political phrases in the USA and those phrases ARE recognized as such by those working there. Such political phrases may wow the general populace (as they are designed to do) but it is difficult to change minds of those constantly in receipt of them.

This recent favoritism of "robot stations" for data transmission is viewed as a half-heated attempt to "go modern." It wasn't thought out well since it is obvious that such automatic stations are bound to cause interference for the average amateur on the bands. On some frequencies the QRM from high-power live amateurs can be bad enough. At least they ARE live and can be identified and reached...maybe to change their minds. Robots aren't "alive" and those just do what they are programmed to do.

The "low-cost" "Radio Designer" computer analysis program was an attempt (I think an honest one this time) to modernize the potential for electronic breadboarding...for examination of circuits as well as trying out design models. However, they didn't SECURE it well enough and the company that made the prototype didn't support it forever. Right now, a full working SPICE program with schematic-to-net-list automatic transfer is offered FREE to anyone wanting to download it from National Semiconductor's website. It works. I find it most handy for design as well as checking out others' circuits. National's SPICE variant is FREE. Not just for radio amateurs but for ALL.
"Radio Designer" has been on the obsolete list for years now.

YEAH he do! :-) Little nit-picky arguments over minutae, all design to "prove" his opponents are "wrong." Argue with him on those things and he will try to turn it around that the arguer is always wrong. Jay-suss, that gets old fast...it got old years ago.

>I have some some my favoritie colections of his sentenced pulled out >of rapp in file for reading when I need help to sedate my mind after a >particualrly stresfull day

Whatever works for you, Mark. I don't pretend to be a guru.
I've been around the horn a few times in radio, mostly in other radio services, so I speak from SOME experience. The only thing "different" in amateur radio is the man-made jargon and procedure.
The theory, the electrons, fields and waves, all work the same for EVERY radio service. No difference there. Real designers, real theory folks KNOW this.

The practitioners of amateur radio, at least some, will pound on the table, get red in the face, hollering that the ONLY way one can learn "radio" is to become an amateur licensee. That's totally stupid emotional non-logic. Most of those just haven't had any real experience in other radio services and the resent those of us who have done so. Those practitioners want to SHUT OUT any mention of other radio services as "not applicable" to amateur radio. That is just compounding the stupidity and illogic. But, they DO carry on like that and there isn't any way to stop them. They have their little "clubhouse" and want to keep it "safe" from those who don't think like they do. :-)

I didn't "BLEAT," robust oberst. I simply stated that the Korean War has NOT YET been settled. It is in an almost perpetual state of truce since July, 1953.

> You didn't serve in Korea during the Korean War.

I was assigned to the 8235th Army Unit, a signal battalion attached to Army Central Command in the Far East from late January 1953 to January 1956. The Korean active War was from June 1950 to July 1953.

>You made up your classic tale of > what it is like to undergo an artillery barrage.

"Classic?!?" Hardly. The writing wasn't good enough for the "classic" classification. :-)

> Your embellishment of your military service is legend.

"Embellishment?!?" :-) Are you going to write the Department of the Army and demand they retract my Good Conduct Ribbon award? :-)

What I did during my active US Army assignment is described in the photo essay available at:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

The details described therein have been reviewed and found accurate by three former members of that battalion and a retired civilian engineer then working for the US Army. Also available is:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/AlphabetSoup.pdf

...which is a digitized booklet produced by the signal battalion showing what the station and facilities were like in 1962-1963.

What WE do NOT have is the illustrious battle experience of mighty warrior David Heil IN a country at war. Strangely enough he is most reticent about saying anything on that.
Chances are, those saying nothing detailed were just the usual REMF trying to pad out their 'histories.'

I agree and that does not bode well for the abilty of the ARRL to act when the power of a gruop that could lay some legoit claim to reppresenting us. and there could be times that ARRL or other large organzation could be a of critcal value to us, but too many IMO hams including myself it has lost ceridibility I jioned the ARRL when I was licensed in 1997 extending them respect on credit sadly the ARRL action toward over drew that credit limit within a few nd did not renew in either 2002 or 2003

I'm sure that your view was formulated based upon your own experience with inertia: Decades of considering all things concerning GETTING INTO amateur radio, better than ten years of posting in this newsgroup, your false start over seven years ago and finally, waiting for the Morse code test to disappear.

Generally younger? Do you mean generally younger than yourself when you became a newcomer some weeks ago? I became an ARRL member at 14. I never considered it as "the old guy's club". When I became a member, the ARRL was my organization too.

That's your opinion and you're entitled to it. That doesn't make it factual; it just makes it your opinion.

I'll bet it got old for you, Len. You must have gotten tired of being shown to be in error time after time.

Other radio services have their own man-made jargon, procedures and regulations.

Amateur radio is not solely about design and theory. Much of it is about operating, the thing which an amateur radio license permits you to do.

It surely is stupid, emotional non-logic. In fact, you're the only fellow I've seen make such a statement.

> Most of those just haven't > had any real experience in other radio services and the resent

I wouldn't advise that you start off making such statements when you first put your brand new amateur radio license to use in getting on the air.

> Those practitioners want to SHUT > OUT any mention of other radio services as "not applicable" to

That's not the case either, Leonard. You've been told that amateur radio is not like other services when it comes to the use of Morse code.
It is still heavily used in amateur HF and VHF weak signal work.

> That is just compounding the stupidity and > illogic.

It would be if your statement were true. It isn't. You've made another factual error.

Note: The "AF" in the number indicates "Air Force". My number was changed not too long after my enlistment to an "AF" number which was the same as my Social Security Number. I'm not giving you that one.

To think that someone would not get involved in amateur radio for over a decade, if not longer, solely on the basis of a morse code examination required for privileges 30mhz and below -- given the huge amount of diversity in the ARS -- is probably one of the saddest, if not most pathetic, things I've heard in my lifetime.

Why purposely deny yourself years of fun and enjoyment?

Mark soon will don his "chain mail", grab his splintered lance with the Morgan coat of arms on it, wrap his beloved Lady Gav's scarf around his Looks like Mark held true to his threat to get even with Dloyd. He has begun by stealing Dloyd's blog.

http://www.markmorgansucks.blogspot.com/

I guess it is wrong, wrong, wrong, to use easily found information about HIM in these groups, and accusing others of theft comes easily to the hypocrite. But when it comes to stealing from another...well, Mark clearly has a double standard.

You are a Cretin, Mark.

Mark didn't steal that blog address, I gave it up because it was getting stale and he would not stop posting his filth on there after I repeatedly asked him to refrain from posting on my blog. But it is funny that he correlated the "suck" part of the address as an attack on his sexuality. Nevertheless, somebody can always create another blog just like that one.

I classify his taking of the address more like some bum picking through your garbage and taking a peice of trash.

However, all of that text from my Blog that Mark stole and has been happily posting on his blog is theft and a direct violation of blogger's TOS.

If I could do so, Leonard, the League wouldn't have to advertise that it wants people to buy bricks. They'd have all they want--with your new call on 'em.

Remember, Len, don't buy a brick if the Diamond Terrace bothers you.

too close to the training group I was in.

> > Your embellishment of your military service is legend.

It must be his training at the Fruenze Military Academy. :-)

Well, we've had Major Dud in here expostulating up a storm about his "USMC career." We've had Heil telling all sorts of things about "being in a country AT war." Those all blend together, don't they?

Did David actually OPERATE any radios (other than a BC receiver) in Vietnam? I must have missed one of his brags about that because I don't recall him giving any information on that. I really can't believe half of what he says in here.

When I was assigned to ADA, we actually OPERATED HF radios...and VHF radios...and UHF radios...and some microwave radios. Before the 1965 date that the DoD says the USA "got involved" in the Vietnam War. Not only that, I've got photo and text references to that on a publicly-accessible website. <shrug>

But, David is passing a brick about my being a "newcomer

It had no earmarks of anyone in particular, Leonard. Whoever the guy was, he had a number of things right.

You can't let a post containing mention of military service pass without donning your bunting, mounting your soapbox and attempting to belittle that service. It is what you do.

There has been no one posting under that name, ever. If you mean Steve Robeson, there is a freely accessible web site with information confirming his time in the USMC. You've either never found it or never bothered looking.

Yeh, there's usuall one KIA on every FTX, but usually from a vehicle accident or pushing a mast ito power lines or something usually preventable. We had a round impact next to dmain - I think it was moonsan during Winter Haze. They really shouldn't let those guys play with those things. They could hurt someone.

Curtailed career with no explanation whatsoever... VA hospital, rehabilitation, and disability pension, but was never injured, save for some grit that got in his eye once. Hmmmm?

So who hasn't? Most of the people I actually know have been deployed. I don't actually know Jim, but I'm told he has served in other ways.

All I can recall about his retelling of his Vietnam period was being PO'd at not being permitted to be a ham over there.

Around 1965, I was operating my dad's Philips SW set from Athens, Greece. The birthplace of "democraticia" had a King, but no television broadcasts, and we got our news and entertainment from BBC and VOA. The Dutch station had the best music, but who knew what they were saying?

Yikes! That's one rough gall stone!

Anyway, I've passed the 20 year mark in amateur radio, and in ham years I'm still wet behind the ears... according to the coded elitists.

I think Grandpa Lennie is simply jealous of the fact that due to his waiting 54 years to get an amateur radio license -- and the fact that the actuarial tables state he probably doesn't have 15 years left -- he will be unable to accumulate 230k+ QSOs that others accumulated here have.

Does he? He seems to think that nominations are votes.

A guy who can't find the required number of other ARRL full members in his entire Division to sign his nominating petition would have more problems than worrying about getting one vote. Even Carl Stevenson rounded up enough folks to be nominated. He was "otherwise disqualified."

It doesn't matter whether he's jealous or not, Mike. He can fill up his years with getting on 75m and telling hams who have been in the game for decades about his experiences at ADA in the 1950's.

I don't intend to keep reminding him of his remaining time on the planet. Any of us could easily go before Len does. All it takes is a traffic accident (Roger Wiseman's death wish for me: failing brakes, sharp curves, twisting road) or a sudden illness. The fact is that I've already enjoyed 43 years in amateur radio.

> -- he will be unable to > accumulate 230k+ QSOs that others accumulated here have.

If he gets busy and hones his skills, he could get it done. I made over that number in my nearly sixteen years overseas though it wasn't really that long since I was typically in the U.S. for two to three months between assignments and usually burned a month or so of leave in the U.S. or elsewhere each year. I've submitted nearly 30,000 QSOs to LOTW but I still have years of contest logs from the paper logging days which have yet to be entered into the computer logging database. It'd be nice to have a half million or so QSOs logged before departure time.

If Len Anderson wants to pretend that he is part of some revolution, let him play. He'll unbox his JA transceiver, hook it to a vertical antenna and have all the fun he is capable of having.

Indeed. That was Len's point. Nice to see you came around to it in your round about way.

Not to mention club call signs... He's way, way, way behind the power curve. Maybe you could offer some pointers.

Len's point is under his hair.

You and Len seem a little confused. I'm not running for any League office. I've not made any announcement that I was.

I'd think you'd see that you and Leonard are walking around in circles.
You had me running for an election and Len had me looking for a "nomination vote." Those were two factual errors from two folks who make quite a number of factual errors.

Oh, my, passing that brick must have REALLY hurt! You certainly MANUFACTURED a great number of FALSEHOODS
there, David. :-)

Amateur radio was NOT one of my life goals, David. It is just a small part of the much larger world of radio where I've lived and worked in for decades. It just wasn't something I desired or longed for during all that time.

My participation in a campaign to (successfully) eliminate the morse code test was a POLITICAL exercise in regards to old, antiquated radio regulations for a hobby radio activity. That had NOTHING to do with (what you imagine) as lusting after a amateur radio license. :-)

I was a newcomer in radio 54 years ago. :-) I'm not a "newcomer" in ANY radio, sweetums.

>I became an ARRL member at 14.

Bully for you. Why did you WAIT so long? Didn't you know that you could have been licensed at age 4?

You WAITED and procrastinated for a WHOLE DECADE! :-)

>That's your opinion and you're entitled to it. That doesn't make it

Yes, Sherlock, that is MY OPINION. You don't like my opinion.
TS on that, sweetums.

Your dislike of MY OPINION is just your dislike. It doesn't make YOU "right" or even factual. :-)

>Other radio services have their own man-made jargon, procedures and >regulations.

How do you know? Did you go to State Department RADIO SCHOOL to learn that? Or did State accept your "knowledge of ham radio" as superior to everything else and just assign you to an Embassy right away?

Why don't you quote some "jargon and procedure" from an ATCRBS?
How about from some harbor or inland waterway? How about from some MARS field exercise with other government radio services?
Do you roger that, old airman? :-)

>Amateur radio is not solely about design and theory. Much of it is >about operating, the thing which an amateur radio license permits you to do.

I've OPERATED radios on LF, on HF, on VHF, on UHF, and on microwaves WITHOUT ANY LICENSE! Legally, too. :-)

I've OPERATED broadcast transmitters, even talked over them, with a COMMERCIAL radio operator license...something that is NOT PERMITTED with an amateur radio license.

I've OPERATED a civil aviation radio, its companion VOR, and ATC Transponder with a COMMERCIAL radio operator license. The FCC will not allow an amateur radio licensee to do that unless they have a commercial license. That was AT the controls of the aircraft at the time. :-)

I have NOT "operated" using morse code on any radio...and I don't care to do so now. Isn't that what YOU call "operating a radio?" :-)

If you think so, why on earth did you use the "newcomer to radio" remark earlier in this message?

Well, at least you agree that some of YOUR OWN remarks in the past were, indeed, "stupid, emotional non-logic."

I've already been on the amateur bands, David...and have discussed such subjects with other radio amateurs here. :-)

Tsk, tsk, you've TOLD ME a lot of different shit, David.
Complete with the wearing of the Waffen SS costume with monocle in a terrible parody of Colonel Klink. :-)

>It is still heavily used in amateur HF and VHF weak signal work.

Then by all means USE it yourself. Why do you insist on shoving YOUR preferences down others' throats?

>It would be if your statement were true. It isn't. You've made another

Tsk, tsk, your biggest FACTUAL ERROR was opening your browser and attempting to convince others that their preferences should be the same as yours. Compounding that was your FACTUAL ERROR in assuming you were some kind of "authority" and/or "leader"
on who should do what and where.

Every time you shout "factual error" you make your own FACTUAL ERROR. You have NO authority to judge anyone. You weren't even elected to any ARRL office...and you've been a member since you were fourteen! I'd say you really, Really, REALLY procrastinated on that. My, my, all that time and couldn't become an OFFICER!

Have you considered joining the Civil Air Patrol? I hear they will make just about anyone an OFFICER! No USAF schooling in that, either! Now hurry up and PASS THAT BRICK.

Yeah...something "up with which Deignan will not put!"

Wow, a collitch instructor stating a sentence that ends with:
...accumulate 230k+QSOs that others accumulted here have."

Wow, "I waited 54 years to get a ham license?!?" I don't think so. :-) To some of those olde-tymers, the ONLY radio world is the amateur world! They don't get out much.

But, I guess ham radio is the ONLY career they have. Pity that. [snif, snif, boo hoo]

Bus boys sometimes do serving.

Hilversum's PCJ is world famous and Eddie Starz was still alive in 1965. Terrific linguist, could handle most of the languages himself! "Peace, Cheer, Joy" is what he called PCJ. Difficult for me to get Holland directly so I tune for Nobody "better" than the coded elitists. Ask any one of them.

Sigh...there'l be no peace for them until the last coder's key is pried from their cold, dead fingers. I'll be helping with the

What exactly is a "collitch" instructor? Is it one of those secret jobs only

That might be pointless. What could they trade? Old log books?

I know a couple logging companies. Those keep books on their logging business. Not quite the same.

Oh, I think there is plenty of conflict. Like with the folks they want to officiate. Those don't take kindly to having a few tell the many what they should be doing... :-)

"Collitch" refers to the English skills (or lack thereof) of some instructor that writes "...that others accumulated here have."

You have Collitch Degrease, Mr. Clubman? Is it slippery like your fake "clubs" you got callsigns for? :-)

I'm not aware of any "Collitch" (or, College, for that matter) instructors

Who might they be?

Why not sift through my statements above? You can let me know if you find anything where I've written that amateur radio was one of your life goals.

Watch out, Len! You're fibbing again. You have expressed in this newsgroup, a several decades interest in amateur radio. You have also posted to this amateur radio newsgroup for better than a decade. You have repeatedly written about "GETTING INTO amateur radio". Additionally, your boast of seven years back is archived. There have been several accurate quotes of it reposted here.

> My participation in a campaign to (successfully) eliminate the

It may be just a hobby activity to you, Len. The FCC does not define it as such anywhere. Your "participation" in whatever does not negate your past statements.

You're certainly a newcomer, Windy. You're a newcomer to amateur radio--a beginner, a neophyte. Are you a youngster? Do you think of the ARRL as an "old guy's club"? Do you consider yourself one of amateur radio's Young Turks?

>> I became an ARRL member at 14.

I thought it best to wait until I had an amateur radio license.

I didn't know amateur radio existed until I was nearly 13. I was licensed a little over a year later. I suppose I could have hemmed and hawed and procrastinated until the middle of my eighth decade. I didn't see the point of waiting.

No, Len, I didn't. When the calendar indicates my 44th year in amateur radio, I'll be just 58.

I went through three months of initial instruction and went through additional classes between tours. I did get a pass on the HF radio propagation and electronics theory portion of the courses since that part of the class was from the Heathkit General Class amateur radio licensing course.

Funny you mention that, Len. I've done that too. It isn't amateur radio. Broadcasting is a one-way medium. You can talk to Don Imus, but he isn't listening.

No, Len, that isn't what I call "operating a radio", though it certainly can be considered such. I operate using a variety of modes.

That isn't a sentence. :-)

Why, I do use it quite often. It isn't my sole mode of operation.

Feel free to point to any statement I've made which indicates that Morse Code is the only mode available to radio amateurs. I made an accurate statement indicating that CW is heavily used by radio amateurs in both HF operation and in VHF/UHF weak signal work. You saw my statement as me shoving my preferences down your throat. Your response was very, very odd.

I wrote no such thing. You've made yet another factual error.

My statement on the use of CW was accurate. It included nothing about who should do what and where. That's yet another factual error on your part.

> Every time you shout "factual error" you make your own FACTUAL

You've just made another factual error, Len. I'll let you slide on the part where you think I'm shouting. I'm typing and only use "all caps" when doing a parody of you.

I don't need to ask permission to make a judgment, Len. We all make judgments each day.

I've been back in the U.S. for nearly seven years. In that time, I've not sought an ARRL elected position.

That's right!

An OFFICER? The membership doesn't elect OFFICERS, Len. It elects Division Directors, Vice Directors and Section Managers. OFFICERS are selected by the BoD.

> Have you considered joining the Civil Air Patrol?

No, Len and I've not considered joining Moose Lodge either.

I don't fly a plane, Len.

Apparently there isn't any in the Moose Lodge either.

If you need a brick, you can buy one through the ARRL. You could even get one with your spanking new callsign and create your own memorial.

I don't know your car make, color or year, Rog. It's one of those little things which doesn't strike me as very important. Perhaps if you actually engage in conversation on one of the local repeaters, I'll oblige you and write something down. If you revert to you malicious QRMing, you can be assured that I'll do more than write it down.

I already did. What does the cross symbolize to you, Rog? Does it have anything to do with having sex with animals?

Sure it was, Len.You just took over 50 years to achieve that goal.

That's simply not true, Len. Your own words prove that you did desire and long for the status of being a radio amateur. You just weren't willing to do the work to become one until a few weeks ago.

Your participation consisted of sending a lot of wordy comments and reply comments to FCC and posting lots of words here. That's your right, of course, but all it probably did was slow down the process.

Yes, you are, Len. You're a newcomer to amateur radio. A tyro, beginner, newbie, novice, wet-behind-the-ears, tenderfoot, newcomer to Amateur Radio.

Not that there's anything wrong with that.

Lots of people have, Len. There's cb, baby monitors, cordless and cell phones, FRS, GMRS....the list goes on and on.

So has anyone who calls in to Rush Limbaugh or Howard Stern, Len.

Broadcasting is one-way radio. That says a lot about you, Len. You like broadcasting but you don't like to listen.

Appliance operation, all of it. Push the button and talk, release the button and listen. Maybe you had to select a channel and learn some jargon.

Nobody says you have to or even should, Len.

It's one way of operating. It's one of many things I have done in amateur radio and you have not. It's one of many things I can do and you cannot.

So what?

Yes, it is. Becoming a radio amateur is just one way to learn "radio".
It's a good way but not the only way.

You're a newcomer to amateur radio.

When did K8MN or I "pound on the table, get red

Not true, Len.

You have almost no real experience in amateur radio, and you resent those of us who do.

Nobody is doing that but you, Len. You tried to shove your preferences on real estate zoning down other people's throats some years back. You also tried to shove your preferences on amateur radio testing and age requirements for an amateur licensing down other people's throats.

K8MN is more of an authority on amateur radio knowledge. You are a newcomer to amateur radio.

Not that there's anything wrong with that.

If he doesn't have the authority to judge others, Len,

Why should I tell you? You made the claim. You tell Mark that he is a Failed writer? Hmmmmm. There doesn't seem to be anything on which to base your claim. I'm sure that Lackland AFB would be considered rear echelon though. We can't all be in the midst of things all the time. What've you done, Roger? I don't mean right now; I mean ever.

Oh, by Odin, would that it be true that Mark so displeased the gods that

This group can almost get back to normal and, who knows? We might even be able to squeeze in a topic or two pertaining to Ham Radio without being told we are on topic, off topic, or that we are attacking someone's personal

Enjoy the respite while it lasts, for you can rest assured that "he" will

By the way. I DID listen to 28.470 just to see if anybody would attempt to get a round table going. As I said, Ten Meters is rather dead all across the band, so even if a few Techs tried, it is likely they met with dead air. I tried three seperate antennas, one of which is vertically polarized (a ground mount Butternut) and I heard nil on all.

I guess they gave a party and nobody came.

I guess I'll busy myself with cleaning my AR-15. I used to have a chamber brush around here somewhere...gotta find that. I'm also going to take a couple of the 30 rnd magazines apart (Colt) and clean the springs and wipe the gunk out of them. I've got a few of those new followers to install, too.

Geesh. If Hillary could only see me now! She'd probably force me to grind the bayonet lug off and confiscate my "more than ten" round magazines.

My. What a peaceful group this has turned out to be with the absence of Mark.
This quietude is so nice that I hesitate to post more than once an hour for trepidation that Mark will, like a Ghost Who Won't Go Away, return to haunt us yet again.

I, for one, enjoy his absence. If he stays away, and I doubt he will, we can discuss radio issues uninterrupted...at least for the time being.

This is like a radio honeymoon! Mark is gone. Let's celebrate!!!

Roger has yet to prove that he was, as claimed, in the Air Force.

And of course there is the house he resides in...he did not purchase it..he inherited it.
Were it not for his step-mom, Roger would be living under a bridge with his fellow Trolls and groveling for food scraps from the local dumpsters.
He has moved up, however. He now resides in a semi-liveable hovel with alleged indoor plumbing and an inflatabile Girl Friend who guards his door against "Knock Knock" visitors who come by at unnanounced hours. No more dumpster diving for our Roger. He can now hold his head high..albiet with a half-eaten head of lettuce in his jaw...but he came by it honestly.

Roger should strive to be more like Mark.

I saw his web page. He's not one of the nuts that claims to have been in Vietnam and at Woodstock simultaneously.

I've already got one; don't need another. For all I care they can be buried with them. Hopefully it's not one of those $400 jewels and the

What are you using for an antenna, a cantenna?

Will you ever upgrade from your training wheel license?

Perhaps while they're at it they can run a find/grep script to look for all occurances of the phrase kb9rqz (or, better, write some fuzzy logic programs) and automatically execute an rm on any file containing a reference therein.

From Oki. :-)

Back in '55 there was a regular "soap opera" on the Okinawa SSB radio circuit over the second voice channel. Between 1 AM and 2 PM local (Japan and Oki) time, a Major in Tokyo would call up his Captain nurse girlfriend in Okinawa and generally babble all about how she ought to marry him when he got rid of his current wife. Not bad technique he had but I have no idea what happened afterwards. That lasted for about a month and I doubt the Major (who must have had some comms authority) was aware that 20 to 30 guys were listening in at various places on the circuit. Made the midnight shift a bit entertaining, dull as it normally was locally. :-)

Well, some of those keys have beautiful mechanical and plating workmanship. Saw one at the local HRO outlet in Burbank, CA, the other day...imported from Sweden! :-) I got a kick out of that "imported" remark...being of Swedish descent and Burbank having more-than-average Scandinavians who once worked at Lockheed Aircraft. So nicely made that I doubt the morse code on it had any Swedish accent. :-)

Where "noe" existed?

I wasn't compelled at all, UnWiseman. I did it because it needed doing. You became accustomed to the idea that you could get away with doing just about anything while hiding. You posted property tax information on my place. I photographed your Taj MaRog and posted a link to your property tax information. I never had a courier job, Rog. Diplomatic Couriers are based only in Washington and a few large, select overseas posts. They make regular rounds, are always met and escorted and always fly first class.

I'm no longer working.

To sum up:

There's no free tower.
Len was in Japan
I was not a messenger boy.
I was not a courier.

No, Roger, I didn't. You've repeatedly brought it up in a very graphic way. You've done the same with homosexual practices and with sex between parents and children. How did you end up being so very defective?

The term is "Megalomaniac" but you still used it incorrectly, Rog. If you use "delusional" you'd have to use "megalomaniacal" Be that as it may, I submit that in your deranged state, you are incapable of judging whether another is impaired. In other words, it'll take a trip to Terra Alta for repairs before you can make a sound judgment.

There's no one from Cameron, West Virginia filling usenet with tales of sex between humans and animals, fathers and sons, fathers and daughters, or mothers and sons. Glen Dale seems to have a problem over on Glen Haven.

Could you phrase your comment in the form of a sentence?
Where does one go to research such a thing, UnWiseman. It doesn't appear in the local paper. You seem to be the expert on such things.
How do you find out?

Maybe that's why you chose to live there.

I hadn't heard of it until you mentioned it. I'll concede that you're Actually, Dave, from what I understand Mr. Wiseman HAS authored a recent work or two. Unfortunately his "work" takes the form of anonymous, filth filled letters he sends to those who displease him.

Insofar as his spelling expertise is concerned...well, 'nuff said. "Defgenerate" Well, it's Roger's word..."Faity" He meant to say Fairy, but you know Roger."Ghet" Get a load of Curtain Boy!"Distribiution" Roger likes using phonics."Biotch" He meant Bitch, but his phonics took over again."Methjadone" A West Virginia substitute for Heroin."Sumbliminal" One of Roger's favorites."Recepticle" Either of Roger's moist cavaties."Cociane" A West Virginia drug of choice?"Tiome" Roger meant to say Time...but his fingers were numb."Beraking" No definition. Could he 'beraking' the leaves?"Amny" He meant 'any',"Nlay" A town in Maylaysia?"Al;ong" Bushman word for penis."Becasu" Well, becasu Roger is not the brightest bulb on the tree."Seperation" Why? Oh, please. Don't resurrect the dufus's comments. He's been gone for 36 hours now and it has been a welcome respite indeed.
I, for one, am hoping that he lost his ISP and secondly, hope that he will never return.

Unfortunately, like colon cancer, he will probably return.

This "an_old_fiend" <m...@morgan.com> character thinks that someone actually believes he is Mark. No one is that dumb, clearly it is a forgery. I don't know why the group can't stop trying to inflame the situation. "an_old_fiend", perhaps you can start some posts that are related to ham radio. The sooner we start posting on topic discussions the sooner the intent and purpose of this NG can be realized.

Based on the raw data we are losing 22 amateurs per day, 8030 per year, and will lose 200,750 in the next 25 years. Looks like proof that it is a dying hobby, but only time will tell when, at what point will the FCC eliminate the amateur radio service, and on what basis, number of hams? or bowing down to spectral resource pressures?

It does not necessarily mean amateur radio is dying. Please consider the probability that the service has more hams than it should have since in the 90's many people pushed the idea to non-hams that 2m would be the way for families to stay in touch as they operated around town. Now that usage is accomplished by cell phones. If they did not develop an interest in other aspects of amateur radio, they will let their licenses lapse. As these disappear, I expect to see a stabilization in the numbers. As it stands right now, the US has twice as many hams per thousand people as most of the rest of the world. The "cell phone hams" will pretty much be shaken out in a few years and the decline may stop at that time. I would expect our numbers to stabilize at about half what they are now.

Now this does not excuse us from recruiting. We need to do so anyway. However, we have to be savvy about it and recruit people who are likely to stay because they are apt to enjoy this activity for its own sake and not as a substitute for some other service.

Dee, all good points. I guess in a nut shell we have some ability to influence the future of ham radio and number of licensed individuals, but on the other hand I think there will continue to be influences out of our control making it harder to recruit and retain people in the ARS. With continued pressure from the internet, easier to utilize/implement technologies, HOA rules, and todays lifestyle not leaving nearly as much free time as in the past, I don't see as favorable attraction to the ARS that we have seen in the past. IMO, in the past Broadcast TV and Radio was king and was the dominate technology that touched so many. When you had an amateur radio station at your home, you could generate interest in the service, but now radio seems to be viewed as old technology when compared to Satellite TV/Radio, cell phones, the internet, and video games. In today's world it is harder to get kids or young adults interested without being viewed as some type of nostalgia buff grasping at some old outdated technology.

I simply do not see it happening. Radio simply isn't "sexy" compared to a lot of other readily-available technology items these days.

Unlike Dee, I suspect the rate of decline in the ARS will be fairly consistent while the "honey-do" hams are weeded out. Once that happens, I still believe the ARS will see a continued decline, simply at a lower rate. However, the decline will be there.

At some point, far, far in the future, the numbers may stabilize, but I think they'll be a shadow of their current selves.

Nope. In the 15 years I've been licensed -- and the 25 years I've been "around" ham radio and ham radio operators, I've never encountered an "attitude" other than a common interest in radio. -- just as my interest in radio started when I dug out a Zenith TransOceanic out of my parent's basement many, many years ago and used it to listen to various shortwave broadcasts.

Ham radio is like all walks of life. Just as there are a myriad of people in ham radio, there are a myriad of attitudes. There are 650,000+ opinions in ham radio, just like there are 650,000+ assholes.

Should I base my belief on what ham radio is 'all about' on the postings of Mark Morgan? Or Roger Wiseman?

The answer is no. Instead, I think of those as 'statistical outliers' and discard them as flukes.

Lloyd Davies was not announcing any obituary of amateur radio.

Newcomers have almost kept the number of amateur radio licensees at roughly the same level as the expirees losses. The actual growth in licensee numbers is very slightly negative.

Based on www.hamdata.com numbers from 31 Mar 07, representing the FCC database information of that date, there were a total of 721,996 licenses issued of all classes and clubs. Again from hamdata, the total number of licenses from two years ago was 733,033. That difference is 11,037 and represents a growth of approximately -0.76 percent.

The peak license numbers occured on 2 Jul 03 with 737,938 total licenses of all classes and clubs.

In truth, that is one "reason" not heard out here.

In 2004 the U.S. Census Bureau stated that there were 100 million cellular telephone subscriptions in the United States. That is an average of about 1 in 3 Americans. That isn't a fad or whim but a MAJOR MAJOR change in the way America communicates.

>If they did not develop an interest in other >aspects of amateur radio, they will let their licenses lapse. As these >disappear, I expect to see a stabilization in the numbers.

A negative growth of ~0.7% per year for over 3 1/2 years can't be called "stabilization." Since the peak of 2 Jul 03, some 15,942 licensees have dropped out for a -2.2% growth in about 3 3/4 years.

>As it stands
>right now, the US has twice as many hams per thousand people as most of the >rest of the world.

Is that a negative or a positive thing?

I was unaware that there "should" be some sort of cap on how many radio amateur licensees there should be... :-(

>Now this does not excuse us from recruiting. We need to do so anyway.

Not if you want the USA to "be like the rest of the world."

>However, we have to be savvy about it and recruit people who are likely to >stay because they are apt to enjoy this activity for its own sake and not as >a substitute for some other service.

Most of the USA already had cellular telephone service in 1991 when the no-code-test Technician class was created. The no-code-test Technician class has been the overwhelming GROWTH factor in keeping the total number of licensees "stable" (your definition of that word). Had that not happened the total number of licensees would, quite probably, have DROPPED.

The no-code-test Technician class has had continued growth for 16 years and, as of 31 Mar 07, the 307,197 Technician class licensees represent 42.5% of the total US amateur radio licensees. That is larger than the 148,063 licensees in General class, the second most numerous class, with 20.5% of the total licensees.

Now, as far as I know, ALL those licensed radio amateurs took their tests the same way that all other licensees took theirs...FOR THE SAKE OF AMATEUR RADIO. Not for "using 2m like a cell phone" or badgering a spouse to get one so they can brag to others that he/she "is also licensed" or some other specious notion. If some have dropped out, they MAY have dropped out due to unacceptance by some crotchety olde-tymers needing someone to demean or some form of clique of olde-tymers ignoring newcomers. There are NO records kept on the WHY of dropping out, save for the SK announcements which have the obvious reasons. Speculating on dropping out from an original "cell phone substitute" sounds specious as a reason. That does NOT explain why the HF-oriented amateurs are dropping out. See the QRZ website "expired" and "soon to expire" free service listings and those license classes.

I would say that US amateur radio has been UNIQUE for its own sake for roughly a half century...to have unique personal radio contact with other amateurs who share the same interest. If you can't work on that premise as a reason for getting newcomers to join...or KEEPING them past their first renewal time...then there WILL be a continuing drop in numbers. Cellular telephones have NOTHING to do with "keeping" members. Neither do "reasons" of attraction or keeping licensees for some kind of traditional rites practiced by cliques of special-interest amateurs wanting to preserve Their "way of ham life" and wishing to be both Judge and Jury on Who Should Enter Amateur Radio.

Cordially, Len AF6AY

While it is impossible to pin down with numbers, many of the people I saw attending the various sessions that I went to when I was getting licensed (1992) were entire families looking to get on the 2m band for family communications. Yes cellular phones were available but they were expensive and not common. I knew one person with a cell phone at the time.

There were a lot of elements affecting the situation and we can never know for sure which elements had the most effect. For example, although initiated a few years earlier, the VE exam system had finally "hit its stride" so to speak and exams were readily available so many people who had wanted to be hams were able to get to exam sessions. My OM fell into that category. The particular tests required were not an issue. He actually started as a coded Tech as did I.

Well I know one case where the husband badgered the wife to "let's do this together". That is my own. And I knew several people in the club that we joined who explicitly stated that they got their licenses just to talk around town with their spouse. Unfortunately, since the data on reasons was not and is not collected, we will never know how many got their licenses for this reason.

In some cases, people die and relatives don't notify the FCC. In other cases, the person has gone into a nursing home and will not be following up in their renewals. In some cases, people have gotten busy with other things temporarily and forgotton about it and inadvertantly let it lapse. I've had some come into exam sessions who fell into this category. We can never know all the reasons that people let licenses lapse.

I agree with this paragraph. I've been saying for years that we must seek out those who may potentially have this type of interest or we will someday have a problem. We need the people who are interested in the uniqueness of ham radio.

> Cellular telephones have > NOTHING to do with "keeping" members.

Those who used it for the cell phone substitute may very well have gone inactive when cell phones became relatively cheap. We will never know. No one has ever done the surveys and research to quantify this. All we have is anecdotal evidence and that is not all that reliable.

I see I've inadvertantly cut the paragraph and reply about the percent of US licensees as compared to other parts of the world. It is neither a bad thing or a good thing nor is there a cap on the number of amateurs. However it may be indicative of what the size of the potential "market" is. It may indicate that we "oversaturated" our market. We've all seen examples where people acquire something that is the latest "in" item later to drop it and the market shrink drastically after the heyday of its popularity.

Interesting! Then look around. The boy scouts aren't even what they used to be; pressures from gay proponents were able to achieve that, sorry thing ...

Even interest in the masons (moose lodge, etc.) has died. That isn't because boys and girls (and grown ones at that!) have lost interest and tire of playing "secret clubs." It is because the exclusive rich dominate the organizations and are VERY picky. (why are the rich so stupid, self-centered and repugnant?--that is the question :-( )

No one wants to be a republican anymore--the republicans just aren't what they used to be (nor are they what they claim to be today!)

And, exactly the above applies to the democrats. Now you only have one party--the criminal greedy with designs on population control. (or, republicrats and democans)

The world has changed and control freaks are in control. To borrow a term from the 1960's, "Time to tune in, turn on and drop out!"

My father finally became registered as independent--I am registered as "politically non-existent!" I'd be slow to join the Catholic Church--well, if I wasn't already a member 8-)

No, the people of ANY organization are the organization, if something is wrong with the organization ... well, you know the rest of the story ...

Well, that is what Brian Burke and myself have been saying for years about "the actuarial tables." It WILL catch up to all of us sooner or later the Boomers' shut-down will drop the number of US radio amateurs - to what I would guess is at least down to 3/4 of today and within a 10 to 15 year period. When a large group goes down it is VERY noticeable.

What IS needed is something NEW to interest the HF bunch besides competition in contests and the 1-minute
"making of fast friends for life" by the thousands. [sort of like the wonderful Hollywood expression "a close personal friend"...:-)]

VHF and UHF are already beginning a transition with the introductions of JARL's "digital" mode and the availability of the Big3's already-built radios. Icom has digital repeater equipment for sale that is compatible and at least three repeaters in this area on VHF are now operational for that.
There are lots of local VHF, low-UHF clubs in this area whose interests are centered around repeaters.

No, the trend is NOT to some kind of Internet clone type of activity and no fantastic-rate digital throughput. WiFi and the Internet can handle that quite well. What will happen, I think, is an amateur radio interest kind of new mode activity. The "market" of the existing VHF-UHF users will start driving the FCC to changing regulations to allow these new modes. It will be that old terror CHANGE which will do the trick and all the olde-tymers stuck in their 1950s-era technology ideas will bid adieu to both
The Way Things Are Done and of this life, sad to say.

Like how many times can we have "construction" articles for two- and three-transistor regenerative HF receivers and two-transistor HF "transmitters" even if built tiny in used food containers? Naturally they had to operate CW and that useage will drop along with the Boomers.

Meanwhile, I'll be having FUN from 160m to 2m, maybe later to 220 and 420, doing what I like to do, not what I'm TOLD (by olde-tymers) what to do! :-)

I've not seen where anyone has dropped cell phone use because they think it is a fad. If anything, its use has increased in the last decade remarkably.

Neither do I see any "market drop" for amateur radio equipment since the Big3 and lesser companies continue to introduce new amateur radio models with newer features like DSP applied to many functions, both receiving and transmitting. (just one example)

What happened "in the market" about 15 years ago was a lessening expenditure for advertising in the amateur radio market. The Big3 make a lot of radio equipment for private industry and government worldwide and that started to grow at that time. Since the amateur radio market in the USA was relatively "saturated" (not to a full degree, just not that eager to buy new stuff), the business side of the corporate houses of the Big3 decided to cut back on ham advertising. That affected the independent periodical publishers with HR the first to go, followed by CQ's bad decision to cut CQ VHF for a time, then the quitting of 73.
The Big3 were still there, still designing, still producing,
but not spending so much on ham equipment advertising.
[what you see is not necessarily what really happens]

The more amateur radio licensees, the better chance for the big ham radio makers advertising more. With that is more income for ads in periodicals (even QST) and greater profit for those publishers which mean better articles to get more interest in amateur radio. Positive feedback and no sign of oscillation.

Over the years I've seen a decline in virtually all "club" related activities. I, myself, have "cut back" on club activities -- I no longer attend ham radio club meetings (although, that may change in another 2 months) -- simply because the demands of life dictate that I have less leisure time to engage in such pursuits, much the same way the arrival of my 3rd child dictated I spend less time on ham radio 6 years ago.

I wasn't aware the Masons were a picky bunch. I know they have a set of "morality" rules that transcend religious boundaries which they expect their members to adhere to. I didn't think there was a minimum income limit on becoming a member. I heard they put prospective members thru a fairly rigorous vetting process.

If interest in groups like the Masons is declining, I suspect it is more due to the way society is redefining itself. A benefit of being a Mason was you were a member of a fraternity, and always had a group of people to turn to, no matter where you were, for assistance. You could walk into a Mason's hall 1/2 a world away, and while you might not understand the language spoken by the occupants, you would still feel at home.

Today, the world has "shrunk". Travel to Europe or Asia isn't the ordeal it was 30 years ago. Stranded in the middle of Montana? Not really, as long as you're in range of a cell tower... or, if not, have your trust satellite phone with you.

What I suspect you may see, if in fact the "rich" (as you claim) inhabit these types of organizations, is simply the fact the "rich" have more leisure time, and thus, can participate in these activities, moreso than the poor SOB who has to bust his hump 12 hour a day.

It has often been said that ham radio is a old affluent white man's hobby. There is some truth to that claim. Why? Historically, older men and more affluent men are more established (which means the greater potential for leisure time), and more likely to own property (for antenna farms). As social demographics change I suspect likewise we will see a shift in amateur radio.

No... if there are any "attitudes" in ham radio, it is because the people who think such an "attitude" exists are actively looking for one, and will find one, regardless of whether or not one actually exists or not. Much the same way people who want to see UFOs often end up witnessing one.

Woger look up Mystig though the SCA most members of that gruop are college students they move on to other gruop within a few years That was one of the reason s I stop assiocating with Mystig it was too unstable where you intertested on that score you might fit right in

Make up your mind, Rog. Do you want to talk about whether I'm Use two "T's" and a comma, Rog. Did you post the photo in a binaries group? Did you add anything to the photo? Did you like it when link to the photos of your house were posted here? Did you note that nothing was added? Did you note that the photos themselves were not actually posted here?

>> If you spent more than I did, UnWiseman, you were taken to the cleaners.

For a couple of plastic insulators, a hunk of wire, two loading coils and a center insulator? Those loading coils look to be wound on white PVC pipe. One could buy the insulators and center insulator for no more than $20. A piece of PVC pipe could be had for a couple of bucks. The wire might cost three times what it used to--lets say $25. You might have to spend eight or ten bucks on the enameled wire for the loading coils. The total materials would come to something on the order of $55-$60 if you have nothing lying about.

> And it does what it says it does > 160-10 meters....great VSWR, great performance.

The DXCC model doesn't cover 160m, Rog. It covers 80-10m and skips the WARC bands. On 80m, it is 2/3 full size. That'd result in quite narrow 2:1 SWR points. Great performance?

> But you probabaly scavenged and got all old cast offs.

"Probabably"? I found a great place to buy cheap wire, Rog. Forgive me if I don't tell you where it is.

Sorry, UnWiseman. In this case, mine really is bigger than yours.

I did. You aren't mentioned by call or name. Did you know the fellow

Dayton. He's W8AD. We belonged to the same DX club. I wouldn't even tell him that I thought the DX-CC is a great antenna.

shortened antenna with loading coils.

Sure, it's a multiband antenna. Nothing but the best for AB8MQ.

For DX work on 80 and 40m, it is. Yours isn't up 45-50 feet. It's more like 35 feet.

That doesn't make sense. Model a dipole at 45 feet and model an inverted vee at 45 feet. Tell me which has the greater field strength.

Highly over-rated. I first got ON radio in 1952 and didn't have any emotional highs about that. I first got drunk in 1951 and didn't have such a good time right afterwards. I met my current wife in Middle School (we called it "Junior High" then) around 1948 and thought a good deal about it...no alcohol involved.

foolish that makes you look.

You have never outsmarted anybody, Stupid. When your numerous factual errors you revert to whining mode and make all kinds of excuses for your screw ups and try to blame the person that points them out.

Similarly, you aren't very good at flaming. Or knowing what the fuck you are talking about. Your posts continually prove that.
Sort of like how you "claimed" Layla was about Leila Heil instead of Patty Boyd Harrison.
And there is evidence to the contrary (P.S. It's common knowledge too,

We know, Davey-boy. You've used it first when you posted under your Wrong again, Davey-boy. But you continually get the facts wrong. Roger

Why don't you post under your real name, Davey k8mn?

Ah, but I DID have those experiences, proven by several publicly-accessible references and documented licenses. :-)

Tsk, that seems to piss off some "club call" collectors and civilian government service "careerists." :-)

Does having been granted a Commercial radiotelephone operator license 51 years ago NOT count? Of course it "doesn't count" sinc AMATEUR RADIO is the ONLY WAY
one can "get experience" according to the snipers and general cat-callers.

Practice safe and defensive driving, Sir Heil.

I've enjoyed 54 years in MANY different radio services...and 51 years of those NOT paid for directly the US government.

I don't recall that U.S. government regulations REQUIRE all that CONTACT collection. [looking through Title 47
again...] Nope, NOTHING in the regulations about that...

So, nearly a quarter million [transitory] CONTACTS via amateur radio. What does that prove? The capability of making lots of [transitory] contacts? Yes, but doing so many is little more than accumulating some self-logged contacts that take a relatively long time to ascertain.
There are collectors who have amassed great quantities of pennies, string, and other items.

I was, of course, speaking about broadband access. Lloyd may well have

Why, thank you! I never try to "flame," because alt.flame style posts

As to not knowing what I'm talking about, who was it that was telling

What about the low SWR and great performance the antenna provides on 160-10 meters? Why would you have to use a tuner? Do you think that's efficient? Do you believe that a short, horizontal antenna at 35 feet is a good performer on 160m?

What does negative SWR have to do with the above statements? Why are you changing the subject?
Let's see:
So you are saying the ARES website you found which is for an Alabama
ARES organizations is the one for the ARES organization in West Virginia?

> I was, of course, speaking

You were speaking out of your ass, spouting unimportant and non-relevant "facts" that you can't back up.

> Indeed he has.

Indeed, you are a liar who doesn't know what the fuck he is blathering about.

> Why, thank you! I never try to "flame,"

Naturally, you can't even compose a factual sentence, either.
But tell us why you support Kevin Alfred Strom the jailed pedophile.

> As to not knowing what I'm talking about,

Who was it that claimed the AL ARES website was the one for an WV ARES organization and when called on your error, your response was "made you look"? Hint: you.

> : Sort of like how you "claimed" Layla was about Leila Heil instead of
> : Patty Boyd Harrison.
> You found that to be irritating, didn't you?

No, your insistence on saying what you claimed was not in error was mildly amusing. And you continue to do so, when it is easily looked up on the internet. That aside, it's common knowledge what the song

"Layla" was written about. That makes you look extremely stupid.

> You also hated it when I referred to Dave as "Ambassador Heil" in my posts.

Again, you hold on to your stupidity like a crack whore (sort of like your mommy) holds onto her crack pipe.
It's funny how you suck up to yourself with your sockpuppets.
Hint: Davey was no "Ambassador" he was with the State Dept. support staff. Big difference.

> Guess why I did those things?

And again, you posted no evidence of what you said was factual in any way.

> You found that to be irritating, didn't you?

Not at all. Exposing your inaccuracies is quite amusing and quite easy. It's quite humorous when you insist on looking like a fool.
Just ask anybody in alt.2600.

That's incorrect, Rog. You claim that a great many people are involved

That's all I expect from the Robust Oberst. :-)

But then, we are speaking of "Mister DeeEcks" of Department of State (Retired)...who BECAME DX Out Of Africa and Finland under State's generous "A DX of One" program to help hams worldwide get a rare one. Hard to beat that...and he got PAID to do it!

Me, I just did (like you did) what I was told to do and also be proficient at "destroying the enemy" in my military service.
That I lucked out on my military assignment wasn't any doing of mine. But, I DID take advantage of learning, observing all that went on, asking questions to study more...and making friends with a lot of good people, both military and civilian.

I dunno why Mister DeeEcks thinks I should "get on 75m" when there is already an established net on 20m of ex-RCA employees who get together every morning. I worked with some of them in real life (as opposed to the imaginary life spent staring at front panels while gabbing with relative strangers). :-)

We really don't know how long he was there. [Robesin syndrome?]

According to a couple websites, he was a rock musician - guitarist for ten years with several bands. Those aren't "ham bands." :-)
That occupied some of the 22 years between first being licensed (1963) and being sent to the Finland Embassy (1985). He got his Vanity call of K8MN in 1977 and there's 8 years between that and his first Helsinki posting.

I still don't understand this NECESSITY of "logging thousands of contacts"...just to log thousands of contacts?

What does one DO with all those logs? I would suggest just recycling those logs to save real logs from being turned into paper pulp to "archive" ham logs. Putting it all into CD R/W discs for archival would require using Chinese-manufacture CD blanks whose plastic is made from non-renewable petroleum.

My IC-746Pro is made in Japan. The companion SP-23 filter-speaker is made in China. I haven't looked to see where the PS-125 (free) 12 VDC supply is made. My MFJ dry dummy load is made in Starkville,
MS. My Heil Sound ProSetPlus is made (somewhat) in a suburb of Chicago, IL. The vertical antenna I will probably get will be made in Issaquah, WA, (on the Puget Sound). I dunno WHERE the wire I am using for a temporary HF antenna was made. That is matched by an LDG AT-100Pro Autotuner (powered by the IC-746Pro). The Diamond discone I'm using for 10m through 23cm was made in Japan (very well made at that) and it is held up by some thin-wall conduit pipe made in the USA with a Cable Experts RG-8 coax cable bringing it into the house office (I didn't check where the coax or UHF connector fitting assembly happened...didn't know that was so IMPORTANT!).

No sweat...whatever I have, Davey Heil will PUT IT DOWN! :-)
He always does...

Careful, JS, you are speaking to Mister DeeEcks, formerly from

He WAS DX!

Like that is the "only" function a US amateur "must" have...
"working DX on HF with CW." :-)

I've got to stay away from those rainbows...all those Little

We as the latest generation have nothing to apologise for as most of us have nothing to do with slavery.

It would also be wrong to apologise for something or ancestors at the time thought was legally and morally correct.

WELL THE SOUTH SIDE OF GLEN DALE IS THE FAGGOT SIDE OF TOWN
AND IF YOU GO DOWN THERE YOU BEST BEWARE OF A PUNK NAMED WOGER WISEMAN

NOW WOGER IS A FAGGOT STAND ABOUT 5 FOOT FOUR
ALL THE DOWNTOWN JOHNS CALL HIM LOOSE SPHINCTER LOVER
HIS MOTHER CALL HIM 'HOE

CHORUS AND IT'S BAD BAD WOGER WISEMAN
THE BADDEST PUNK IN THE WHOLE CELL BLOCK
BADDER THAN RICHARD SIMMONS AND FATTER THAN NAT KING COLE

NOW WOGER HE'S A PUSSY
AND HE LIKES HIS PURPLE CLOTHES
HE LIKES TO WEAR HIS FISHNET HOSE, UNDER EVERYONE'S NOSE
HE GOT CUSTOM PINK PANTIES
HE GOT A FRENCH TICKLE TOO
HE GOT A 32 INCH DILDO IN HIS POCKET FOR FUN
A VIBRATOR IN HIS SHOE

(REPEAT CHORUS)

NOW FRIDAY 'BOUT A WEEK AGO
WOGER SUCKIN' DICK
AND AT THE END OF THE YARD
SAT A BROTHER NAMED BINKIE
AND OO THAT GUY LOOKED NICE
WELL HE CAST HIS EYES UPON HIM AND THE TROUBLE SOON BEGAN
CAUSE WOGER LEARNED A LESSON
BOUT MESSIN' WITH A PUNK OF A JEALOUS BITCH

WELL THE PUNKS TOOK TO BITCH SLAPPIN' AND WHEN THEY PULLED THEM FROM THE BED
ROGER'S LARD ASS LOOKED LIKE A BLOODY PUZZLE WITH AN EXTRA HOLE!

No, the subject was me "outsmarting" someone, and I was recalling your absolutely awful knowledge of SWR and the little discussion we had about it when I corrected your many factual errors, as well as an inapplicable equation you tried to use. It seems to me that I "outsmarted" you that time.

I have no idea how Pat Boone dresses. That information doesn't seem

I didn't bring up Pat Boone. I don't have much interest in Pat Boone.

No, that isn't the case. I do have a fascination as to how you became

Those shoes were "somthing" out of the mid-90's. They weren't suede.

Wow! is all I can say about the Connex 4600 Turbo with the Super WackPack! I have 8 gauge copper strand power supply cables, grounded cab and antenna on my International Eagle tractor. My Monkeymade 9 coil antenna has a SWR of 1.3 (still trying to lower readings)... WOW!!! Guys are scared of this radio!!! I have never before had the pleasure of operating a better mobile radio!!! Many Thanks Guys.

Sincerely,

In this world as it is today it it rare and very hard to find a company who;

1.. Stands behind their workmanship and products.
2.. Gives a true lasting guarantee.
3.. Remains professional in business ethic and assistance to customers.
My hat is off to you, please know that the radio and the work performed is excellent. I will be reccomending you to everyone.

Thanks,

You guys are great!! I took your advice and purchased a Gen Lee super wackpacked w/super rec. All I can say is Wow! I am very impressed. This radio is ass kickin! I hooked it up in my big KW the Sunday after Thanksgiving and headed out from TX to MO, all along the way I was getting big time respect from all those big radios in those big chicken trucks. Those same guys wouldn't even give me a come back before. Now they want to know what I've got and where I got it. I told them all Radio Active Radios! You guy's really deliver on what you promise. I have never had a radio this cool. I didn't want to be the loudest or biggest radio around but I was tired of getting walked on and ignored. That doesn't happen any more thanks to you! I swear I had to be careful not to talk to much 'cause I was making some other drivers mad. But, I have to admit though there is something so cool about some crybaby saying he can't hear anything but that "BIG RADIO" he was talkin' about me! I love it! I promise I won't abuse the airways. But I am having fun and hell it's not that big of a radio anyway but it's big enough for me. (For now) ;~) maybe I'll put a "Dave Made" with the Gen Lee. Hmm. Should I lock down the air for miles of interstate around me? Nah. Not yet.

Purchased a General Washington (aka General Lee) superwackpacked. WOW!!!!
My first buddy that I talked to remark was - quote: " I haven't had my cherry popped like that in a long time " Now thats what I call a radio.
Thank you! Nothing but loud and proud!!
Thanks!
Ron aka "Reaper"

Recently purchased a connex 4600 turbo superwackpack this radio receives better than any radio I have ever owned, and talk this is unreal. got it wired the way you told me to and now it really does the job, couldn't be happier. Will never buy a radio from anyone else. When people ask me who to get a radio from it will always be radioactive radios. THANKS a lot Tom-MOUNTAIN MAN DENVER, CO.

My new Galaxy 99V arrived last night by USPS, and after reading all the literature, I couldn't wait to install in my big truck.Well, I hooked it up this morning, did the usual connectivity, grounding, and SWR checks (1.1:1), and fired that bad boy up. In just talking to another trucker beside me, a reply came on the air from about 10 miles away, asking "where's that Big Radio ?". And I've been hearing it all day long, all day strong. Excellent Transmit, and Receive! The "Super Whack Pack" was worth every penny. My only dealer for Radio Equipment is going to be RADIOACTIVE RADIOS, from now on!
Thanks guys...you really 'are' Super Techs!!!
JohnnyZee

Michael,

What can I say? WOW! This Galaxy 99V rocks! I asked for audio checks, not radio checks and everyone who came back replied loud and crisp and clean. I love this thing. I can tell others get really jealous when they hear it. AWESOME!!! Thanks

Wesley(sorrydogg)

RadioActiveRadios,

I've been on the air for over 24 years. I had called around for about 4 months to everyone I could think of about buying this RCI 2995DX base station. I nearly did not buy it from you. One of my friends bought a 2995DX from (sensored) on the internet. The places price was maybe $200 less. I did not buy mine from them only cause cash was a issue at the time, and I could not afford it. Let me tell you I'm glad I could not of afford it. He's 2995dx sounds weak, and he's ticked off. The place wont help him now. every time he keys up with the thing, I now know why it was cheaper. I'm on a fixed income, and appreciate not getting ripped off. Yup it cost me a arm and a leg, but its well worth it. My 2995 is great, I've made contact to over 7 states the first day skip rolled in. Alls I get it "loud/proud"
"sounding good" "top shelf", and it means a ton. Every guy I know you have treated right, that's hard to find nowadays.

Customer for life,

Alan

Well finally have my new radio hooked up and properly tuned with a great antenna. Of course its the Wilson 1000, and you guys have done a wonderful job on this radio, it outperforms most of my friends radios. I just want to thank you for such honest information and such wonderful equipment. your right though, other techs don't know what they are talking about and by the way, can't get over how good my receive is and how quiet it is also. i will be shopping again for more equipment.

Thanks, Don

Mike,
I bought a SWP General Lee from you and man it is BAD! Very impressed with the work and more importantly, your customer service, all TOP SHELF! After showing off the radio to my father who's been into radio's for better than 30 years, he bought one too!(the next week) He said he'd heard a radio talk that good! You've got to customers for LIFE Short Fuse, round the Chesapeake Bay!!

Mike,
What can I say. The only word that comes to mind is amazing. You hooked me up with a Connex 4600 Turbo setup for 205watts and a 636L mic and I tell you this thing TALKS! Ive never gotten feedback on ANY radio I have owned like this one. I mean I could be parked beside the guy giving a radio check with those other radios and dont think I would get the same feedback. Spent the better part of a day installing this thing the correct way. Heavy gauge wires the entire nine yards to make sure it was done correct the first time. Keyed the mic for the first time for a radio check and got "Loud and proud driver, It took me a minute to come back to ya because you knocked me to my passenger side".!!!!!!!!!!Sence the I dont even know where to start with the comments.. ie. "Walking the dog and kicking the cat, what is that thing" "That thing is a keeper" "You have me needle so far in the red I think its gona snap" "I didnt know my base was getting out that far".. well I hear ya hows this mobile sound? "holy * you in a mobile?" -that guy was on a base about 40 miles away, the way the bird flys. I could go on but I think you get the point. I cant wait to order my RCI 2980WX and I-10K for my base from you. I know that thing will blow some serious smoke.

Thanks
NC

Man, you've hooked me up real good. The Superstar 36 dual final radio is the best cot'n pickin' radio that I've ever owned. Reason being is that, I've been jacked so many time with fakeass doctors from the mini-grass (which I'm originally from) and they say that this radio will do this and that and upon arrival?, my radio sound likes a piece of junk. Now, that is after they received the radio and they do their doctorine 'wannabee' on my radio. -
Mike, from the deepest from my heart you've hooked me up with a barefooted radio with your "superwhacked" packed and super modulation on this radio; it makes "ModSquad" look silly. This radio just stomps on the air. Mudducks here in Idaho thinks that I'm running more than just this radio but, when I key down. I only use the barefooted mode when just modulating. BUT, when it comes down to laying it down?, damn, you should see how many ducks I put to "quack"!! Thank you so much, Mike... I will definately buy from "Radioactive" again and again.

Thank you so much & God Bless!
309 in the cle'ah!

Michael......

I read the testimonials page on your site. Honestly I was still a little skeptical of buying my RCI 2995 from you guys. However after talking to you guys, answering all the questions I had over the course of many days.......I bought what was either going to be the biggest rip off RCI 2995 base or the baddest base station this side of the nation. This I can say this RCI 2995DX base station was worth every stinking penny I spent. Ill be paying my credit card company for a long time, but let me tell you one thing, I'd buy another in a second, and recommend any of my friends to do the same. All my buddies base stations around here don't even come close. I can say is your a man that delievered his word, and thats rare these days. I called one of your competitors that slammed you, called you a hack, and were alot cheaper. Now I know why-- if they could tune a radio like this bad boy, their phones would be ringing off the hook too!! Good tech skill is worth good money, and being a mechanic for 25 years, I can tell you alot of guys want cheap, and get what they pay for. Thanks man, Ill be calling for my dads radio really soon.

Lil Reb- Joey Silva

Thank You Mike, I got my galaxy 2547 this afternoon. I was working on a deck and did not get to fire it up until later this evening, WOW....SWP and all. With a astro plane up in the air 30' and bare footing, I talked to several units in N. Cal from my place in S/W Colorado, so the rocky mountain oyster is on the air and the needle was swinging like you said it would. Get some mad money together and I'll be back for a mobile to go with with the new base. Mr. radioactive, you and your crew are great.

One question, can I use a D-104, with a t-ug8 stand with the radio and if so what would be the wiring sequence? I'll just get in line and tell all that ask, "it's a RadioActive Radio".

Thanks again, Lynn F

Just wanted so say "THANKYOU'. The Connex 4600, superwack pak is awesome, have since sold my Ranger 6900 F150, not a bad radio but not even close to this one. I will never do buisness with anyone else.

Thanks again--W>B in Denver, CO

RadioActive, Man I purchsed that Astatic mic you told me about to go along with the General Lee Radio. Man am I pleased, It's AWESOME, everyone at work is telling me how I'm talking all over them. They are all impressed as well

:).. This Radio with the superwack pack Just Ownz!!!!
Thanx, Lee A.

Hi my name is bill (AKA DOC HOLIDAY) Austin Tx.
This radio just about leaves me in awe. Man this thing has unbeliveable audio. I run this radio in my '03 Silverado p/u, using a dbl coil 10k predator. Man it's overwhelming. Just awesome. When I back the unit down to 3-5 watts & CLICK. On comes my amp damn it's hell on wheel's. Local and in skipland. Everyone asks what kind of radio I'm using. Nothing but the best comments on the way it performs.(with the amp &with out the amp. I've never been so satisfied with any radio until I dealt with you guys. I'll alway's recommend you, Radio active. Your tects are the best I have ever encountered since 1973. (when I got into CB.) Just keep on doing what YOU DO BEST.
Doc Holiday, Austin,TX

Hi, my name is Charles.
I just bought your Connex 4600 Turbo,with the Super Wackpack with the Super Receive and the Predator 10K Antenna, about a mouth ago,what a package!!!! I have never had so much FUN in my life with other radios,as I am now, Thank you very much in setting me in the right path in chooseing my equipment.

Also a good friend of my sold me a brand new Galaxy DX-959 40 channel AM/SSB mobile CB radio never out of the box for half the price,and I was wondering how much would it cost to soup this radio up or can you.
Thank You.

I bought a 66 with a wackpack and a 99 without a wackpack, well I only use the Galaxy 66 with the SUPERWACKPACK now. I didn't think I wanted to Wack the 99. Anyway I was WRONG! The 99 just sits on the shelf until I want to talk ssb. I want to get the SUPERWACKPACK done to the Galaxy 99 now as I should have when I bought it.

Can I send back the radio to have this done? I will supply you with my card number for the charges and return shipping. I understand you are a very busy shop, but you guys are the best and wouldn't send my "BIG BOY" anywhere else!
Thanks, Moogie

WOW!! Unbelievable!! ..... I had a General Lee 3 years ago, and it performed great, but it got stolen by some low life that can't afford his own radio. ..... I bought another one from you guys, had it SuperWhackPacked, and WOW!! it out performs EVERY radio on the highway. Drivers call me a "Liar" they say I must have a "Kicker" I tell them "No" but just wait till I DO get one lol ....

Thanx a Million guys, you've got one happy customer.

High Voltage

Mr.RadioActive,
I got my RCI 2980WX base station in on 6-1-06 from you guys. Before that I had a 2980WX I bought from another dealer, I had sent it back to that dealer

3 times, all times they told me the radio worked perfect. I was shocked when you didn't suck A#% and tell me what I wanted to hear.

You told me sometimes radios work on the bench. Damn man your honest, defending another shop! Anyway the base I had sucked and I got burned I sold the crappy thing losing $200 no matter what they screwed me. Their tech service bites. You guys told me you wouldn't say anything bad about them because it's against your rules to speak badly of someone else. That's freaking INTEGRITY.

Anyway again I called you and didn't want to pay $690 for your radio. I thought it was nuts. But something told me to do it. You answered my questions, and put up with me for 2 hours on the phone. Anyway to make a long story short, this base KICKS A$#. It's nuts how far I'm hearing, and talking the money was SO WORTH IT. This radio has the biggest ears I've ever had. I'm hearing maybe 2x greater then I did before with the same Imax 2000 antenna. I've been hearing people telling me I used to hit them with a 3 or 4 now its 6 or 7 on their radio you can't lie about that! That's with the SAME TYPE OF RADIO! No radio I ever had talked so far, and heard so well. Guys your top of the line, when you get screwed as much as I have you get a little bitter, but I may not be a technical expert but you guys are now my techs.

Thx again,
Bob M.

I just wanted to say thanks Mike , for fixing my Galaxy 99V.I have gotten alot of compliments on the radio , Sounds Great.

Thanks again,
Mike.Noel from San Antonio,Tx.

P.S. I'll never use a CB shop again.

Pred 10K mobile antenna, and my dx99 Galaxy radioactive style, Radio Active 450 doing the job for sure, with 636L kicking.

Thanks, Tommy-
($ 105 shipped to the door!)

Got three radios from you guys (1)Stryker 440 just got, (1) General Lee, with DAVEMADE 2x4 best setup I own (1) 2950dx my ssb radio. Alls I can say is I'll be back for more soon. The super wacked packed whatchamacallit radios scream. Mudduck sqwishing for sure!
SuperMan 244- round I-5 reading the mail

Thank you very much for going out of your way to get my radios fixed right. You don't know how happy I am. As you know I had a General Lee "superwackpacked" by on 5/26/06. I had bought the radio from you, installed it and got nothing but compliments. However after passing a "cb shop" the owner told me to take the radio inside, he could "improve" it. He put you guys down and called your work a "hack" and told me he knew all about you. I was a fool and fell for it, paid $50 so he could remove the work, and do his wonders on it. The moment his "tech" put the radio back in the truck, I noticed people told me my audio as low, and muffled. The shop told me to drive down the road and test it with them on the air. They said I sounded great, which I found out was a total lie. The shop ruined my radio. Everyone told me I sounded horrible. The other drivers for my company said, I sounded like a was talking on junk. This is when I called your company. I could not believe that you were willing to fix it....the total bill came out to nothing! You guys charged me nothing to rework the entire radio, and you got it back out to me in 3 days, and even paid for shipping. The radios talking GREAT now, and Im very, very impressed. In todays day and age many people will try to ruin a good reputation, slam the other guy, and boost up themself, but what really matters is how the radio talks when you key up the mic, and your radios are the best. Please feel free to share this on your site. If people need to contact me please allow them to.

Ricky Montseniour
Coast to Coast

Guys, Rec'd the 2980dx "super wackpacked, with super receive, and power supply upgrades". I was kinda skeptical of the price you had on the radio. It was higher then the other guys. However your sales staff really answered all my questions the many times I called. The mods done to this radio are sincerely the best that I've ever seen. Being in electronics myself for over 45 years (out of it now due to poor eye sight), I can say you guys are on top of the technical bench work. The audio is very clean, and loud. I've talked to locals over 90 miles (if you can call that local), and DX all over including AU, NZ, and others on a omni.

I've owned many radios over the years, and have built a few and blown up a few as well trying, I really wanted to say thank-you. The other base stations in town have no where near the same results, plan on hearing from a few of them.

Thank you very much,
Chuck, NH

The radio works great and I have had some awesome responses for my trucker buddies.
Thanks,
Geoff
PS Thanks for the tip of turning off my talk back.

Mike-dropping the freaking hammer on the 95T2 dude! Killer audio, I can't believe how much better this radio is then my hacked-up cb shop one was. You got a customer forever! Keep up the killer work..... I'll be getting that 1600 next.
HardHat-227 c-u 10-7 AKA Bill

Guys, First off I wanted to say you ROCK!
My new 95T2 is the best sounding radio on the big road. Alls I get is "what the heck you running?" I used to use one of the other places I found surfing. Cant believe I paid money for their so called tune. Radio squealed nonstop, and alls I got was audio sounds muffled. Dumb me fell for it 2 times. When I called and told them, idiot me bought another radio from them, and got ripped twice.

Dudes thanks for being honest and answering my questions.
See you guys in NC next year.
Jimmy, Big Horn

I bought a connex 4600 turbo from you guys and get the best compliments on the radio! You guys did a really good job on it.

Hey Mike, I just recently purchased a s/w/p General Lee from you and that thing blows some serious smoke, I've got nothing but compliments on the radio, it's the loudest, cleanest radio I've ever heard, I was running it barefoot for a couple of days, but I just got my old tx800 hooked up today and that thing is kickin some serious butt. I'll probabally be looking to get one of those Davemades pretty soon though, that old tx has just about had it, anyway just wanted to say thanks for the great service and a great radio, you've got a new customer for life.

Thanks again
Kyle "rooster" Baton Rouge,La.

Just wanted to let you know I'm elated with the radio.
Thanks again
Mike

I recently received my superwhackpack, super receive Connex 3300 H/P and this radio rocks. It sounds great with my Texas Star 500 matched to it. No more CB shops for me. My radio pals don't even know me now!!! Thanks for a killer radio.
Gerald in Arkansas.

What happens when two big RadioActive Radios meet?
We've all heard the "little" radios, and the loud radios that sound bad, and a few of us have heard the big, loud, radios that also sound good. Two customers of RadioActive Electronics who both recently purchased SuperWackPacked General Lee Radios, recently met. Of course they tried the radios out.

The meeting went like this:
BigGuns: Today I met the "Working Cowboy" in person, and during this meeting I experienced the real power of a SuperWackPacked General Lee radio from RadioActive Radios. The "Working Cowboy's" barefoot SuperWackPacked General Lee was so loud, I had to turn the volume on my radio down because he was hurting my ears. I also got to really hear what my SuperWackPacked General Lee sounded like, and all I've got to say is Mr. RadioActive YOU ARE THE MAN! My past experiences with bad CB shops had me skeptical, but now, I AM A VERY HAPPY CAMPER, THANKS FOR EVERYTHING!

And now that the DaveMade 2 by 4 has arrived I believe I am about to be the happiest guy in Virginia!

Thad (SmallTruckBigRadio)

MICHAEL, I recived my connex 4600 turbo in the mail on 4-20-06, hooked it up & could not belive how great it sounded. IT KICKS ASS!!!!!! LOUD AND PROUD. I have no idea who worked on my radio BUT he or she knows there s%$#!!!

THANKS GEORGE R. P.C.B. FL 32408

All I can say is AWESOME!!!! Thank you for your EXCELLENT customer service. The radio sounds better than expected! I also wanted to thank you again for getting it back to me so soon. Wow less than a week, can't ask for anything better! You will definitely get many recommendations from me. RADIOACTIVERADIOS ROCKS!!!!

Hi! I just recently purchased a General Lee with Superwhackpack and Super Receive, and you guys rock! From all account of the people I have talked to, this radio is "bangin'".

Would I buy from you again? Yes! Your knowledge and customer service are great, and you helped me select the right radio for me. I have already recommended you to a few friends, and one of the has already bought another radio from you. Keep up the good work!

Sincerely,
Ret in Reno, NV.

A good friend of mine bought a General Lee from you not long ago I love it got to get one...
it is super..
the loudest most bad to the bone radio I ever heard,,
he completly shut me down,,
I believe what you said about cb shops,,
we have a few in tulsa but I dont trust them,,
keep up the great work,,

Mr. RadioActive
I JUST GOT A S/W/P Galaxy 99 DONE UP FROM MIKE! THAT THING ROCK'S! I LOVE WHAT THIS THING CAN DO. IT IS A GOOD CLEAN SOUNDING RADIO. THE MUDDUCKS RUN AT THE SOUND OF THAT S/W/P Galaxy 99 JUST BEING TURNED ON.

Thanks,
THUMPER

Mr. RadioActive
One word, Awesome!. Thats the best way to describe my SuperWackPacked Galaxy DX66V from RadioActive Radios. Before I had the SuperWackPack done to my radio, it worked OK but was ordinary at best. I'm always getting compliments on how loud my 66V is now. This never happened before with the peak and tune(hack job) performed by the local Golden Screwdriver. Now my radio rocks! The audio is louder and my average talking watts have almost doubled. One word.....Awesome!

Mississippifrog (sent us his used 66V and Boomer Amp)

Thank you for ending my expensive search "for a little bit more, and a little bit better" in a radio. Usually, a new toy loses its "newness" after a few weeks.
With this SuperWackPacked General Lee, I get very regular reminders that my search for a top shelf radio is over. Never in my wildest dreams, was I expecting consistent compliments from base stations, while using a mobile. And, when I'm not getting compliments, I can hear the sound of respect, and sometimes jealously of finally being the "BIG RADIO" on the air.

GatorBait,
Louisville, KY

"Got the radio installed yesterday. Found a channel with folks talking on it. At a break, I keyed up for a radio check. Loud and clear came back from N. Carolina!"

Thanks much!! (superwackpacked connex 4600 turbo)

"Before the SuperWackPacked General Lee, I would ask for radio checks with doubt, Now I ask for radio checks to show off! Strangers speak to me differently on the General Lee. I have been called a CB shop 3 times now. Sounds like a base! Comments like "That radio sounds top shelf" "Walking the dog" "Sounds smooth as silk" etc. are all indicators that your radio is SuperWackPacked! "

It ain't "pointless bickering" in Heil's case. In the typical
"look at me, I am SOMEBODY" fashion of computer-modem comms, the bickerer has to come out on top, regardless.

During Word War 3 prior to FCC 06-178, morsemen HAD to be on top. It was almost a compulsion. Just about all the old morse myths were brought out, dusted off, and presented in all their "glory" despite being outmoded, outdated, too worn to use in the future. Morsemen were intensely PROUD of their skill and were bound and determined to shove it down everyone's throat...whether anyone actually thought much of the mode or not. They had rank, status, privilege all because of that morse skill and hated to lose any of it. It was almost a fight for survival of a species...it was THEM or no one...and to hell with what any newcomer thinks or for the future of US amateur radio. It was extremism in the defence of their very-private playground. [de fence was up and trying to keep off the encroaching voice modes]

Early on I had mentioned my military service assignment.
I thought it was adequate proof that "CW" wasn't up to the task of hundreds of thousands of message relays per month (teleprinter was used)...the necessity for an entire military theater of operations doing 24/7 duty during the Cold War. No, the morsemen HAD to try turning that around to "my bragging" and a general big nothing during Word War 3. Sure, I did brag some since I absolutely lucked out on that assignment, even if the station was only the third largest in the Army worldwide network. Even being only third, pushing 220K messages relayed a month 24/7 is Big Business any way one slices it. The amateur national network can't come close to that using RTTY and certainly not via "CW." Manual "CW" even at 20 to 40 WPM just can't beat the old 60 WPM machinery (then the only form of Data using electromechanical terminals).

That was in 1953 to 1956 and most of the "CW" super-skilled hams in here were just being born (a few not yet conceived). The military was ramping up its skills and beginning to go 100 WPM teleprinter, 300 WPM "Data" (that word not yet in vogue then), using Troposcatter and hoping satellites could be put up without the launch vehicles constantly exploding on the pad. All was accomplished and more, no military OR commercial service looking back to quaint old methods. Yet the superskilled (self-imagined) hams HAD to stay with ALL needing to be federally tested for "important" skill of morse code! For a hobby activity yet. Morsemen had done it, therefore "all could do it."

None of the Word War 3 fighting on morsemanship was "pointless bickering" to the morsemen. They were the "best radio operators" and HAD to tell everyone they were. Years and years of them honing their twitchy-fingered skills on the paddles made them a needed resource in homeland defense and security of the nation, the amateur radio SERVICE...and all should look up to them, admire them, salute them as they entered a room and other ossifer courtesy tenderred in utmost respect and reverence.

So, on 17th February I decided to get in the amateur radio hobby. Might be fun...except in here waging the on-going gorilla fight in the post Word War 3 era. I became an Extra Out Of The Box by test on February 25th, by law on 7 March. All the operating privileges of any OTHER Extra are mine, no restrictions by law. Now Heil wants to drone on that I'm such a "Beginner, a Neophyte" in ANY radio, amateur or not. After 54 years of doing it in many radio services? Amateurism is extra super-special most very difficult to learn? No. It is for me and morsemanship, something I will probably never use, but who really cares except morsemen? The FCC gives the OPTION to any amateur to use ANY allocated mode, any allocated band.

Ah, but Heil, Miccolis, Kelly, et al, say I "MUST" use "CW" to "PROVE WORTH." Prove to whom? To them? Mais non, mon ami, they be just little people, almost a protected species of old and, with the protection they had gone, now a dying breed. They continue their POINTLESS BICKERING yet, trying to put down all those who do not agree with Their magnificence and god-like skills. It is Them against the rest of the radio world and they are losing. Let them bicker and rant. It is all they have left in the wreckage of their fallen towers and former imagined glory.

Well, UnWiseman, you're the tormented soul living in a tiny house

I've got it all figured out. I don't intend to use it with you. You're guess that multiple choice give away extra is just another example of marqueer being a victim of the mean old amateur radio community.

maybe the test should be further dumbed down so that even the most simple minded (such as marqueer) can play radio with the big boys! or does marqueer really want to play with the big boys on the radio?

That "free time" isn't all "free time", Len. There are Washington consultations regarding the previous and upcoming assignments. There are visas to be obtained, medical exams, vaccinations to be obtained. There are classes to be taken, sometimes four or five of them.

The "free time" can be either before or after those things. It is called Home Leave and it is not charged to annual leave. Usually thirty working days of Home Leave is mandated between assignments.

It's very American. The Home Leave is mandated by Congress. Most Foreign Service employees spend most of their working lives overseas.

I use the Heil products here, Leonard. As you may know, with quality microphones, what you get out of it is only as good as what you put into it.

Europeans work far less than 11 months a year. That's why they have so many trade restrictions with the USA... to level the playing field.

I don't know about that. Bob used to have his shop in Marissa, Illinois, just south of my old address in the shadow of St Louis.
Later he opened small shop in Fairview Heights, where the sales tax is 7% because they have a shopping mall. He had mostly high-definition TV at that location, so I don't know where he's manufacturing the microphone line, or if he's "outsourced" it.

Is it really worth the bother?

1. He will hijack the thread.

2. He will accuse the fortune teller of stalking him.

3. He is not worth the effort.

the responsible design engineering. :-(

Herr Robust made some crack about "how many did I destroy?"

Ya know, He NEVER said anything about His military service that could be pinned down to something substantial. I think he's just one of those fakers who IMPLY things and then bluff out on some (bogus) claims of "post traumatic stress."

Well, it's something. Something like collecting string, stamps, dolls, paperweights, all sorts of different memorabilia and knickknacks.

My REALLY important papers are in my safety deposit box. Since there's NO necessity to keep logs (except for the "new" modes like SS) I think some jottings on scratch paper ought to suffice.

Words on the VEC QP say "it's a good idea for resolving interference complaints." I don't know how that can "resolve" them since it would be kept by the person allegedly doing the RFI.
Such wouldn't stand up in court. But, lots of hams like to act like "pros" at broadcast stations, so they keep logs. Last time I did any broadcasting, the only thing noted in logs was when a station was OFF the air beyond its normal, announced hours.

Yah. 2004. He's got TWO towers. One buckled somewhere in its middle and it came down, elements of one beam punching a hole in his roof. He has pictures of it on some personal web site.
Not a pretty sight.

On the same web site he's got a picture of a small bottle of Finnish vodka. Swedes label the "hard" spirits 'brannvin,' literally translates as 'burn wine.'

From the same pictures Heil appears to be a lefty, in one of them twiddling a bug's paddles with the left, a package of Marlboros at the ready by his right hand.

Heh heh heh...I was testing Heil again to see if he was paying attention. :-)

Fairview Heights, IL, is just a few miles east of the Big Muddy and East Saint Louis, IL. A few miles farther east and one cuts north to go to Springfield. BTW, I heartily recommend going to the Abraham Lincoln Museum in downtown Springfield...new, only been open for a few years and is a GREAT experience for anyone wanting to relive the times of his life and the American Civil War era. Good parking a block away and minimal charge to enter.
Fabulous exhibits. You can take your own picture standing with the Lincoln family in the rotunda (only place where they allow photography...life-size mannikins with authentic clothing).

Note that I did NOT say where the LDG autotuner was made. Tsk,
I should have been given a "reminder" by know-it-all morsemen on that! :-)

Hi-Def TV? That must be a continuing thing then since HDTV is just beginning to catch on in consumer electronics.

Heil Sound uses SOME off-shore made components, certainly in accessories. The color, feel, shape of some of the bags for mikes are the SAME as what H-P had for some of their calculators 25 years ago (such as my olf HP-67). Adapters for various mikes, headphones, headsets have distinctive machining, plating, and plastic encapsulation of Asian manufacture. Those are good, but the prices (allowing for mark-up that is double their cost, easily) add the final touch to be off-shore made.

My (now) ancient Icom R-70 is still doing just fine, gets to sit in the line-up of my station...all 3 feet wide, foot and a half high by foot and a quarter deep with room for other goodies, no strain. New stuff is much more compact than old.

Whatever works for you and is reliable. But, Davey will PUT IT DOWN, whatever it is. His are "better," whatever he's got. :-(

I posit that if all of us, ALL of us, were to agree to ignore any and all of Mark's hijacked threads, and respond only to threads begun by others, that Mark will soon become frustrated in that he will no longer be the center of attention.
Mark clearly dislikes being ignored. He has a deep-rooted need to be recognized by others and the ultimate insult, the WORST thing one can do is to ignore Mark. He cannot handle being shunted into a non-important category.

He needs the interaction. He needs to justify his existence. He needs the attention he clearly lacks at home.

If I were a Democrat I'd vote often and from places such as abandonded houses and vacant lots. I'd also vote over the names of the deceased. However, I will not do so. No "majority" vote is needed to come to the conclusion that Mark has unresolved mental issues.

I actually feel sorry for Mark. He has no goals, exists in a world that lacks reality, and who is being led astray by a woman who adheres to oddball, off-the-wall Magickal religious ideas that have no place in mainstream society. Puff The Magic Dragon, anybody?

Since 99% of your postings are duplicates with repetitive comments, perhaps you could wait until the end of the day and consolidate all of them into a single post?

Bullcrap.

You are hijacking threads (which constitutes denial of service - a prohibited activity); you are bombarding the news groups with unwanted data, and you have generally been obnoxious for two years. You ARE in violation of many sections of the Hughes AUP, such as sections (i) and (j) for further examples:

"(i) to post information on newsgroups which is not in the topic area of the newsgroup; (j) to interfere with another person's usage or enjoyment of the Internet ..."

You interfere so much with people's enjoyment of the Internet that some of them established a moderated group in order to get away from your hatefulness.

You are an AUP violator, and everyone knows it. You are a low life who knows it too but who won't quit until he is involuntarily stopped. You have a mentality identical to any criminal's, and you need to be treated as the net criminal that you are and be isolated from the rest of net society. You need to be put into cyber jail.

By doing this, Mark gets the much needed attention he so sadly lacks in his personal life.
Oddly enough, he sees no wrong with what he is doing and finds a way to twist the sad facts into justification for being a cyber freak.
Life is so blissful in the Morgan household that Mark will, within minutes, respond to this post AND change the topic line.
This is all he has.

I don't recall asking anything about how many credentials or personnel departments you destroyed, Windy. :-)

No, I don't believe I ever did. Now what?

I've never made any claims of military heroics. I've never claimed to be a victim of "post traumatic stress". It bugs you that you don't know. I take delight in that.

I've not made much of an attempt to convince you of anything regarding my military service, Len. You've said that you've not denigrated your fellow military veterans. The facts show that you have.

You still have it wrong. My call was not issued under the vanity callsign program. I've had it for thirty years now.

as opposed to the word of the person complaining of RFI.

I think you're wrong on that, Leonard. Such things as a memorandum of conversation or a carefull kept record of events can be used in court.

> But, lots of hams like to act

It has nothing to do with broadcast stations or acting like "pros", Len.
For decades, amateur radio operators were required by the FCC to maintain logs. There is nothing keeping radio amateurs from maintaining logs. They serve as a record of events for awards tracking, for tracking propagation, for nostalgia and as a memorandum of times/dates/frequencies used.

That's nice.

Except it isn't Swedish vodka. It's there because the vodka's label says "Strong 59".

I'm a left hander in some things, a right hander in others. I can use a keyer paddle with either hand.

I'm holding onto this quote, because in it he admits to intentionally disrupting our news groups:

In message <1174929882.797290.192310@d57g2000hsg.googlegroups.com>, Mark
Morgan admitted that he is trying to disrupt the news groups by saying,
"... I am aware that I do anoy them and as an inicdental to main main objective distrupt their NG experence that is regreatble and regrreted [sic]"

I want Hughes people to see that message so that they can understand exactly what Mark is about. Good deal that it's archived on Google.

well the cowardly nature of the attack bloger has truely gone the deep end

http://markcmorganusenetmoron.blogspot.com/

is his sight it seems dlooyd and his cyber buddies are so afraid of me they are not even allowing coments on their latest attack blog full of nothing but lies and libel it does seem that they can do nothing without comiting libel

I love the line about my being a drug and achol abuser it is a real belly laugh there his rediculous accusation I am Neo Nazi and a child molestor as more distrubing we will see if Blooger is a spineless as they normaly seem to be well we will see the Ham fest

well just got back was hoping to be able to report that I was kb9rqz/ae but alas I fell one question short on that score oh weel I will have to try a different since i am wander lost in vaqely familiar math in an amateur context that makes little sense form the Physics point of OTOH I can report that my wife is now KD8CTL/ag a feat I thought possible but not quite probable. I am gald she made it she had woking for sometime on this question pool without feeling she was geting anywhere on other scores My father in law came to hamfest spent some time whele we were testing on air and made a few contacts as a thrid party op, and left with a Tech class manual we will see what developes from that.

I had a chat with Mr Jim Hyaine of of the ARRL at behest of someone else (not sure how it worked out) we had a frank discussion of thigng in My area the hobby/service in general, and my feelings and ipression of the ARRL. Deny the man what I must I must also grant him that unlike many folks on say RRAP he adknowledge that MY opions and impression are valid without my having to explain them to others, and he was quite attnetive to my responses to his question

My My how the attention swirls just becuase I go to a hamfest

I'll more about the AES Superfest later I hope but for now I am alive well and STILL with hughesnet

the lastest in out right cyber attack by Dloyd

http://www.markmorgansucks.blogspot.com/ if you clicked on that blog you were here By an anonmous entiyt calling himself "Dloyd Lavies" if you click on that link now you will unless he changes thing yet agina find yourself back here in short order

I assume based on his passion for cyber games and his allowed insitance in forcing to never ever coment on USENET post with his premission again he may be creatigng a number of these blogs in future, if indeed he has not done so already, I presume in an effort to have My blog removed by google as a possible spam blog or something along those lines

update Dloyd changes the nature of his attack mosr foten then most change their sock stay tune to this for further repoting on Dloyd the cyber madman and terrorist, terroist being the prefect word since his avwed aim (at least avowed aim at time he changes his stated postisnion so so often) is to cause teror and to imtiadate tme into meeting his ever changing set of demands

is Dloyd a chil or just acting like one

he insist or demands or whatver word you like I prefrom actions heagree are impossible he claims the right to harm in the offline world if I do not managethese things he conceeds are aimpossible he post statement atht can be read as claiming when OTHER takes offline such he he apears to have it is likely criminal he claims to be expempt for any harm himself if performs acts againstme he agress are imposible and likely ilegal he claim that he may in effect yell "fire" in a crowded room when nofire is present he claims he has no responibility for the result of HIS action andthat I am repsoinble for mine God I must say the man does lok more and more like robeson by the post meanwhile I have evidence of his possible involvment in a securitybreahs against ME, at a sitie where the stolen data resided the listhe published the unlisted unpublished phone that was compromised, andthe credit cards that were compromised all at about the same time he claims protection in making flase claim about the authorship of ofEmail he received (alleges to have receieve in all afirness) butbecause he "not a forensic IT" guy he is free of respobility, bu thatI must have these skills before I assume that what apears to be truemight be true

meanwhile I am left with cleaning up the mess and paying the expensesinvoled in dealing with these matters is Dloyd pissed I have not changed my sig line on my terranews posting

http://kb9rqz.blogspot.com stealing data from my wifes accounts is unaccaptable Dloyd Lavies renagade cyber theif and terroist
it goes out everytime I post on terranews at this it will continue until I chose to stop or the cyber terroist calling himself "Dloyd Lavies" is caught, or I choose to rewrite it bassed on further thought

Dloyd likes to claim that seeking the id of my attacker is somehow stalking hm

he is of course free to pursue that legal theory with LE if he likes but I dount he has the guts to talk to LE anywhere

Dloyd latest two faced shit

Mark is once again continuing with his tirade of stalking and actuallybelieves that I would waste my time suing him. I've said multipletimes that he is not worth suing because he doesn't have anything ofvalue. He is a pauper at best. I would be better off litigatingagainst a homeless person, at least they can pan handle and obtainsome kind of income. Nevertheless, we see how Mark is a man of hiswords, he tells me to take down my blog (which I did, but not becausehe said) and to not post about him, which I didn't, yet here he is, asusual he proves.....well you know.
And since he started this for today, I had to laugh when I saw one ofhis posts begging everyone to come over on his boring blog and postsome comments, he sounds like Lloyd. He is so needy isn't he. He wasso needy for attention he even sent me an email to my gmail account.What a joke.
Dloyd.

in light of this statement on you blog

(you blog goes up and down like a Yo Yo Dloyd)

In consideration of the recent situation on RRAM and RRAP, and threats of death and blackmail received by me. I was advised to archive my two blogs pending possible further litigation and approval of protectionary "John Doe" status before proceeding in this matter. So at this time I have suspended my blogs until further notice

I have stated I will remainVilgilant anagist Dloyd unwisely deciding to continue his campiagn of teror against me and mine

I am I aawiait the unlike event that Dloyd is truly seeking somekind of John doe stautas

he is presently John Doe and thus can't be the the recepinat of an actionable threat

Indeed I can no more in legal terms threaten him to kill him at this point than I can threaten to kill Capt Kirk of the Enterprise

a blog entry that Dloyd seems to have forgetten he made

http://dloydlaviessweatlord.blogspot.com/2007/02/new-name-for-blog.html
"I decided to rename the blog. I read some posts concerning the past actions of some in regard to Mark Morgan. Personally, my opinion is to keep it on the net, period. Unless someone is breaking the law, there really is no need to interfere with anyone beyond the net. Once you cross that line and start interferring with people's personal lives, it just takes the fun out of the whole thing. Furthermore, that type of behavior is probably illegal, uncalled for, and IMO malicious. I believe some have crossed the line. So I decided to refrain from directly commenting about Mark Morgan, he gets enough grief already.
However, I will still monitor everybody's favorite wacky racist and religious host, Lloyd Davies."

highlights added by me Dloyd clearly see the sort of behavoir he enaged as criminal at least when other people enage in it

Dloyd you have no cause to talk about harasment

http://markmorgansucks.blogspot.com/2007/03/mark-refueses-to-stop-his-harrassment.html
I'll be qoting from this blog post shortly but first just looks it

"markmorgan sucks" and he dares to speak of me harrasing him for objecting to his blog his claims he did not invite or induce me to hsi blog he named after me

https://www2.blogger.com/comment.g?blogID=9419816293627392 01&postID=5605423273403347725
"and you are even welcome to post coment on my blog"

certainly looks an invation to me
he claims that he harrased when I sek to learn the real name behind the false front that has stolen data and spread it acorss the net about my wife

he think he steal and harrass people and recieve nothing in turn his obejection to my RRAP posting is that I refuse to to not opose his effort to harrass me there

I post to USENET I have that right so does he, what does does not have the right to too is escalate the situtaion and demand I do nothing in response

Dloyd has decided he wants a war well so be it " it takes but one side to breed a war" JJR Tolkien "the return of the king vol 3 Lord of the Rings

another famous quote aas I can't recall whom "if this be treason make the most of it"

"who therefore thinks that you can kill (commit murder), without provication"

most people would think that stealing from someone and attack their wives would provacation also Dloyd has serious langauge issues he can't seem to grasp the difference betwen murder and self defense perhaps his aleged lawyer can explain this to him but I doubt it. I have and continue to wonder if this ain't Robeson he at least has most of the same ideas

"Once again I am demanding that you cease all harrassment of me and threats of death."

agin this shows the delusional nation of the Subject Dloyd he can't accept the notion I have the ame rights as himself since he chooses to attack me I will contiu e to seek out his real name and loctation only that way acan I access what legal options I have. He is obessed and confused over the meaning a statement It may be possible to kill withi n the law depending on the exact circumtstances. he also over looks that his renlentless attacks against that have taken a general escalating pattern might well allow to threaten deadly force even if I could not empoly it, additional he odismisses the fact to be ilgeal the threat has be something I can do. the FBI states that Robeson can make his death threats because it is not crediable that he would travel from tn to here to effect the deed how much less credible is the "threat" I will kill dloyd without knowing anything about his name location or even with any certainy his gender I would be reduced to traveling from to house asking are you Dloyd and being prepared to shoot anybody that said yes (gee that sounds like something out Good Morning Veitnam almost a Robbin Willaims line)

the root deiference betwen me and Dloyd

https://www2.blogger.com/comment.g?blogID=941981629362739201&postID=1...
>"I don't want to take any action against you. I've repeatedly told you what the problem is, yet >you won't admit your problem of hijacking my threads and altering my topics. I tried to leave you >alone, but you insisted on harrassing me and stalking me on the groups.
Now I just gave you a >very small, and I stress very small taste of what I have the ability to accomplish. I advise you to >leave me alone and stop commenting on my posts. You want to continue to act like an a-hole? >That is your option" I have never demanded that Dloyd cease posting although I have sugested that deep sixing the dloyd moniker would be an option
I have never dispurted the right of the person behind the dloyd nick to post. I never will what I dispute and what he threatens further action based on is his demand I stop comenting on his posts or else.
that is the problem dloyd demands I submit to blackmail. he insists my right to post is lessoer in some fashion to his own and he threatens further criminal action against me and my wife if I don't submit to such

Mark stop the threats.
Mark Morgan, Amateur Radio Call Sign KB9RQZ, of Chassell, Michigan, stop threatening me. I don't want you posting on my blog and implying on the news groups that you are going to murder me. I demand that you stop any and all harrassment in accordance with the cyber stalking laws of Michigan, which prohibit such practice.The follow excerpts from your posts clearly show that you want to kill me and is implying the use of deadly force."stalk you I love have the chance""I will make you pay for if I ever get the chance""I will seek to make [you] suffer""feel I might even have the right to use deadly force""I will take the braodest and most violent to your person""threat of death promises of death""I want you dead without even knowing your name""I can kill you out of hand">You were the one who brought up killing someone.< "Indeed I did"Mark has clearly and repeatedly threatend my life. I have demanded that he cease (Stop) his harrassment and death threats upon me in accordance with the anti-stalking laws of the state of Michigan.

I never posted anyone's phone number, all I posted was the wedding list to discredit your "many friends" claim, and noted that you tried to cover up some racey fem to fem book. If someone got your phone number you better look elsewhere for the culprit, because I don't even have your number, and never wanted it.

"at our ecomerce site" Didn't know you had one. See this is one of your problems, you can't keep your personal business private. Now some are going to go out and try to find your e-commerce account. I told you once I will tell you again, my only problem with you is you won't stop stalking me and crapping on my threads. IF YOU WOULD HAVE LEFT ME ALONE, none of this would have happened, but I am not going to take your death threats and harrassment lying down."stlaking and harrassing with these blogs" The main reason this blog exists is because this is the only place someone can post where you can't hijack people's thoughts. Here I can moderate you and keep you at bay.

more of the stalking of the morgans by Dloyd

http://markmorgansucks.blogspot.com/2007/03/morning-after.html

The Morning After.....
After Markie went nuts last night, and changed all the posting headers, I hope he is feeling better this morning. I also see that Markie promptly deleted his wedding registry, but it was too late for that, the truth came out anyway.However, I believe that it wasn't the posting of the wedding registry that set him off. I believe that it is because I may have discovered another one of Markie's family secrets, which I won't say here, but based upon a book that his wife earmarked, it certainlly explains why Mark would get upset if the truth came out. Not only did Markie delete the wedding registry, he also strangely deleted any reference to this book, which suggest that he was trying to conceal this information.The book is named, Rhapsody : To Touch the Face of the Goddess (Spiral-bound) by F.R.R Mallory aka Mistress Steel (Author). One book reviewer commented that, "I find Rhapsody an altogether different take on the usual Fem-Fem erotica being published today."Now why would Markie want to conceal that his wife had an interest in this book with a story line based upon female to female erotica, unless.....BTW Markie I know you are bound to read this. I didn't "hack" into anything, your wife put this information out there in the public domain. I think you need to go over to RRAM and RRAP, post an apology, and say that you were wrong and lied when you called me a thief. Furthermore, Gav, if your are reading this, maybe you can talk some sense into you wacky husband, tell him to leave other people alone, because if he had, none of this would have came to fruition.Dloyd another open letter to the enity calling himself "Dloyd Lavies"

You have the abilty to effectively stop me from taking anyaction aganist as in effective as any such action are presently, you operate from behind you wall of proxy and falsenames etc. I do not I live in open and I stand therfore behind my words and actions.

It is not a crime to want to kill you and your cadre of stalkers, this a fortunenate for the liberals that so desperately seem to want the president dead. One can even express such desires openly.

If one asumes you are truely just a fool that has blunged into the 10 years effort of Robeson, Wismen et all to stalk and harrass then prehaps you should take a lession that you need to know you enemy before you enage him this advice "know your eneimy know yourself and Victory shal be thine" is from SinTzu the art of war (don't have date this was written handy)

Under the Recently enacted "Castle Doctrine Laws of the state of Michigan I or anyone may use deadly force in defense of oneself in excerising one right to be where one lawfully has right to be. As I understand the matter that would certainly include the USENET. I further opine that I may most any method short of deadly force to defend that right. This I have done. this I will continue I am prepared to submit to due process of law.

I further opine that under the legal theory I must retreat where possible to avoid a confrontation poir to using deadly that prevailed in Mich till the new laws were enacted, well given that I can't move out of his way even by retreating completely off line, this does not stop his contiued ferreting out of info about me anf my wife and myfamily and spreading his effort to alrger and larger realms, thus I conclude if it were found that I was subject to some other juristction where retreat if possible was the rule since I can not reat or avoid Dloyd Effort against my wifes account my phone number and internet access that retreat is not an issue and if threatened I may peotencaily use deadly force against "dloyd"

"dloyd" OTOH can reatreat and avoid me entirely since he has sheileded his existance to point I can't find who he is, he can simply shut down and leave and thus he can disengag e where the Honest man can't an open letter to Dloyd Lavies Coward and stalker and thief

I have said you were wise to conceal yourself, In that you have proven me correct as you comit another outrage an Out rage showing you are No man but a beast, and a pretyy low one at that.

You should also count yourself as furunate that we no longer live under the code deulleo, although if we did I fancy you would never dare such outrages or that you would have fallen on the filed of honnor long before we ever met.

You dare to speak to me of being imoral when you steal from MY wife as you have done.

you like the rest of the anti Mark RRAPer are not man enough to keep your disputes with Online and between US you go after my wives property and privacy as well.

I name you what you are a trator for your vert acts agains the blessing and liberty Our founding fathers sought to insure us as american, against the scrafices and serivce rendered by our veterans past and present

In your blog you call yourself slime lord, in that it seems you typed the truth you are a slime lord

Who is defaming you? I started this thread about the moderated group,you hijacked MY thread, and you took it off topic. Everything that Ihave posted is based upon my view and observation of the posts on hereand responses to specific posts. If you don't like it, you can take aquarter and call someone who cares.
If a law has been broken, call the law. You know what law has beenbroken, none.
And who has forged a name. Dloyd Lavies is my pen name, many authorshave pen names, it is legal. Don't try to play lawyer, it is apparentthat you have no legal training whatsoever because you throw acusitorylegal terms around without knowing the implications of such terms.
> you do not enage in on topic post that is a violation of neNG policy
You are blabbering something about a violation of NG policy, but yourfumble fingers has made it unreadable, but I will address one policyviolation issue, which is your excessive posting. Your excessiveposting is a violation of Google Groups Policy, because if you posteddirectly into the group instead of a news server and using all of yourdifferent names, you access to post would be limited. It is apparentthat you post using one name until you are suspended, then you startusing another, just to flood the group with your posts.

Google Groups Help Center
Is there a limit on how often I can post?
Yes, there are a few ways in which posting frequency is limited.
Onelimits the number of messages posted to a single group within a shortperiod of time. If that limit is reached, posting to that group willbe frozen temporarily and you'll be instructed to post again later.
Another limits the number of messages a single user can post via emailin a short period of time. If that limit is reached, your postingaccount will be disabled. If your account has been disabled, you canclick the "contact us" link below and request that your account bereactivated. We'll review your request, and let you know what wedecide.
We may also limit the number of messages a single user or computer canpost via our website in a short period of time. If that limit isreached, posting will be frozen temporarily and you'll be instructedto post again later.
Please note, we are unable to provide the exact numbers that triggerthese posting limits as the limits are subject to change.
These limits are to protect the users of our service and their emailaccounts, our groups, and the Usenet community from poorly configuredauto-responders, spammers, robots, trolls, and thread

> id tell you in heartbeat and you'd do nothing> Don't bet your life on that.
you can find anytime you like Id rather you did not esp now it wouldbe rough getting the blood up off the snow
What blood, you would be on your knees in about a 10 seconds withontany blood at all. I saw your photo, no problem. The goal is to applya lot of pain without any residual evidence of such force. Many lawenforcement agencies and federal employers, such as my former, provideexcellent training in the application of these techniques. But ofcourse, this requires me to actually touch you, but you appear to beway too filthy and dirty that I would ever want to touch your.
Doever take a bath? I bet LLoyd is cleaner than you.
> > if you did you'd be dead or in jail shortly thereafter> Well if you killed me because I jail for life.

nope. indeed I don't have to wait for the first blow to land,althought
that would be safer legaly
Sure Markie, that defense would not stand a chance in any district orjudical circuit in the US, even in the 8th circuit.Like I said, it is apparent that you have no legal trainingwhatsoever.
>not the case in Michigan
Actually, Michigan is one of the more liberal circuits, you betterhave significant evidence to warrant justifiable homicide. The courtswould put you away forever if you try to say "oh he was giving me ahard time on the internet after I shit on everyone's postings, and Iwas scared, so I killed him even though he had no weapons. You aresuch an idiot.
>>stop whining like a little bitch just because you can't poison the moderated group.

>I don't want to poison any NG please stop lying about me
No lie, you flooding policy and misc. is evidence enough of your handywork.

an account of hf weekend part 1 delayed report

well things stared out pretty dead at midmight as expected at 12:10 a gruop of my then gathered to tlak to each other on 10M I arranged that my wife should have the honor of the first qso firday morning set for Eat Troy where my father in law lives trying out my new 10 m adio as I went made a few conacts as I went south , biggest observation was the noise level arround around even smal cities like Like Green Bay WI Milwakee the noise was just horrible and I truned the radio off as I had managed to arive at rush hour turned it on a bit as I pulled out of town

sat morning scruiied into AES for the exam place was a Zoo a very good sight for the ARS

must have 40-50 people starting out taking exams which did not count the paperwork upgrades being handled in another room and people keep coming in Indeed after I took my geneal (passed) and extra exam (which I fialed one too many this time not suprised) there was someone waiting for my chair

dropped in AES itself to pick up some stuff and headed home made a few more contactrs on the way all preetlocal although I did hear from the LP of Michigan possible on VHF but not common

it is now sunday about noon time to turn on the radio here and see what is up

I'd sting the new G5RV-M up but it is very windy today and the thing is 200 feet long should have check that and maybe picked a smaller anttenna like a 20 m Dipole

one last studied insult by the ARRL

the ARRL ever eagar to insult the tech class and the NoCoders in general has scheluded one last insult code tests on the Eve the begining of the new Era

by there deeds we know and will long remember this last (I hope last prehaps the ARRL divise some further insult)

W1AW Special Event, Midnight Exam Sessions to Mark New Amateur Rules: As new Amateur Radio Service rules phase in Friday, February 23, eliminating the Morse code requirement, Hiram Percy Maxim Memorial Station W1AW will mark the milestone with a weekend-long special event. In addition, a number of Central Connecticut volunteer examiners will be on hand at ARRL Headquarters -- both before and after the new rules become effective at 12:01 AM EST -- to offer Amateur Radio examinations under the current and new rules. ARRL Regulatory Information Specialist Dan Henderson, N1ND, is helping to coordinate the celebration. He says Headquarters staff and other volunteers will keep W1AW active for the "Welcome Weekend" event.

"W1AW will be on the air all weekend for this special event to celebrate the fact that so many amateurs have gained or will earn new privileges as a result of the rule changes," he said. "The station will operate starting at 12:01 AM Eastern Time on Friday, February 23, continuing into the wee hours and resuming operation during the day. Then W1AW will be on the air on both days of the weekend, from 10 AM until 5 PM -- perhaps longer as conditions and enthusiasm dictate."

Operation will be on both SSB and CW. W1AW operators will concentrate their activities on the Technician and General class HF subbands. On SSB, the station will use its normal phone frequencies -- 1.811, 3.990, 7.290, 14.290, 18.160 and 21.390 MHz. On 10 meters, W1AW will operate SSB on or about 28.480 MHz.

Henderson says operating will be casual unless pileups develop. "The purpose is to welcome newcomers to new privileges," he said.

"First Contact" certificates will be available as part of this event. ARRL invites anyone making a first contact or first HF contact to enter the contact information on the ARRL "Welcome Weekend" Web site http://www.arrl.org/HFWelcome/ and receive a certificate in return. "If the first contact is with W1AW we will also be including a W1AW QSL card for the contact," Henderson added.

The ARRL anticipates a huge influx of upgrade applications once the Morse code requirement disappears. In addition, all Technician licensees will have limited HF privileges starting February 23, whether or not they've passed a Morse code test.

Amateur Radio exam sessions both before and after the zero hour will offer an opportunity for applicants either to upgrade under the outgoing licensing rules at the last possible opportunity or under the new licensing rules at the first possible opportunity.

"Dual exam sessions are scheduled at ARRL Headquarters around the effective time of the new licensing rules," says Brennan Price, N4QX, a former ARRL staff member and an ARRL VEC volunteer examiner. "At 11 PM on February 22, a session will be held for candidates wishing to upgrade under the existing rules. A few folks have expressed interest in such a session." Price says all Amateur Radio written and telegraphy elements will be offered until midnight.

"At 12:01 AM February 23, a second session will begin under the new licensing rules," he said. "Examiners will not only be evaluating previously earned Certificates of Successful Completion of Exam (CSCEs) for upgrades, but will be offering all written elements." Two teams of volunteer examiners will be on site until all applicants have been served.

On or after February 23, applicants upgrading on the basis of a valid CSCE must present the certificate for element credit, fill out an application and pay any applicable exam session fee, which most VECs charge. Only after the VE team has issued a CSCE for upgrade credit may applicants actually use their new operating privileges on the air.

Additional details and more information will be available on the ARRL Web site in the days leading up to February 23.

what is the problem re editorial policy

I dind it amusing that insisting that the coments on my Blog be on topic is such a hardship to people that they coment on RRAP about it

one is since the topic is radio the coment needs to be radio related IOW calling my wife a shemale in response to a post about my new radio or the end of code testing just doesn't make it.

two, posting a dozen coment s becuase you have not noticed that coments are moderated to prevent the above abuse will get most of your coments dumped in the bit bucket I will choose which of your coments

gets through in that case

three I will not post your coment if I consider it libelous against a third party, My wife My father my father inlaw and the esp the makers of the gear I buy and use' so saying "ranger sucks...." don't make it either

four spam don't make it either although I supose if you are selling something I migh t seel you a posting or accept some other arrangement

in general nothing about sexuality is going to make it to this blog although I am condsidering authoring such a blog in the future, a na excepttion might be coments about some repost of a post I might here but that is case by case

tsk tsk children

trying to post a a dozen or so insulting coments to this blog just doesn't work since i moderate them

it is a also a rude thing to do to your host

I will add it seems interesting that there are those that want to want i have an oblibigation to assit them in comiting a crime where I myself would be the victum of that crime

some nice word from the Pres (or his staff)

found on QRZ.com I assume it is from the ARRL letter or something like that NEWINGTON, CT, Jan 16, 2007 -- President George W. Bush has written the ARRL to recognize the just-ended Hello Amateur Radio public relations campaign and to extend "greetings to all those celebrating 100 years of voices over the airwaves." The president said the centennial of Reginald Fessenden's landmark Christmas Eve 1906 voice broadcast "opened the door for technological advances" that improved the lives of people around the world.

"I appreciate all who work in radio, and I am grateful to the Amateur Radio operators who provide emergency communications that help make our country safer and more secure," President Bush wrote. "Your good work strengthens our society and represents the American spirit."

on my capture of the spamblog

http://marksspamblog.blogspot.com/
was a creation of someone person or persons unknown to me but they made the mistake of using one of my real email addies to on the blog and in seting it so the posting of coments to the blog would result in them being emailed it and it become clear Google would not honor the ToS I simply used the tool the blogger was using to harass me and gain control of . then I deleted the ofensinve cotent and left the blog that sit there now

if you want to report me the feds go for it that you were using the blog to harrass and libel me I can't see where a crime was coimited but you know I have the guts to say go for it

an interesting sight for a kosher Ham

I have been watching with interest the recent cyber terror attacks directed aginst the neoNAZI's like http://www.vonbluvensshow.blogspot.com/ and http://halturnershow.blogspot.com/ and other NeoNAI ayran nation type groups. It satrted with massive efforts to overload Hal turners server(s) and has spread to others amusing that Nazi.org seems unaffected

the prerps in this intereternet seem to be http://turnerchan.blogspot.com/ although some darkly suggest that various WN or NeoNazis are responible I doubt the latter as it would seem beyond their ken although each Figure is trying to exploit the matter for any benfit they can direve from it

so i watch and wait to see what developes

as I belive the rest of us should a rejoiner to "now you are HF active"

first I thank the author for his thought wether or I not I agree with you I do respect.
OTOH I simply feel you and others have failed to understand what you were up against in the Code test fight which I don't consider quite over yet, anymore than "mission acomlished" was the end of the Iraq war. I exepct indeed my inbox have receieved a number of threast if I dare use my new found prevledges, some of these are threats to murder me, my family, my dog my inlaws, (and I truly wish I were kidding I have gotten all of those threats and more since THE DAY) Till I am able to operate on the Air the battle is not over. I did not take part in this fight only to lose the resulting "peace" I know full well I will encounter jamming of my signals. I do now from time to time on VHF and up, I know this will presist

The question you pose begs the question: why do I want to use this mode? I spent year in my youth trying and failing to obtain a Novice License, the experence of 5 year trying and failing is certainly incentive to try again 20 some almost 30 year older than when I started. And suppose you had a wand that over come that and sudden allow my brain to process these signals: what then do I gain? one more mode amoug many others? one I must lisstrain to hear through static? if I am straining to hear throught the static I I am seeking the reward of seeking Human Contact. Morse Coded CW offers me only the interent chatroom plus the noise of HF. it hardly seems worth it.

If I were to take this step (which in may case I think beyond any ability I have anything close close to the time to expend on) who do I get to "talk" to the same people I least want to contact are amoug them.

People call me lazy because I don't want to spend even more effort than I have. to a point I supose that is fair, but I would contend this is the crux of the Code debate. I don't value effort for efforts sake. I value efofrts vs results I.E. Profit, yes the Kosher Ham is capitalist Pig and proud of it. I want the most return from my effort in the case of Our Hobby (which has it service overtones etc) I want to to maximize the return. and no matter how I try to look at it. I see MorseCoded CW as a poor risk and bad investment.

I am banned from QRZ for saying basicaly 'never stop.. never stop fighting till the fight is done" the code war is not yet over, indeed sadly I fear i may never live to see the end of that war even though I am 42 and pretty good health. The fight will be over when the ARS is aplce i can operate on the air with it being resasonable bet that I may entouer some the proCoder retain their chip the size of RMS Titanic on their shoulders. then war is over, how long is up the side the did not prevail in working of this republic ps I have been reading most of the stuff on qrz on this matter the original piece is about the only I realy felt was worth comenting on an interesting piece of writing from QRZ.com

TITLE: "SO NOW YOU'RE HF-ACTIVE"

© Heath Roberts, KE5FRF
With permission granted by the author to distribute with appropriate intellectual credit.

"Wow, I never thought this day would come. The FCC finally flexed its regulatory muscle and notified the world that US Amateur Radio operators will no longer be required to pass a Morse code proficiency test to indulge in the world below 50 Mhz. What does this mean for ME?"

This is a fair an honest question that many Technician class amateurs will be faced with in the coming weeks and months as American hams learn to accept the end of a long standing tradition and the beginning of a new era. It is natural to be excited about the new privileges that you will be granted. You are eager to plan your new HF station, purchase some new gear, and maybe even erect a tower and directional antenna for that DX band you've been hearing such great things about. There is so much out there to do and be a part of, you don't know where to begin.

I can assure you, this is a road that everyone has traveled in their quest as an amateur operator, code or not. You'll be certain to receive the wise counsel of some older fellow who has more than a few tips to share. A friend who upgraded his license to General last year will offer his insight into propagation and techniques for busting a pile-up. The local club will be offering a class on operating procedures. No worries, for there is a lot of resources at your disposal. All you must do is display a willingness to learn.

As exciting as the news is for you and as eager as you are, you can't help but wonder what mode you will like the best. Everyone says that PSK-31 offers the most efficient use of the spectrum and can cut through a host of propagation conditions that other modes can't. You saw an Extra class ham on Field Day working a digital station and this was the mode he used. It was interesting and he sure looked like he was having fun, but it kind of reminded you of an internet chat room like QRZ.COM.

Your buddy, the guy who upgraded his license before the new rules, swears that SSB is the most fun mode. He barely squeaked by on his code test and never looked back. He regularly checks into the WAS nets and is close to his goal on 80 meters and already confirmed 40 meters. There certainly won't be a lack of new friends to make on phone. Hmm...Maybe this will become your favorite mode too.

But there's one other fellow who keeps showing up and offering you suggestions that make a lot of sense but you're just not sure if you have it in you. He's the local CW guru and he spent the last two years coaxing you to master the code before the requirement was dropped, but you failed to heed his advice. You know it is probably too late to learn it now, the new rules go into effect next week, but you must admit that with the "pressure" off the idea of casually studying the code is intriguing. You've read some stuff on the internet about colorful figures in the history of amateur radio and telegraphy like Hiram Percy Maxim and T.R. McElroy. You've watched your CW friend use his Blue Racer during a contest and were fascinated by his skills. You feel a certain connection to this storied tradition even when you tap out "SOS" on your desk with your index finger. What is stopping you from turning your years of procrastination into something you think might benefit you in the long run?

My friend the answer is simple. Nothing is stopping you, nothing at all except the same thing that hindered every CW op who ever "dit his first dah." Learning Morse code is a work in progress. It is an endeavor of achievement that has a certain beginning but no real end. No matter what skill level your CW associates may brag to possess, they all make mistakes and have plenty of room for improvement. Just knowing this should set your mind at ease and give you inspiration!

Yep, you finally got that new HF rig via UPS delivery. The tower isn't up yet, but you managed to hoist a coax fed dipole into the old oak tree in the back yard. You cut it for 40 meters in hopes that it will offer the most playing time at this point in the sunspot cycle. Everything is hooked up and ready to go.

Power "ON"....Shschshhhschhtishahshhi....Static. "Hmmm what frequency is that? Oh, out of band."....Zzschshizzz...dadidadit dadadidah...dadidadit dadadidah. Oh boy, you recognize that familiar sound. Someone is calling CQ in code. Well, at least you know your antenna and feed line are working ok. Tune up...tune down...tune up. Nothing but static crashes and faint voices. You can't make anything out. Everything seems to be in order, filters configured for SSB. This is 40 meters, and you are on the lower sideband. "Oh well, I guess the band is dead".

So you tune back down to the CW sub band. Amazingly, as you move back to that CQ frequency, you must hear at least three ongoing QSOs along the way. Two of them are way to fast to make heads or tails, but one guy is sending slow enough that even YOU can copy a few of his characters. "Wow", you think. "I could do THAT!" You put the headphones on and lean back in your chair, close your eyes, and listen to the rhythm. You only know a handful of letters...S,O,C,Q....uh..uh...well SOS and CQ...but you are amazed that every time you hear these characters you immediately recognize them. "Hey, 26 letters in the alphabet, and I already know four!" You think to yourself, "Not bad."

My friend, you've just been bitten by the bug. There is a mystery behind all of those funny tones in the ether, and we've all found a childlike fascination with them at some point. You stand on the threshold of letting it be more than a fleeting interest. You have an opportunity before you to affiliate yourself with a tradition that has stood the test of time, and will stand strong many, many more years despite the actions of the Commission. Will you be just another op who jumps on board the sideband rollercoaster of QRM and static, or will you take the time to learn and develop a skill that will stay with you a lifetime?

This message is brought to you in hopes that you will consider the opportunities that CW brings. There is a large group of hams young and old whose only desire is to see the art and skill of telegraphy passed on for as long as it is feasible. Back before the FCC R&O, many of these folks seemed abrasive, but you must realize that they knew this day was coming but wanted nothing more than to delay it for as long as they could. Their desire is not to hold back deserving and ambitious hams that have much to offer. It never was. They simply seek to maintain the traditions which are the history of this hobby. They want to preserve and foster a mode of communication that they love and are proud to be a part of. Were their concerns and their motivations so unworthy?

Next time you fire up that brand new rig and hear the tell-tale music of Samuel Morse's creation, think about these things, and consider getting in touch with that fellow with the Vibroplex. I'm sure he'll be glad to invite you to his shack to show off his bug collection, and no doubt he'd be the first to take the time out to teach you those other 22 letters and some numbers to boot. Just think about it.

Sorry, Mr. Raving Homophobic Bastard, I haven't, nor do I care to bother. I intend to turn rec.radio.amateur.policy into a smoking crater anyway, once I get around to it. It's a cesspool of stalking scum, and needs to be destroyed.

My. What another breath of fresh air it is to be able to post to these groups sans Mark.

I think I'll post a radio related question for Ambassador Heil. Then Len can snort his derision as he changes his Relys.

I'm sorry that you don't like it, Len, but you are a beginner or neophyte in amateur radio. You're just getting started. You're just getting your feet wet.

Don't worry, you'll get the hang of it.

3558. RG-6 Coaxial Cable for Ham use

I've recently read comments that several Hams have been using the RG-6 coaxial cable instead of the standard RG-8 or other commonly accepted cables such as RG-58.
One said that he buys this RG-6 at one of the home warehouse stores and buys it in 500 foot spools. He said it is far less expensive than the commonly accepted cables we purchase from various Ham outlets.
Yes, it is 75 Ohm cable, but the users of same claim that it works quite well and can withstand higher voltages than advertised and more than one user claimed that they could run 1,500 watts through the cable with no apparent deterioration.

If this is so, then I missed this open secret. Any input would be welcome...especially the experiences of you who use it. I just happen to have a spool of this cable in my garage that I purchased at an estate auction some years ago and if it works as said, then I will cancel my order with The Wireman.

Thanks in advance for your comments.

This may well be so, but there are some new Generals who have yet to cease their CB lingo.
I heard one such new AG on 75M this evening who was asking, "How do you copy me?". He went on to use other CB lingo bywords such as, "I hear ya." and, My handle is...". Maybe with a little guidance from the Coded Hams, he will see the error of his ways and make changes accordingly. God help us if our bands begin to sound like CB channel 19.
Yup. I heard that, I did.

No "hate and discontent" here, but the first time I hear an echo box on the Ham bands I will...well, better leave that unsaid.

Gee. Some folks refuse to let sleeping dogs alone. Perhaps they feel some perverse sense of self gratification by dredging Old History into the front.

Yep, that is a REAL BIG ONE in my book.

Too bad the last well known crucifixion was Jesus and you never heard of a good one thereafter! If we'd just crucify a couple of the b*st*rds we'd break 'em of the bad habit! Krist, what do they think this is,
America where one is free?

Perhaps the time for communism has come, not only would be able to pressure 'em to speak as we'd like, we could demand they think as we'd like!

10-fer good-buddy? Yanno what I mean? Hows the skip out yer way? I'd

The 75 ohm part should not (in general) be a problem. You could always use a tuner if there is an issue. However, here are the things you should check.

1. Loss per hundred feet (see the ARRL antenna book) for the frequencies you are going to use. A long run at VHF/UHF might be an issue.
2. Check its rated power versus the power you plan to run. If it's TV cable (which it probably is), I doubt that it is rated very high. I've never checked so can't really say. However, just because some people get away with running 1500 watts through it doesn't mean you should. The deterioration may not be immediately evident. It may simply shorten its life and you'ld be replacing it more often.
3. Check to see it's UV rating. Outdoor environments are hard enough on coax. Some are designed for indoor use and others for outdoor use. If this is the indoor kind, it will deteriorate much faster if used outdoors and you will be replacing it more often.

The antenna system (and this includes the coax) is perhaps the most important part of your setup. It's best to do it right so check on the items I mention. Don't be like the classic case of the fisherman who buys a $500 rod but puts on a $5 reel and nickel fishing line and then is always cussing that the line snarls and the reel jams.

In other words don't be penny wise and pound foolish. Make sure that the coax is suitable for the application.

I haven't bought coax in a long time (probably due to replace the old by now) but I believe his is rated for outdoor environments and UV exposure.

Since when is "How do you copy me?" CB lingo. I hear it all the time from hams of many years experience. Also from what I read, the phrase "My handle is ...." used to be standard ham speak many decades ago and was abandoned when the CB operators picked it up. The phrase "I hear ya" is also not uncommon. So to attribute this to newly upgraded hams is a little silly.

The 75 ohm cable is fine for usage. There are several minor problems to watch out for. The major one is most of it is aluminum shielding and can not be soldered to. The center conductor is often copper coated steel which is another mechanical problem.
I am not sure about the power rating for the rg-6 but should be fine for the 100 watt rigs. The swr meters may not act correctly with the 77 ohm cable, but you can still adjust for minimum swr.

Hello Dee,

IMHO it wasn't abandoned by hams just because cb folks picked it up, but because they changed the meaning.

"Handle" used to just be slang for "name". Nothing deceptive or hidden about it. It wasn't even specific to radio; lots of folks used "handle" that way in general conversation.

But in cb use it quickly came to mean "pseudonym"
- specifically, a phony name adopted to avoid being positively identified. A way to hide, IOW.

That's why hams stopped using it.

On the subject of "no change" I would point out that the number of new amateurs since the rules change is only a tiny fraction of the current total. Upgrades are similarly small in number.

Which hams, Jim? I've been using the term since I was a teen, and am not inclined to stop just because another radio service also uses the term. Guess I'm just old-fashioned.

Talked to a young fella on the repeater the other day who introduced himself by saying "my first personal is Jim and you're my first contact, QSL?".

He seemed like a nice sort, delighted that he had just received his shiny new call sign, and was anxious to make some new friends. Kinda sounded like I felt when I put my new call sign on the air the first time way back when, except probably brighter, cuz Jim is one of those young computer jocks. Me, I still got problems with the LL scale on my Pickett slide rule. Yep, I think Jim sounded brighter than me, quick to catch on to things.

But I don't think Jim will be back on the repeater. Before I had a chance to really get to know much about Jim, or even wrangle an invite to lunch, another station, with an impressive "senior" call sign joined the contact, flashed his shiny Radio Cop badge, and proceeded to issue Jim a "verbal speeding ticket" for improper lingo on the radio. "Radio Cop" said the term "personal" (and for that matter "handle") were unwelcome in ham radio, and that Q-signals were not to be used on VHF voice. Just generally made my newfound friend feel like an unwashed interloper. (Gosh, I've been saying "handle" since I was a conditional class. Slow to catch on, you know.)

Now I should point out that "Radio Cop" took pains to appear very well meaning. Didn't use any bad words that I noticed, was quite polite, even seemed like he was trying to be "helpful." In other words, he thought he was doing Jim a favor by pointing out his transgression from our sacred Amateur Radio way of doing things. I think Jim felt just the same way I did back in a new school in third grade when the well meaning teacher pointed out that "we don't keep our pencil behind our ear in this room." Sure enough, I looked around and none of my new classmates had pencils behind their ears. Sure was embarrassing, and at that moment I really wished I was back with my good old buddies in second grade. Now, if I'd been allowed to hang out a couple of days, I'm sure I would have learned how to properly stow my pencil. And if Jim would have hung around a couple of days on our repeater I just bet

he would have noticed that his lingo, perhaps learned in another radio service, was a bit out of place, and pretty soon Jim would sound "just like the rest of us." Like I said, he seemed pretty bright to me, quick to catch on to things.

"Radio Cop", you have kept our hobby uncorrupted. I heard Jim down around 27 Mhz this morning, and saw his ad on eBay trying to sell his barely used 2-meter HT. I'm gonna miss my new friend Jim, because I think I could have learned something from him. Maybe you could have also.

Like I said, he seemed pretty bright to me, quick to catch on to things.

Well ...

It is more like attempting to point out to someone they have a bugger hanging from their nose, and you just can't quite get the point across.

Yanno, like you begin wondering what is up, are they just too stupid to get the point or they are just so slovenly they don't mind the depth of human depravity they have sunk too. Yanno, like when a child molester attempts to blame his perversion on the child, i.e. "the child was dressing too sexy", appearing "older than their age", "wanted it", etc.

But, at my age, I have seen all this before, but usually it was only in the "bad part of town" where you would find such ... I have never really been ashamed of being a ham, but I have been so ashamed for other hams I have kept the fact hidden--least I be grouped with them ...

Glenn Beck admitted he is a perver when his lead-in to a story was: "
And I should know".

He was on his show the other night talking about the modus operandi for a sex pervert when, in inducing the story, he said "And I should know".

No wonder Glenn doesn't like the parading of women who are dead or are 'playing dead' for the gratification of some who enjoy such things.
He would rather glory in his perversion, and exclude others the right to endulge theirs!

That's a Republican for you though - infringing on the rights of

The "good" ones, the "professional amateurs." :-)

"Fine business, old man" [on your post].

Hans, it is the grande olde Territorial Imperative of humans at work in the amateur radio hobby. They have accumulated "tenure" as amateurs and think they OWN the place...and can then Tell Everyone Else What To Do.

On radio, isolated and insulated from direct personal interaction (or on the Internet, shielded by time and space of message exchange), these OLD MEN can get as rough and tough as they imagine themselves to be. It's not too different from "boys in da 'hood" trying to "rule the territory." In-person, face-to-face, they will back down and not be so blatantly aggressive nor "authoritative." I've tested that for about a half century in various activities...where the "old men" want to assert their "ownership" of whatever is going on AS IF they had such "authority." They don't.
They back down in-person.

> I've been using the term since I was a teen, and am >not inclined to stop just because another radio service also uses the >term.

Well, I didn't get INTO radio communications until I was twenty and then in the no-nonsense, non-hobby of military communications. I already knew what a "QSY" was but it was used in conversation and on the TTY order-wire "logs" as just meaning 'change the frequency.' I also knew what "roger" meant as an affirmation and so did most of the others at the military station. That and lots of other words and phrases that were NOT from amateurism in communications. It's just JARGON of a particular radio activity and nobody should get "fired" or even laid-off because they "talk funny" to the grande olde men of ham radio.

A long time ago when I thought it would be fun to know how to get a private pilot license, I had two instructors depending on when I could get time and money for lessons. One was a good guy concentrating on teaching flying skills. The other was an "authoritative" type who thought he knew everything about anything. With the latter I had arguments about "applying for a Restricted 3rd Class Radiotelephone Operator license "because everyone did it." I'd already had my First 'Phone for ten years at that time...and the FCC then would have delayed or dismissed such an application by me. He couldn't understand that because "everyone [students] got one" and he 'ordered' it. Now, I didn't have the "right stuff" to FLY but operating the simple comm-nav radios was a snap for me. He didn't like that because he had a compulsion to Be In Control. On everything.

On the next-to-the-last lesson, while airborne, the VNY tower gave a terse change to an alternate frequency (all ATC convos are terse, no-nonsense). I reached over and changed the comm frequency without thinking about it and acknowledged it to the tower. Instructor blew up, shouted "my airplane" and terminated the lesson by landing. No instructions about FLYING good, bad, or indifferent...seemed I didn't "ask HIS permission about operating a radio." Worse yet, on the ground, I had the terrible audacity to speak to the manager of the flying service afterwards. No fees that day, an equitable settlement by a reasonable manager. My late first wife talked me out of spending money for lessons after the next lesson and I quit due to monetary pressures even though I got the "good" instructor back. We bought a house instead.

Segue to now and a newly-assigned Amateur Extra license after having a First 'Phone (Commercial) license for 51 years...it changed to a General (Commercial) with no renewal necessary. If some Olde Manne with a Control Compulsion wants to chew me out for "not using 'approved, official' jargon on the air, I will (politely) tell him to go stuff it. I didn't get my ham license to be a "professional amateur" or have fanciful dreams of amateur glory...nor take ORDERS from some Control Freaks who think they are some kind of "boss" of the amateur airwaves. Amateur radio is supposed to be about communicating with like-minded hobbyists who enjoy shared interests. It isn't an extension of WORK for "bosses" and sure as hell isn't some kind of para-military radio thing using official never-to-be-violated official, authorized procedure.

I've got a fairly nice NEW amateur station, some expensive equipment, and some ham friends (friends from personal acquaintenceship off the radio) to talk to. It is fun in this beginning. But, if enough Control Freaks want to get "on my case" - or anyone else's, especially younger folks with less experience than I - then it won't be enjoyable. I'll just sell it at a loss and chalk it up to a bad experience in life. I didn't sign up to be some kind of "professional amateur." I'm NOT bound by regulations or some radio version of Miss Manners to use some quasi-official jargon because "that's what 'everyone' does,

has always done."

>Guess I'm just old-fashioned.

No, just in tune with REALITY, Hans. U.S. Amateur Radio is a basically a hobby involving a technology that is fascinating to some, fascinating enough to get professionals involved in it without getting amateur radio licenses.

Radio as a communications medium is only 111 years old. The technology has made enormous quantum jumps of advancement in that short period. "Radio" has CHANGED. Some humans haven't. THOSE humans are the "old-fashioned" ones.

Roger that? :-)

I would not run it up the tower, or anywhere else that is hard to get at.
Without spending an arm and a leg, use crimp on connectors. I have some PL259 type crimp ons (Digikey), and they work fine, even at a KW+. I did solder the center conductor on the LMR240 (same diameter as RG6). The center conductor might be way too small for the hole in the connector; in that case stuff some pieces of wire in next to the center conductor so you are not connected through solder only.

I might point out to Dee that the RG-6 I see is indeed meant for outdoor use. Our local dish installers us it as their standard feedline.

Most of the hams I know, and work, Hans.

In my almost 40 years as an active radio amateur,
I can't recall more than a handful who have used the term "handle" to refer to their own name on the air - or off.

> I've been using the term since I was a teen, and > am > not inclined to stop just because another radio > service also uses the > term.

I'm not saying you should or shouldn't use the term, Hans. Just that very few hams use it anymore, and
why.

Frankly, I can't understand why someone would use terms like "handle" or "first personal" instead of "name", since the latter is both shorter and more easily understood.

> Guess I'm just old-fashioned.

Not that there's anything wrong with that.

--

The way I teach proper on-the-air procedure is by example, not lectures. If I heard someone do the "first personal.....QSL?" stuff on the air, I wouldn't give a lecture, I'd just set a better example by doing it the right way. If the new guy is as smart and quick as you describe, he'd pick it up without a lecture.

The only time a mention is justified, IMHO, is when there's a possible rule violation. In a case like that, a simple comment ("say, it's time to ID") works best.

radio?

Amateur radio is the only way to get amateur radio experience,
Len.

Do you think you know more about amateur radio than someone who has been an active radio amateur for several decades?

And a couple of weeks as a licensed radio amateur. That makes you an amateur radio neophyte, Len. A beginner, novice, newcomer, wet-behind-the-ears tyro.Not that there's anything wrong with that.

What "revolution", Len?

It's been about six weeks since the rules change, and there hasn't been any tremendous increase in the number of new hams nor a huge number of upgrades. Yes, there have been more than in previous months but it's hardly enough to be a "revolution".

Let's see...you bought some manufactured equipment,
put together a basic station, and made a few contacts using voice modes like SSB and FM. How "revolutionary" is that?

Nothing wrong with it as long as you follow the rules and good amateur radio practice, but it's hardly a revolution.

Are you one of the peasants, Len? You act more

Of the few samples that I looked at, the black RG6 was outdoor rated, the white jacketed was not. Kind of makes sense. Didn't see any power ratings at the Belden site, but I seem to recall seeing ratings in the few hundred W range.

March's final numbers are in.

Continuing with the trend in previous months, we saw a continued downward trend in the total number of licensed amateurs. In fact, since Speroni has been keeping statistics since 1997, the total number of licensed amateurs in March 07 -- a month after the "no-code 'revolution'" -- is at a historic low.

Also, for the first time since 1994, we saw an actual decrease in the number of licensed Technican-class operators.

If these observations bear out into the future, all the "revolution" managed to accomplish is give a bunch of no-code techs HF privileges, and did little else to "bring new blood" into the hobby, like some people have claimed for decades the code test was prohibiting.

Many vocations and avocations have a "lingo" which, while it may strike outsiders as "quaint" or "affected", is part of the fraternity. Auto racers say "skins" instead of "tires", bikers talk about "Hogs", not Harley Davidsons, old time technicians say "mickey-mikes" instead of "pico farads", sailors say
"fart sack" instead of "matress cover", and some hams say "QSL" instead of "yes". I say, who cares.... my grammar teacher isn't a ham, so she won't catch me, and a Russian, American, or Brazilian ham will all understand "Thanks for the QSO" but they may not understand "I appreciate the delightful conversation".

For those who get their shorts all knotted up about CB lingo on the ham
bands, here is an excerpt from a book written 60 years ago by Clinton DeSoto.

"Among radio amateurs there is a genuine brotherhood and informal camaraderie. Everyone is called by his "handle" -- his first name or nickname. The president of the Chicago Stock Exchange and the mechanic in a Birmingham garage are just "Paul" and "Joe" when they meet on the air."

So much for "handle" being a CB term, "not used by hams".

Here are some more numbers of current,
FCC issued amateur radio licenses held by individuals:

As of February 22, 2007:

Novice - 22,896 (3.5%)
Technician - 293,508 (44.8%)
Technician Plus - 30,818 (4.7%)
General - 130,138 (19.9%)
Advanced - 69,050 (10.5%)
Extra - 108,270 (16.5%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 324,326 (49.5%)

Total all classes - 654,680

As of April 6, 2007:

Novice - 22,396 (3.4%)
Technician - 288,621 (44.1%)
Technician Plus - 29,128 (4.4%)
General - 136,992 (20.9%)
Advanced - 68,408 (10.4%)
Extra - 109,591 (16.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 317,749 (48.5%)

Total all classes - 655,136

That total-all-classes number wanders all over the place, btw. For example, on April 1, 2007, it was 654,468.

> Also, for the first time since 1994, we saw an actual decrease in the

Why should that be a surprise? A lot of Techs upgraded, and at least some newcomers bypassed Tech altogether,

That's a big IF. IMHO it's way too soon to tell. Six months or a year is more like it, not a month or six weeks.

One thing that may happen is lots more new hams as the word gets out. Another is that the word may already be out, and the recent flurry of activity may not last.

Time will tell.

RG-6 will take the legal limit on at least 80 and 160m and probably on 40m. It is available in direct burial type. The new, weather-proof crimp on connectors are wonderful.

Several companies make or sell the PL-251 to F connector adaptors.

W8JI had some informative technical posts on the subject on the topband

I know a lot of people who aren't working in amateur radio. I'd imagine that 85% of the people I know aren't a part of amateur radio. Those who are in amateur radio are likely aware that the FCC nowhere calls amateur radio a hobby.

I would think the power level would be more voltage limiated. Most of the rg6 is rated around 300 to 350 volts. This is about 1200 watts on a matched line. derate for a swr of say 3 or 4 to 1 and you get to run about 300 to 400 watts into it,

Of course, Hans. But that's not the point I was making. Lingo, jargon, or whatever you call it,
usually evolves because it's a shorthand way of expressing something. It's done to be clear,
not to be quaint or affected.

In my line of work, it is not uncommon to have a conversation that is so full of lingo/jargon as to be completely incomprehensible to outsiders.

Who said it wasn't used by hams 60 years ago, Hans?

When DeSoto wrote that, "handle" simply meant "name" or "nickname". It wasn't even a strictly radio term, either.

Back in the 1960s, many cb folks began to use "handles" instead of callsigns, even though in those days licenses and callsigns were required for that service (except for 100 milliwatt walkie talkies). In cb lingo, "handle" came to mean "a name used to conceal one's real identity". In relatively few years, the use of handles pretty much replaced the use of callsigns on cb.

That new definition caused many hams (and others) to stop using
"handle" for "name" or "nickname".

That's historical fact.

Trouble is unless people already know about amateur radio, they had no idea what the requirements were and that they have recently changed. Changing requirements does nothing to let people know that amateur radio exists and why they might be interested.

http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/pdf/repeater1.pdf

is one example - in amongst all the good advice, page 3 tells us how to talk.

And lets not forget the ever popular "How to sound like a Lid"

It's a joke, I suppose. Lots of things we're not supposed to say there, and nothing like ridicule to make the folks feel welcome.

HOW TO SOUND LIKE A LID

Step One: Use as many "Q" signals as possible. Yes, I know they were invented solely for CW and are totally inappropriate for two meter FM, but they are fun and entertaining. They keep people guessing as to what you really meant. I.E. "I'm going to QSY to the phone." Can you really change frequencies to the phone? QSL used to mean, "I am acknowledging receipt", but now it appears to mean, "yes" or "OK". I guess I missed it when the ARRL changed the meaning. It is also best to use "OK" and "QSL" together. Redundancy is the better part of Lid-dom.

Step Two: Never laugh when you can say "HI HI". No one will ever know you aren't a long time CW rag-chewer if you don't tell them. They'll think you've been on since the days of Marconi.

Step Three: Utilize an alternative vocabulary. Use words like "destinated" and "negatory". It's OK to make up your own words here.

I.E. "Yeah Tom, I "pheelbart zaphonix" occasionally myself."

Step Four: Always say "XX4XXX" (Insert your own call) "for I. D." As mentioned in Step One, anything that creates redundancy is always encouraged. That's why we have the Department of Redundancy Department. (Please note that you can follow your call with "for identification purposes" instead of "for I. D." While taking longer to say, it is worth more "LID points".

Step Five: The better the copy on two meter FM, the more you should use phonetics. Names should be especially used if they are short or common ones. I.E. "My name is Al... Alpha Lima" or "Jack.. Juliet Alpha Charlie Kilo." If at all possible use the less common HF phonetics "A4SM... America, Number Four, Sugar Mexico." And for maximum "LID points", make up unintelligible phonetics. "My name is Bob... Billibong Oregano Bumperpool."

Step Six: Always give the calls of yourself and everyone who is (or has been) in the group, whether they are still there or not. While this has been unnecessary for years, it is still a great memory test. You may also use "and the group" if you are an "old timer" or just have a bad memory. Extra points for saying everyone's call and then clearing in a silly way "K2PKK, Chow, Chow."

Step Seven: Whenever possible, use the wrong terminology. It keeps people guessing. Use "modulation" when you mean "deviation", and vice-versa.

Step Eight: If someone asks for a break, always finish your turn, taking as long as possible before turning it over. Whenever possible, pass it around a few times first. This will discourage the breaker, and if it is an emergency, encourage him to switch to another repeater and not bother you.

Step Nine: Always ask involved questions of the person who is trying to sign out. Never let him get by with just a "yes" or "no" answer. Make it a question that will take him a long time to answer.

Step Ten: The less you know on a subject, the more you should speculate about it in the roundtable. Also the amount of time you spend on the subject should be inversely proportionate to your knowledge of the subject even though you have no damn clue.

Step Eleven: Always make sure you try to communicate with only a handheld and a rubber duck antenna. Also, make sure you work through a repeater that you can hear very well, but it cannot hear you. This will put out a kind of "LID mating call": "Well, Joe, I can hear the repeater just fine here. I wonder why it can't hear me?" You will score maximum LID points if you are mobile, and with the radio lying in the passenger seat.

Step Twelve: If you hear two amateurs start a conversation, wait until they are twenty seconds into their contact, and then break in to make a call, or better yet to use the auto-patch. Make sure you keep the repeater tied up for at least three minutes. This way, once the two have re-established contact, they won't even remember what they were talking about.

Step Thirteen: You hear someone on the repeater giving directions to a visiting amateur. Even if the directions are good, make sure you break in with your own "alternate route but better way to get there" version. This is most effective with several other "would-be LIDs", each giving a different route. By the time the visiting amateur unscrambles all the street names whizzing by in his mind, he should have moved out of the range of the repeater. This keeps you from having to stick around to help the guy get back out of town, later.

Step Fourteen: If an annoying station is bothering you, make sure your other "LID" buddies have a "coded" frequency list. Even though "CODES" are strictly forbidden on Amateur Radio, it's really neat to practice "James Bond" tactics.

Step Fifteen: Always use the National Calling Frequency for general conversations. The more uninteresting, the longer you should use it. Extra points are awarded if you have recently moved from an adjacent frequency for no reason. Make sure when DX is "rolling" in on 52.525 that you hang out there and talk to your friends five miles down the road about the good old CB days!

Step Sixteen: Make sure that if you have a personal problem with someone, you should voice your opinion in a public forum, especially a net. Make sure you give their name, call, and any other identifying remarks. For maximum points, make sure the person in question is not on the repeater, or not available.

Step Seventeen: Make sure you say the first few words of each transmission twice, especially if it is the same thing each time. Like "roger, roger" or "fine business, fine business". I cannot stress enough about encouraging redundancy.

Step Eighteen: If you hear a conversation on a local repeater, break in and ask how each station is receiving you. Of course they will only see the signal of the repeater you are using, but it's that magic moment when you can find a fellow "LID", and get the report. Extra points are awarded if you are using a base station, and the repeater is less than twenty-five air miles from you.

Step Nineteen: Use the repeater for an hour or two at a time, preventing others from using it. Better yet, do it on a daily basis. Your quest is to make people so sick of hearing your voice every time they turn on their radio, they'll move to another frequency. This way you'll lighten the load on the repeater, leaving even more time for you to talk on it.

Step Twenty: See just how much flutter you can generate by operating at handheld power levels too far away from the repeater. Engage people in conversations when you know they wont be able to copy half of what your saying. Even when they say you're un-copyable, continue to string them along by making further transmissions. See just how frustrated you can make the other amateur before he finally signs off in disgust.

Step Twenty - One: Use lots of radio jargon. After all, it makes you feel important using words ordinary people don't say. Who cares if it makes you sound like you just fell off Channel 19 on the citizen's Band? Use phrases such as "Roger on that", "10-4", "I'm on the side", "Your making the trip" and "Negatory on that".

Step Twenty -Two: Use excessive microphone gain. See just how loud you can make your audio. Make sure the audio gain is so high that other amateurs can hear any bugs crawling on your floor. If mobile, make sure the wind noise is loud enough that others have to strain to pick your words out from all the racket.

Step Twenty -Three: Start every transmission with the word "Roger" or "QSL". Sure, you don't need to acknowledge that you received the other transmission in full. After all, you would simply ask for a repeat if you missed something. But consider it your gift to the other amateur to give him solace every few seconds that his transmissions are being received.

Step Twenty -Four: When looking for a contact on a repeater, always say your "listening" or "monitoring" multiple times. I've always found that at least a half dozen times or so is good. Repeating your multiple "listening" ID's every 10 to 15 seconds is even better. Those people who didn't want to talk to you will eventually call you, hoping you'll go away after you have finally made a contact.

Step Twenty - Five: Always use a repeater, even if you can work the other station easily on simplex ... especially if you can make the contact on simplex. The coverage of the repeater you use should be inversely proportional to your distance from the other station.

Step Twenty - Six: When on repeaters using courtesy tones, you should always say "over". Courtesy tones are designed to let everyone know when you have un-keyed but don't let that stop you. Say "over", "back to you" or "go ahead". It serves no useful purpose but don't worry, it's still fun!

Step Twenty - Seven: Use the repeater's autopatch for frivolous routine calls... especially during morning or evening commute times. While pulling into the neighborhood, call home to let them know you'll be there in two minutes.... or, call your spouse to complain about the bad day you had at work. After all, the club has "measured rate" service on their phone line so they get charged for each autopatch call. Your endeavor is to make so many patches in a year that you cost the club at least $20 in phone bills. That way you'll feel you got your money's worth for your dues!

Step Twenty - Eight: Never say "My name is ....." It makes you sound human. If at all possible, use one of the following phrases: a) "The personal here is ..." b) "The handle here is..."

Step Twenty - Nine: Use "73" and "88" incorrectly. Both are already considered plural, but add an "s" to the end anyway. Say "73's" or "88's". Who cares if it means "best regards" and "love and kisses." Better yet, say "seventy thirds"! (By the way, seventy thirds equals about 23.3).

Step Thirty: If the repeater is off the air for service, complain about the fact that it was off the air as soon as it's turned back on. Act as though your entire day has been ruined because the repeater wasn't available when you wanted to use it. Even though you have never paid a penny to help out with the upkeep of it.

These easy steps should put you well on your way to "LID-Hood". I hope these helpful hints will save you some time in your quest to sound like the perfect "LID". I should also note that these steps need not apply to simplex operation, as nobody really gives a crap because that HTX-202 isn't going to get out too far with just a rubber duck.

Here's one from a group that I don't want to identify to avoid embarrasment. It's a rule for their repeater.:

Conduct on the repeater(s) ..... Please do not use "CB " language, this is an Amateur Radio Repeater, not a "CB" repeater....

On yet another repeater "rules page:

"Remember that this repeater is Amateur Radio NOT Citizens Band, therefore we do not use CB language or terminology. Remember that we have names, not handles or personals, nor do we use the 10-code, Q signs, Military Jargon, or Phonetics unnecessarily. Repeaters are for plain language."

That was just from a quick Google search.

We have to face it, Jim. There are a lot of Hams out there who are quite willing to dictate how other people will speak. I'm not even talking about suggestions. One of the pages insisted on it as a condition of using the repeater.

Hams like that are a greater threat to the service than a person who doesn't know Morse code.

According to N2EY.

Here's a different historical fact..... the term "handle" continues alive and well on the ham bands, even in spite of your jeremiad against it.

ARRL is a nice radio club. I've belonged for a long time. But they have no authority to direct us "how to talk". You may feel free to follow whatever practice suits you personally, regardless of "historical facts" you might find posted on rrap.

personally I dont consider it for ham work it appears too far out of spec and cannot be gaurentead to be outdoor rated ie if ordered and the supplier does not have they may send the wrong type. In a warehouse you pay peanuts get monkeys. power wise take the 300 watts and 1/2 it for safety limits.

Lucky Mark. He has copycats who also do not use a spell check program. This guy could be vying to be his twin.
And the comment was made that RG-6 is easily purchased in many of the local Big Box home outlet stores.
And had you researched this further, you'd have seen the comments by Hams who have succesfully used RG-6 for HF use that includes power outputs of up to 1,500 watts with no deleterious effects upon the cable.
One Ham claims that he has been using this very cable for many years with no problems whatsoever.
Sorry, but I will use this cable and find out for myself. And, no, I won't "1/2 it for safety limits."
Wherever did you come up with this out-of-the-hat number, anyway?

The local Home Depot here sells RCA branded RG6 that is meant for outside use. As far as power goes, skinny little RG174 is rated at ~200W. The RG6 has got to be at least that good.

Len:

It is quite amazing. Like a child who is doing exactly what their parents want, they know they are right! What a simple world to live in, "I know code, therefore I have worth!"

Di-dah, di-dah, di-dah and all that. Now that is all gone. The truth has been exposed. Code is dead, only the blind hide in their lies to escape that cruel message meant for them ...

But, since they have built up a whole system of self-worth which ties the simple practice of tapping a key to s-l-o-w-l-y convey a message, they have lost ALL their importance. They now feel a imbecile's-nakedness in an intellectually-important world. Their masks has been destroyed. They always have been the kid who was a bit dense in school, before this they were able to hide this fact. They hid it by placing importance on an autistic talent--tapping key. Now the con, the subversion, the lies no longer work ... everyone knows code has no real meaning in modern communications.

They are now asked to take a back seat on the buss of real life ... and God saw it was good ... 8-)

I must have missed that memo. So did the other 5 people I made contacts with last nite.

Can you scan it as a PDF and mail it to me?

The only thing I "get" is there seems to be a large segment of the No-Code Agenda intent on demonizing morse-code (the mode, not the test) and advocating (albeit, in not direct words, but certainly thru innuendo) for its elimination as a mode of operation in the ARS.

Personally, I enjoy operating in many modes... SSB, FM, and (of course) CW. Likewise I really have no concerns over the fact that someone else chooses not to use CW.

When I make a contact on 20m CW, I'd like to think I'm making a contact w/ a fellow amateur who enjoys using the mode to communicate. Why would someone want to communicate with me using a mode they do not enjoy?

So, given there is still a large segment of HF and low-signal work which is CW-based, and I never have a problem finding a CW HF contact when I go looking, kindly provide the memo which states CW is dead, because I sure missed it.

That's a fine way for the future director of the Roanoke Division to

It's true that the Morse test is gone (a good idea in my opinion), but usage seems as lively as ever. Paraphrasing Mark Twain .... "Reports of the demise of Morse code are greatly exaggerated."

Yes, when made anywhere. You have made your sexual perversions public knowledge but yet you squirm whenever it is mentioned.
You don't make the rules concerning what can be said and where, Cork Soaker.
In fact, you are in violation of several TOS rules yourself.
Hypocrite.

Spoken like the true Sodomite you are, Mark.
No gay bashing, just acknowledging your own admissions.

I just tell it like it is, and you wince at the truth.

Hmmm...despite the slightly-hidden pun in there ("sow" & ham),
I put them down as "tailors" busy, busy manufacturing things

Heil's assignments were given by him as 1985 to 2000, a term of 15 years, NOT "a couple of decades."

Right...according to these amateur professionals, AMATEUR radio does NOT work the same as all other radio. It is "different" and can never be compared to other radio. It's experience is totally different. Uh huh...

Jimmie should WRITE A BOOK, maybe a whole set of volumes on his life and times in amateur radio, pioneering the airwaves of the 1980s with his morse code modes. Here's a suggested working title "200 Meters and Sideways."

If the ARRL doesn't resell it, he can work it up as a promo of a recent motion picture...or get on a Jay Leno show in another morse v. cell-phone-text contest.

Sigh. Another east coastie, warm and welcoming...but demanding that I bow down in "respect" to their mighty macho morsemanship and "years of national service" by twiddling their paddles and beeping in the cause of "homeland security."

Jimmie still thinks that amateur radio works "differently" than all other radio. Perhaps he thinks that way out of ignorance in NOT being acquainted with all other radio or even just parts of all other radio? Maybe he was taught that in his school (that still thinks it was "first" to "invent" the "first electronic computer")?

Yes it DOES matter, Brian. By all that "different" amateur radio, those short QSOs result in life-long friendships and mutual love between morsemen.

Jimmie is merely annoying with his little "game" of adding in question marks that were never written originally. I just did the same thing to him. Pointless exercise. Done to point out how petty and narrow-minded he is in his spite.

QSL cards over a whole wall...another wall filled with certificates of great (amateur) accomplishments...yet another wall filled with photographs (posed photo-ops)
of him with other ham notables...fourth wall stacked with old, yellowing copies of QST going back longer than he has lived. Marker lines on the floor so that "friends and neighbors" know where to stand when "admiring his accomplishments."

Brian, it hasn't sunk into his morsemen's mind yet.

Morsemen's minds are too cluttered with beeps to get the picture of more complex subjects...at least until a Dave Sumner "editorial" explains it all to them in QST.

On VHF first (the discone was up first), then on HF. :-)

What pisses Jimmie off is that I took and passed ALL the test elements at one exam session...without asking for His Permission, too!

"Extra out of the box!" Heil says I "didn't do it,"
yet I did. Sunnuvagun!

His Cronies only know morsemanship. To them, morsemanship

ONLY in amateur radio, Brian...as far as all the privileges, rank, status, etc., which must REALLY piss him off! :-)

Brian, like you, I've voluntarily served the US military; Jimmie never did that. I've worked in radio-electronics full-time since 1952; we don't know where Jimmie is supposed to work or what it is he really does for a living. You have a good family and children and I have a good wife who was my high school sweetheart; we don't know anything about Jimmie's personal life except that he has a younger brother "into radio." Is Jimmie Greater or Lesser than any of us? We don't know enough about Him to compare.

Jimmie PRETENDS to be a "Somebody." Like an "amateur radio historian," pretending to be the olde-tymer, all the while cribbing from OTHER sources of ham radio history. Jimmie PRETENDS to be a real estate "expert" yet he has never dealt up-close-and-personal with any real estate matters in my city or neighborhood...yet he wants to imply He knows more and is therefore the 'superior being' on that. Jimmie PRETENDS to be a statistical archivist with his amateur radio numbers posting...yet those numbers are the SAME as what the ARRL posts plus his own commentary (7 years old) about the "difference between Techs and Tech Plusses."

I don't PRETEND anything. I have opinions and am not scared to voice them. My work experience AND radio licensing is public record if anyone cares to look for it...and I DO have documented evidence to prove that (unlike The Robesin). But, some of the olde-tyme morsemen want to PUT DOWN those that don't share their lofty, god-given opinions. They don't take kindly to such folk and manage to pollute this newsgroup with their "I am better than you" bragging. I didn't decide to get into amateur radio on Their terms and wouldn't want to personally associate with such narrow-minded, arrogant persons. Amateur radio is, to me, much more than morsemanship and something to enjoy by itself, not a vehicle for morsepersons to engage in self-aggrandizement.

FACTUAL ERROR by Heil!

"Extra Out Of The Box" is a colloquial phrase referring to one who takes ALL test elements at one test session and passes all of them. That is what I did on 25 Feb 07.

Four VE examiners in that session, all Amateur Extras who cross-checked each other's scoring for accuracy. An ARRL VEC exam team, their work was checked in Newington and approved...then sent to the FCC who approved my application and granted my Amateur Extra class license on 7 Mar 07.

Judge "Roy Bean" Heil doesn't like that. My license was granted without HIS approval. Tsk, tsk. He should take that to a higher court and DEMAND a retrial (until I am proven "guilty")? Sure seems like it.

>That's a fine way for the future director of the Roanoke Division to >welcome a fellow amateur into the service. You're just the kind of >amateur we need in the leadership.

Maybe the Roanoke Division is like that. I don't know. NOT my territory. If that is the kind of "welcome" a new US radio amateur gets there, it is a wonder they have ANY new amateurs in that Division.

I care less of what another "Division" does. I am a resident of California, the most populous of the USA and also with the most US amateur radio licensees. I've not gotten Heil's "treatment" of newcomers out here, but rather the opposite. I enjoy that in-person and on the air. I'm not ready to visit the land of the east coasties with their aloof, I-am-your-superior-and-rule-over-you attitude. :-(

Fuggem say I.

Excellent point, Dee!

Those whose entire life experience seems tied up in amateur radio have, generally, lost the ability to look at it from the outside. From them there is NO sign that they are encouraging "civilians" to "enter their service." Or, rather,
"THEIR service" since they ARE tied up in it and are very possessive about Their idea of What It Should Be.

The ARRL can do only so much. It is for their membership of those Already In amateur radio. In my opinion, the League has yet to do much and is too wrapped up in getting high-fives for a job (not) well-done from those IN amateur radio.

For a boost to the "civilians" (who might know something about "radio"), there's a better chance of getting promotion aimed at "civilians" through newsstand magazines. One example is Popular Communications...sometimes derided by the IN crowd in amateur radio because it is not solely concerned with ham radio. [CB users might out-number hams by 5:1 to even 7:1, hard to tell since CB isn't licensed] [neither are SWLs]

Hams beating their own drums IN amateur radio isn't doing a thing for getting "civilians" interested. Those hams are too insular, too wrapped up in themselves, to see their negative effect on the hobby. But...they can't be told that because their own egos cloud their mental visibility. :-)

> Why do some Hams try to control what other Hams say?

Heh, the way I see it, it is a combination of Ego, Frustration, and Competitiveness, in varying mixtures of each for each individual.

"Frustration" comes about from daily work, familiy, or just inability to make enough money (that they think they deserve).
They "take it out" on others in places where they feel safe from physical confrontation...such as newsgroups. The syndrome comes across as a "know-it-all" or "boss" with a touch of the Divine Right of Kings. They can ease their own frustration by putting down others; i.e., standing on their shoulders to "elevate themselves."

"Ego" is a big driver. Some who have been IN amateur radio think they are the "boss" because they've been in it so long, have read all about it (in publications geared to their wish-fulfillment fantasies), and think they know everything. One side of that is trying to get others to do as They do, say, and think...they want to project a Role Model for others to emulate. They think they are tops at whatever they do and aren't hesitant about saying it.

"Competitiveness" is more subtle but it exists. See "contests" and wanting to Come Out On Top, getting name-call in some winner's roster, etc. (part of the Ego thing). If someone else encroaches on their "territory" (such as putting out 'numbers' lists), they are compulsively triggered to respond against the encroachers. With the first two it forms the "Territorial Imperative" of some Boyz in da 'Hood thing...no grafitti but plenty of put-downs of their "enemies" in the newsgroup.

Absolutely fascinating behavior patterns. Predictable as all get out. :-) But also quite annoying. They can't see that others get a negative impression of them...so they continue in endless non-arguments of put-downs and general "I'm so much better than YOU" behavior. <shrug>

I always thought U.S. amateur radio was about communications with other like-minded hobbyists, sharing things. Not in amateur radio newsgroups! Nossir! :-)

I read that article, and it seems to me it gives a few common-sense recommendations about operating via amateur radio repeaters.

Is there something wrong with promoting good amateur radio operating techniques? That's all I see in the article.

> And lets not forget the ever popular "How to sound like a Lid"

Is it part of the above article?

>   It's a joke, I suppose. Lots of things we're not supposed to say

It seems to me that there are some operating practices which are better than others. How should we hams promote the better ones and discourage the others?

Is it electro-politically incorrect to even say that hams should operate
certain ways and not others?

Is there anything in the "How to be a lid" article that is good operating technique?

How are newcomers supposed to learn operating better operating techniques if nobody tells them? Sure, ridicule isn't the best way to teach, but what's the best way?

Why do you fear being persecuted? Is it your shady medical record?

Why would you ask that? The lid article is part of a long running little "joke" that I've seen around the net and in a few photocopies. It isn't in that pdf I directed people to.

Use your callsign as directed by the FCC.

Use the repeater taking into account the procedures that make the repeater work correctly (resets, courtesy beeps, tails, etc)

Keep it clean as per the FCC rules. Remember that your mother and children could be listening.

play nice. Use good manners.

That can all be fleshed out some, but we don't need much more than that.

Would it be acceptable if teenagers were not allowed to talk in the the manner in which they speak on the repeater? If one of them were to say "Awesome dood, or "KB3YYY hangin' "" is that a reason to bring down the repeater or send an OO to Riley? Should the Hams who know the "right" way to talk refuse to talk to "that guy".

Amateur Radiospeak is a language just like any other. All languages either grow or go away, elsewise we'd still be speaking the grunts of whatever the first developed language was.

Does that mean that we might add some new words - or even return some old ones? You bet!

The really great part of all this is that no one is forcing us to use those words. I personally cringe when I hear someone speak "HIHI". I mean if it's funny, then laugh! But if a person wants to say it, that is their right, and I'm not going to stop 'em. If someone is using "my handle is" and everyone else is saying "my name is", they will either catch on or not. Either way, it hurts no one. If it bothers a person, they can just not communicate with the so called "CB'er.

Whatever good there is in the article is hidden under layers of sarcasm, mean spirit, and a spectacularly failed attempt at humor.

I must have missed the demand that you bow down in respect or anything else, Len. Where was that part. It is a fact that you're a brand new amateur radio licensee.

I've seen no evidence that your claim is true. He's probably just noted that you acted like a horse's patoot before you obtained an amateur radio license and that you've carried that behavior into amateur radio.

> "Extra out of the box!" Heil says I "didn't do it,"

You can't have, Len. You announced it over seven years back and waited for the regs to change before you took any amateur radio licensing exams. That's not "right out" of anything. If someone tells me, "I'll be right out", no one expects that to mean, "I'll be there in seven years."

You haven't had enough time in amateur radio to be equal to anyone but another neophyte, Len.

It is also apparent that your lack of information on Jim's personal life

It can be demonstrated that Jim has over 40 times as much experience in amateur radio than you, Leonard. Chew on that for a while.

I've never seen evidence that he is pretending anything, Len.

> Like an "amateur radio

Jim seems very well versed in the history of amateur radio. He has been able to point to a number of errors you've made in things which have taken place in amateur radio. I've never seen a post where he refers to himself as an "amateur radio historian".

> ...pretending to be the olde-tymer...

He's been a radio amateur for better than forty years. Here on Earth, anyone who has done anything for forty years can be considered an old timer.

> ...all the while

You've done some cribbing of your own, Leonard--and all about something in which you were not a partcipant.

Jim's analogy of real estate zoning changes in your local area to your attempts as an outsider to effect change in amateur radio licensing (all the while insisting that it was not for your personal benefit) was an apt one. You didn't like that one single bit.

> Jimmie

You say that Jim pretends, yet he has posted the data on a regular basis. I can find no errors in the material he has submitted. You've posted some numbers on an irregular basis. Were you PRETENDING to be a statistical archivist?

> I don't PRETEND anything.

Don't sell yourself short, "Lennie."

It isn't about fear, Len. It should be about exercising restraint and using civility. You just plain honk people off.

There is no one named "Robesin" who has posted here. If you mean Steve Robeson, he hasn't submitted proof of his military service to you. That's not the same as it not haven taken place. I've advised you several times that there is a free site on which his Marine Corps service is confirmed, this despite your statement that no such site exists. Have you found it yet.

I have plenty of proof of my military service, but I'm not going to submit it to you. You've squawked about that and you've insulted me over my Vietnam service a number of times, that despite your claims that you've never denigrated the military service of a fellow veteran. You bleat something and proceed to exhibit behavior which is at odds with your statements.

> But, some of the olde-tyme morsemen want to PUT DOWN those

I'm an old timer. I do not use Morse Code exclusively. I'm an amateur radio operator. I PUT you DOWN because you continue to act like a horse's ass.

> They

No one here has done more "I am better than you" bragging, than Leonard H. Anderson, a man who, up until a few weeks back, was not an amateur radio op. There are bigger newsgroup polluters, but none can match your word output.

> I

You really showed everyone. You put off entry into amateur radio for decades (in terms of your declared interest) and by eleven years (in terms of r.r.a.p. participation).

It'd have to be. You can't handle the use of Morse.

So who is stopping you from enjoying it. Are you enjoying amateur radio?

No one here has done more self-promotion than Leonard H. Anderson.

Please look at my direct quote of your words:

"Extra right out of the box". Please note the word "right" which appears before the words "out of the box." If you hadn't written that particular word, you might be able to make a case. The word "right" exists however. Now you have a problem. Your quote comes from over seven years in the past. Your passing of amateur radio exams was on February 25th of this years. That's nor "right out" of anything.

> Judge "Roy Bean" Heil doesn't like that.

Do you know what geographical areas make up the Roanoke Division, Len?
As a new licensee and a new League member, you've probably not had much time to learn about the various ARRL Divisions.

So you've apparently learned that you do not live in the Roanoke Division.

I think you'd find that folks who are warm and friendly receive a warm and friendly welcome. Those who are not warm and friendly might not receive a warm and friendly welcome. You may find that to be true in your Division.

> I care less of what another "Division" does.

I see a problem with your attitude, Len. You don't want to get off on the wrong foot.

> I am a resident

Okay, you know what state you're in. Do you know your ARRL Division yet? Have you found out in which Section you reside?

Give 'em time to get to know you, Len. They're probably just being polite.

That's nice.

> I'm not ready to visit

West Virginia has no coastline, Len. It is not a northern state. Some try to call it a mid-Atlantic state, but it isn't on the Atlantic. Most of the northern panhandle is northern in attitude. The bulk of the state is southern in attitude and by inclination. West Virginia is the northernmost state in the Roanoke Division of the ARRL.

If you ever come for a visit, I'll keep mum on your r.r.a.p. attitudes.
When you open your mouth and start talking, you're on your own. Keep You've practiced such antics as insulting the jobs and military service of your "enemies" in r.r.a.p. You've called them by diminuitive names or made up insulting names for them. There is a very accurate profile of your behavior in dealing with others.

I can't see how that works, Brian. Len is a guy who became a brand new radio amateur a few weeks ago.

I don't recall announcing that I was running for League elected office

Then you don't see it clearly. Len didn't do anything "right out of" any box. Len waited for seven years and a reg change. He also maintained that his self-appointed advocacy was not for his own benefit, but for the benefit of others. Heh.

Mike, you have to understand that Jimmie WANTS to TALK ABOUT It. For some strange reason. If you don't, he will pester you about it and pester and pester until you give in... :-(

The PDF you gave a link to is a no-nonsense guide to repeater
useage...and from the ARRL TIS also. There's nothing there that is mean or sarcastic or anything else but good advice
that is also Common Sense.

[yes, morsemen have been saying such for years...:-)]

Amateur-electro-politically, that is...

Sounds reasonable to me.

"My name is Len...and my handle is that of an axe or the pistol grip of a Beretta...what's yours?" Usually gets some proper-speech-authority-judge-and-jury some pause... :-)

It doesn't hurt at all to mention my license class, either.

If they get argumentative, I'll just tell them to contact
Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth at the FCC. Haven't
had to do that yet, but give it time. :-)

I agree...but, as I said, Jimmie Wants To Talk About It!

When he gets an idea he's like a Cylon..."many copies, and they have a Plan!"

[reference to "Battlestar Gallactica" on the SciFi channel]

EXAMPLE...exactly! Roger that and ten-four! :-)

Oh, dear, I've offended a morseman, I think...change that to
"Fine Business, Old Man" taken from the Hymnal of the Church of St Hiram's Conventional Wisdom ("CW") Psalm Pilot as
"FB OM" in morse.

QSL? :-)

You used the words "according to Heil". I never made such a statement.
You are in error.

The Bypassed Specialist exam was not an amateur radio exam. A number of individuals here have pointed out that an amateur radio license is only the beginning.

You misquoted me when you wrote "according to Heil" and follow it with something I've not stated. The Air Force did not provide a pass on training because I held an amateur radio license. The Air Force allowed me to skip Tech School because I passed the Bypassed Specialist exam.

Oh, Len holds a license of the same class. He's been a radio amateur for several weeks. He's green. Despite the tenor of some of his posts, he's a novice in amateur radio. He's just begun.

Well, thanks for the kind wishes, Brian. Maybe you'll want to wish Len some luck in his venture into the world of amateur radio.

Well, Lennie, it would seem that Mike WANTS to TALK ABOUT it.
If he didn't, he'd likely not have made the post and included the url.

For some strange reason what?

Is it your view that someone asks a question because he has a plan to pester you?

Mike might have a problem with it. He included the url for it in a post where he discussed some radio amateurs telling others how to talk.
There must have been a reason that he included it. Perhaps Mike sees something unpleasant in the ARRL guidelines for repeater use. There's a very good chance that he wants to TALK ABOUT it.

The joke was not about rape. The joke was about one of the great Life has in no way bypassed me, "John". Amateur radio is not the sum total of my existence. Within amateur radio, I am free to use any mode of operation available to me. You, it seems, are limited in your choices.

It is evident from your postings that it was never about the Morse test with you. You take it far beyond testing.

Mike, you have to understand that Jimmie WANTS to TALK ABOUT It. For some strange reason. If you don't, he will pester you about it and pester and pester until
you give in... :-(

The PDF you gave a link to is a no-nonsense guide to repeater
useage...and from the ARRL TIS also. There's nothing there that is mean or sarcastic or anything else but good advice
that is also Common Sense.

[yes, morsemen have been saying such for years...:-)]

Amateur-electro-politically, that is...

Sounds reasonable to me.

"My name is Len...and my handle is that of an axe or the pistol grip of a Beretta...what's yours?" Usually gets
some proper-speech-authority-judge-and-jury some pause... :-)

It doesn't hurt at all to mention my license class, either.

If they get argumentative, I'll just tell them to contact
Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth at the FCC. Haven't
had to do that yet, but give it time. :-)

I agree...but, as I said, Jimmie Wants To Talk About It!

When he gets an idea he's like a Cylon..."many copies, and they have a Plan!"

EXAMPLE...exactly! Roger that and ten-four! :-)

Oh, dear, I've offended a morseman, I think...change that to
"Fine Business, Old Man" taken from the Hymnal of the Church of St Hiram's Conventional Wisdom ("CW") Psalm Pilot as
"FB OM" in morse.

Broadcasting your perversions on a blog site you advertise hardly renders the viewer a "peeping tom".
Again, your definitions are skewed, as is your mind.
Openly flaunting your perversion on your blog simply confirms for one and all that you have some very abnormal things going on between your ears (and legs).

It is terribly ACCURATE, sweetums, goes all the way back to my mentioning my service with an Army radio station that operated 24/7. You stated that I "never worked 24/7 in my life!" :-)

You've MISSED a whole lot of things, old man. One is getting someone to pound it into your head that "welcoming" anyone does NOT mean constantly, unremittingly TRYING to PUT OTHERS

DOWN as if you were some nasty SOB of a drill instructor.
You are NOT a drill instructor but you act like some self-righteous, holier-than-thou SOB.

>It is a fact that you're a brand new amateur radio licensee.

Yes, as of 7 March 2007 with my FIRST amateur radio license class of Amateur Extra. :-)

As of March 1956 I've held a First Class Radiotelephone
(Commercial) Operator license...which changed to a General Radiotelephone (Commercial) Operator license...and both kept renewed until the "GROL" became Lifetime (without the need for renewal). That's IN the FCC's records available on-line. You know how LONG that license has been granted to me? 51 years.

You know what else? I have been IN radio-electronics since 1952...55 years, not only working in it but also using it from land, from the air, and on the sea. All very legal, and, except for lately, WITHOUT needing any "amateur radio license 'first'." Indeed, when working on some DoD contracts the FCC's jurisdiction on radio DID NOT APPLY and I needed
NO license! All absolutely LEGAL.

You have FABRICATED a whole lot of pure, unadultered horseshit in regarding Amateur Radio as being some kind of extra-special "different kind of radio" AS IF it is "not related" to any other radio service, civilian or government. That isn't just horseshit, Heil, it is pure bullshit...as "pure" as the dumping grounds of diary farms and cattle grazing grounds... and as evil-smelling as any pissed-off morseman who despises
what the FCC did to "his amateur radio" in license testing.

Poor baby! Tsk, tsk, you've held a Personality Conflict about me for a decade and you just can't let go of your pesonal hatred, can you? :-)

"Extra Out Of The Box" is a common [U.S.} amateur radio colloquial expression meaning one who takes ALL the test elements and passes them in the SAME exam session. That is what I did on 25 February 2007 at an ARRL VEC group's exam session held at Old Fire House 77 on Glenoaks Blvd
in the Los Angeles suburb of Sun Valley.

I decided to take all the tests on 17 February 2007. NOT "seven years ago." That's the truth no matter how or what you write to the contrary.

Here is the posting where YOU said "I didn't do it," right from Google archives so you don't have to injure
a precious neuron to search for it:

I'm sorry that you don't like it, Len, but you are a beginner or neophyte in amateur radio. You're just getting started. You're just getting your feet wet.

Don't worry, you'll get the hang of it.

Go FU yourself, Heil. The FCC says I'm an Amateur Extra.
YOU don't give licenses...You have NO authority, only a big Ego.

To EVERYONE's knowledge, sweetums. Miccolis finally admitted in public he had NEVER SERVED in the military. Period.

No, it should be "apparent" that there are FAKERS out there telling lots of LIES. "Major Dud" Robeson is one of those. You lean in that direction...by very careful wording to avoid details of yourself, only the overall
"big picture" phrasing (giving no details) is what you've used. Sound like someone familiar? It should be, that technique was tried by some civilian "major" of the CAP.

Oh, WOW! Forty years as an amateur! When do you think he will turn Professional? :-)

Go bite your own horse's ass.

>> Jimmie PRETENDS to be a "Somebody."
>I've never seen evidence that he is pretending anything, Len.

He PRETENDS to be a "military expert." He doesn't know squat about the military. He PRETENDS to be an "amateur radio historian," yet all his "writings" are cribbings from other, real historians. He PRETENDS to be a professional (salaried) engineer, yet he can't say ONE thing in here about what he does or what his "products" are. He PRETENDS to know "all about" other modes in amateur radio but all he can talk about is his own OOK CW morsemanship. He PRETENDS to be a "knowledgeable expert on southern California real estate but he knows squat about that. He is a PRETENDER on par with the infamous Robesin.

It was INEPT. Learn to spell.

There was NEVER any analogue, not even a corollary to "amateur radio." You KNOW that, but you are sooooo enjoying your PUT DOWN attempt that you can't help yourself. Miccolis FABRICATED his case out of wispy cloth used for the Emperor's New Clothes.

>You say that Jim pretends, yet he has posted the data on a regular >basis.

Erich von Daniken has written FIVE books on "ancient astronauts." Is he "right?"

>I can find no errors in the material he has submitted.

You better not...those numbers are straight from the ARRL's own page on "FCC License Counts."

Are you now a "Mathematician," Heil? Some kind of "numbers guru?" Who awarded you that title? One of your alternate personalities?

>It isn't about fear, Len. It should be about exercising restraint and >using civility. You just plain honk people off.

I "honk" morsemen off. TS. Who the hell are YOU to be such a "judge and jury" of what goes on in US amateur radio?

You've had a deep Personality Conflict with me ever since I didn't care for your Guinea-Bisseau "morsemanship saves the RTTY day" for you STORY you posted in here long ago. Wow, you REALLY tried to shine yourself on the average regular in here then...you with the STATE DEPARTMENT and all that stuff, posted to a little third-world African country whose major export was cashew nuts. You got your nuts off on my response, big expert on radio.

>> My work experience AND radio licensing is

The FBI cared. Lots of federal agencies cared. I've had several background investigations without problems. Neither have I ever been fired from an electronics engineering job for incompetence or anything else.

>> ...and I DO have

>There is no one named "Robesin" who has posted here.

Yes there is. He goes by several different pseudonyms.

>If you mean Steve
>Robeson, he hasn't submitted proof of his military service to you.
>That's not the same as it not haven taken place.

It hasn't. He's a FAKE, pure and simple. A poseur.

>I have plenty of proof of my military service, but I'm not going to >submit it to you.

Submit to EVERYBODY. Make it public. Show everyone how gloriously you served the nation in "a country at war."

>You've squawked about that and you've insulted me >over my Vietnam service a number of times, that despite your claims that >you've never denigrated the military service of a fellow veteran.

Poor baby. Still crying over not being believed by telling
NO DETAILS of that glorious service? Good sales technique but you don't have much of a product.

It isn't an "insult" to challenge a salesman-type who can't come up with DETAILS on his "service." You might not have "lied" but - with so few details and so many generalities -
you never told the TRUTH, either.

What has YOUR MILITARY SERVICE to do with RADIO? Did you ever operate a radio in Vietnam? If so, what and under which circumstances? Come ON, Heil, you can get very creative here, no photographs need be reproduced, you can MAKE UP nice heroic stories to really convince the folks!

>I'm an old timer.

Yes, with that weight and continued smoking you need not worry about any future.

>I do not use Morse Code exclusively.

That's difficult to believe.

>I'm an amateur radio operator.

You were granted an amateur radio license. It is the SAME class license as the FCC granted me for my FIRST amateur radio license. So?

>I PUT you DOWN because you continue to act like a horse's ass.

Bullshit. You have this deep abiding hatred called a Personality Conflict with me. TS. Better get that disorder fixed. I'm not going away any time soon.

>No one here has done more "I am better than you" bragging, than Leonard >H. Anderson, a man who, up until a few weeks back, was not an amateur >radio op.

What "bragging?" "It ain't braggin' if ya done it!" a slight misquote written by Miccolis several times in here. :-)

I done it, sweetums. It can be verified if you haven't seen it already. No need to "brag" for me.

>You really showed everyone.

What was there to "show?" I decided to take all the tests, did that, passed them all, was granted my amateur radio license.
It complements the First 'Phone that I passed in one session back in 1956. I waited about two weeks to take my First 'Phone test, only about a week (plus a day) to take my Extra test.

Did I surprise you? Make you ANGRY at my audacity? :-)

Are you disturbed that I didn't ask your royal permission to take a ham test? Was I supposed to kiss your ass and deliver unto you a bunch of gratuitous nice-nice words first? :-)

Poor baby. Before the "TEST" you couldn't say enough nasty about my NOT having an amateur radio license. NOW you can't say enough nasty about my HAVING an amateur radio license!
You are a paragon of the paradigm of paradox...all hung up on Hate because your prideful feathers got ruffled a long time ago. Tsk, tsk.

>You can't handle the use of Morse.

...that you know of. :-)

Colonel Jessup, one thing for damn sure is that YOU CAN'T HANDLE THE TRUTH!

I've told truth in here. Others who have similar Personality Conflicts with me have MANUFACTURED LIES out of my statements.

I expect such manufacturing of lies out of my truth in a computer-modem communications venue. It's par for the course in here. What I didn't expect was the lonnnng-running Hatred that a few have over others' accomplishments. Surprise, surprise, Gomer! :-)

Like it or not (we know you HATE it), I have my amateur radio license, at Amateur Extra class. I intend to enjoy it despite all your cat-calling, LIES, and general personal insults in this newsgroup. Know what? YOU really DON'T MATTER in what I decide to do for myself. Not one whit.

Like it or not, I AM part of the "revolution" in U.S. amateur radio, one who DID do "Extra Out Of The Box" AFTER the code test was eliminated by the FCC. There aren't many of us who are PART of that "revolution," fewer still who did it ALL in one test session. But, WE did it. There will be MORE in the future.

Eventually, all the morsemen of today will have gone SK and the only licensed radio amateurs will be those who NEVER HAD TO TAKE ANY MORSE CODE TEST! Oh, there will be some niche interested morsemen in U.S. amateur radio in the future just as there are niche interests in other modes. On the way to that future, the morsemen will be sitting around whining and crying for days when They were the "leaders" and "keepers of 'tradition'." That is already disappearing. The "revolution" happened but guys like you were so deep in self-righteous wrath you went into denial. Not my problem. It is yours.

Enjoy your hate. You seem to have earned it. :-)

In what way?

> The Ham are comunicating just not what thye are thinking of Telepathic code?

I have NO idea what the morsemen are thinking. They seem to "know" what I am thinking...(but they don't). :-)

> Indeed In retrospect I must admit that the Code tested did aquire a > specail skill the abilty to comunicate what they truly feel eltism
> and jealouscy

Morsemanship was fine, indeed excellent as a radio skill back before WW2. After all, the first Morse Code has been around since 1844 and is an ultra-simple way to make messages over very simple radio transmitters.

AFTER WW2 is quite another story. Single-channel SSB finally got into the mainstream of US amateur radio in the late 1950s and most amateurs found they could actually TALK over their radios! Gasp! VHF and UHF technology became practical and FM voice on those bands popular.

It must have been that some morsemen had funny voices or were hard-pressed to talk to "strangers," perhaps even uncomfortable to talk with friends. Not known and not admitted. :-)

However, by the year 2006 it was high time that regulations were (Gasp!) MODERNIZED for the (Gasp again!) FUTURE!
Bye bye code test, RIP.

Those who want to actually LEARN morse code have never been stopped in that. If they want to learn that and USE it, more power to them. The FCC still allows that. Indeed, the FCC make ALL allocated modes OPTIONAL to use by all US radio amateurs of the right classes. Skill sets are always good. Morsemanship was never a "necessity" to be granted an amateur radio license in this new millennium, but the olde-tyme morsemen had to cry and whine so terribly that the elimination of code testing didn't happen until 2007.

his job?

There is no one by the name of "Major Dud", Len. I've already told you that there is a web site which confirms his Marine Corps service. You either can't find it or haven't looked for it. You go on accusing folks service. Live with it.

Did you have a point? What information does Jim owe you? He's seen what you do with a little information. I've seen what you do with a little information. You don't have much information about Jim. You don't have much information about my Air Force service in or out of

Who are the real amateur radio historians, Len? Since Jim has never called himself an "amateur radio historian", you'll have a tough time making your silly accusations stick.

I think he say much more than ONE thing about his job. He has chosen not to do so. Now what are you going to do? Why don't you PRETEND that it's none of your business?

You don't have any idea if CW is all Jim can talk about. You're PRETENDING to know.

I've never seen any post where Jim has claimed to be an expert in real estate anywhere. You're PRETENDING that he said so.

You're still a horse's patoot, Len--and you aren't PRETENDING.

You've honked off people who supported the elimination of Morse testing.
You've honked off folks who were in favor of the retention of Morse tests.

> Who the hell are YOU to be such a

I'm a person you've honked off. I'm a guy who has forty-three years in amateur radio. I'm one who doesn't believe that you've suddenly become civil just because you've finally obtained an amateur radio license.

> You've had a deep Personality Conflict with me ever since I didn't

You honked me off way before any discussion of Guinea-Bissau, Len.
I've never written anything to the effect that Morse Code save the day, but that hasn't stopped you from writing such things. You play fast and loose with the truth. You manufacture statements. You're disingenuous.

Well sir, that's very nice for you. Yep, that's something in which you can take a great deal of pride. I'm not sure what we're supposed to a lot to you.

My Vietnam service is documented on a couple of veterans organization web sites. I even got in contact with the fellow I replaced in Vietnam. Have you found even one of those sites?

What claims of glorious service have I made, Len? I certainly served in the country where the war was taking place. That's at odds with your Korean War tale of what it is like to undergo an artillery barrage, while you were in Japan.

There's no "can't" involved, Len. I've chosen not to reveal the details of my military service to you. I have lots of DETAILS. I'm not sharing them with Leonard H. Anderson, super citizen.

I've forty-three years of experience as an amateur radio op. Thirty of them have been as an Extra Class licensee. You're short a bunch of decades and at least one operating mode. Quit trying to be an instant expert, Len.

You've bragged about a number of things you hadn't done. The "Extra right out of the box" and the "spincter post" immediately come to mind.

You've certainly boasted, Sugar Dumpling.

How does an amateur radio license compliment your commercial ticket, Len?

It is hardly audacious to sit on your duff for seven years.

Yep, you boasted and fell. You were a boor and you acted like a horse's You're still a boor and you still act like a horse's patoot.

You've now become a brand new radio amateur. Do something with the license. Don't feel compelled to tell old timers of your expertise.
If you use your receiver more than your transmitter and pay attention,
you just may learn a bit.

I don't hate the fact that you have an amateur radio license nor do I hate you. I just wouldn't want you to hang around me or move next door.
I don't want a QSO with you on the air.

> I intend to enjoy it despite

I've not engaged in lies, Len. You have received the cat calls and personal insults your demeanor has generated. I'm sure that you've become used to such in numerous venues. If you act on the amateur radio bands as you've acted here, don't be surprised if the QSOs are few and far between. Give the attitude a rest and try your very best to be a warm and pleasant individual. If you succeed at that, you may find that amteur radio is enjoyable for you. If not, you may find that it isn't to your liking.

> Know what? YOU really DON'T MATTER in what I decide

There's no reason for you to waste your valuable remaining time in responding to my posts. To date, it seems that I've mattered.

I've not seen any revolution, Len. The numbers do not support your claim.

> ...one who DID do "Extra Out Of The Box" AFTER the code test
> was eliminated by the FCC.

That word "right" keeps tripping you up. You got no amateur license "right out" of anything. You waited over seven years from the time of your boast to obtain the "Extra right out of the box". That didn't happen.

> There aren't many of us who are PART > of that "revolution," fewer still who did it ALL in one test > session. But, WE did it. There will be MORE in the future.

You didn't, as you've told us a number of times, do it for yourself. You were, you said, motivated by altruism in eliminating Morse testing for others. That simply wasn't true. The "revolution" has had the immediate impact of a fart in a wind storm.

> Eventually, all the morsemen of today will have gone SK and the Wave the banners! Storm the Winter Palace! I'm betting that at least part of the vanguard of this silent revolution will be long gone before I take my leave of amateur radio.

You've demonstrated little respect for the traditions and values of amateur radio. Your tenure will be, of necessity, a short one.

What is already disappearing? Whining? Days? Leaders?

I guess most of us expected something to happen. The expected swarms of the "otherwise qualified" hasn't materialized.

That's right. When you are a part of a problem, you are somebody else's problem.

> Enjoy your hate.

I don't hate you, Len. I just don't like you. Carry your "revolution" idea into amateur radio and see what it gets you.

Tsk, tsk. Poor baby.

Indeed. Yet the FCC has no requirement for experience. Len has

That is why racial pride is so important, you can ignore silly remarks about your race instead of feeling guilty for being your race. This says more about the "offended" than the supposed "offender."

Probably only "Al not to sharp sharpton" is offended though ... but then, he has reason to be offended. Only, in his case, change "nappy headed" to "empty headed!"

Absolutely! We know you well from your over-abundant postings. I don't believe I have EVER seen a smaller-pettier old woman in my life! (and,
I suspect I'd have the best luck looking here!)

Now, others may disagree, and let us hope so--a life without friends is a lonely life.

NBC/ABC should replace Imus with Al "Not So" Sharpton. That would be the most PC and right thing to do. Imus could then kiss some Opie and Anthony ass and get on their XM network. Howie Stern would be happy because he would still have Imus to talk about since he sold out to Bubba the Love Sponge and the other dregs of the radio society. et al., Imus would be happy to still be able to work in radio, NBC/ABC will be happy even though the Sharpton show probably draws a share lower than Air America, Sharpton will never be happy so it doesn't matter. The media would be happy because they still have this train wreck to talk about.

Al Sharpton is always looking for some tiny mis-step by someone to insert himself as the speaker for all black people to further his black racisim agenda. Al takes a small comment and extrapolates it into a major full blown issue. Al Sharpton acts like Imus stood up on a podium in Washington D.C. and called the entire black population of the US a bunch of Ghetto Ni*gers. Sharpton is such an idiot and IMO has zero credibility since the fraud purportrated by Tawana Brawley and company. Big mouth AL came to her rescue and accused just about every white male in NY of being a racists and rapists. People like Al Sharpton is one of the reasons that racisim is alive and well in the US. The more people here all of his racist crap the more people want to avoid the issue. Who in the hell wants to have all of this twisted bullshit shoved down you throat by some angry black man. No one.

Radio Shack brand.

I couldn't find any model number printed on it itself.

The model number was printed on the box, but the person who bought it either kept the box or threw it out.

Don't pay any attention to Mark Morgan, he is the resident idiot spammer over on the rec.radio boards. I'm sure you have one too on the Imus fan boards, it seems that each news group has their own special needs "idiot".

Demanding that I not post by my screen name or you will continue your spam attack on the NG's is unacceptable. Mark Morgan: Super Idiot, Thread Hi-Jacker, Spammer, self proclaimed fellationist, liar, and apparently unable to pass a simple extra class ham examination.

that Mark is lying, he won't be ashamed or deterred from doing it again.
That's because Mark isn't a sane human being.

In message <1174929882.797290.192310@d57g2000hsg.googlegroups.com>, Mark
Morgan admitted that he is trying to disrupt the news groups by saying,
"... I am aware that I do anoy them and as an inicdental to main main objective distrupt their NG experence that is regreatble and regrreted [sic]" -- By so stating, he admits to violating the terms of service of all major ISPs.

where did I state it was protected Dloyd?

I made 2 statements that you in your gulty mind choose to made into one and then you run around when I chatch you on them that you and I know a CTI card was involved alters not I made no statement poir to these that was involed

your guilty mind felt like you got caught till you found a quote that you want to twist into something

you lied you got caught

I am convinced you are indeed guilty it is only circumstancail evidence of your guilt but bit by bit that builds up but then YOU know that that is why you hide behind your socks inculing

this one Dloyd

32492: Are there any weak points in Islam that enable the kaafirs (Disbelievers) to attack it?

(Go here for Reference & More Questions & Answers about Islam & Muslims: http://books.google.co.uk/books?vid=ISBN1861791542)

Question:

As you know Muslims are facing many challenges, pressures and criticisms from non-Muslims in the world. In light of this atmosphere, should we Muslim not be the most open and honest about our shortcomings and try to tackle them as opposed to being overly defensive and seeming to make excuses or cover our faults? The reason for this question is that if we seem to deny or gloss over obvious shortcomings it will not help us to overcome them. Perhaps some Muslims feel that to deal with our problems openly will assist the kufaar in their attacks on Islam. Please advise.

Answer:

Praise be to Allaah.

Firstly:

There are no weak points in Islam _ praise be to Allaah _ that the Muslim needs to worry about. Islam is the perfect religion of Allaah, and Allaah says (interpretation of the meaning):

"And the Word of your Lord has been fulfilled in truth and in justice"

[al-An'aam 6:115]

One of the scholars said that this means, it tells the truth in its reports and is just in its rulings.

Allaah has blessed us by completing His religion and perfecting the blessing, as He says (interpretation of the meaning):

"This day, I have perfected your religion for you, completed My Favour upon you, and have chosen for you Islam as your religion"

[al-Maa'idah 5:3]

If an Islamic ruling seems to a person to be a weak point, he should realize that the fault lies in his way of thinking, because some of the rulings of sharee'ah that are absolutely wise and just may appear otherwise to some people, either because of their whims and desires, or because it goes against what people are used to in their lives, that goes against sharee'ah. For example, some think that a man's being the protector and maintainer of women is a weak point in Islam, because they are used to something which is contrary to that and which also goes against the fitrah (natural inclination of man).

Secondly:

An important matter which should be pointed out here is that it is not permissible for anyone to speak about the rulings of Islam or the tafseer of Qur'aan or the meanings of hadeeth, rather that should be referred to the scholars who are well-versed in knowledge.

What happens is that a question is put to an ordinary Muslim, and he cannot find an answer for it or he gives a wrong answer, or it leaves some doubt in his heart that he cannot rid himself of.

"if only they had referred it to the Messenger or to those charged with authority among them, the proper investigators would have understood it from them (directly). Had it not been for the Grace and Mercy of Allaah upon you, you would have followed Shaytaan (Satan), save a few of you"

[al-Nisa' 4:83 _ interpretation of the meaning]

Hence we say that Allaah has protected the religion for us through the scholars and has enabled them to understand it correctly so as to refute hostile ideas and explain its wisdom to people. That is not for the ordinary people, rather it is only for the elite, namely the scholars.

Some of scholars used to challenge people to bring them a verse that contradicts another verse or a hadeeth, or a hadeeth that contradicts another hadeeth or a verse of Qur'aan, and they would explain to them anything that appeared to be a contradiction, and they used to openly challenge everyone on this matter.

Al-Daaraqutni _ who was one of the imams of hadeeth _ stood in Baghdad as a khateeb and said: "O people of Baghdad! No one can tell lies against the Messenger of Allaah (peace and blessings of Allaah be upon him) whilst I am alive." These words indicate the depth of their knowledge and understanding of Islam, which was so great that the people of falsehood could not attack Islam or introduce into it things that were not part of it.

Hence our advice to this questioner and other Muslims, especially those who mix with kuffaar because of their work or because they live in their countries, is to strive to seek knowledge and to learn the correct rulings of Islam that are derived from the Qur'aan and Sunnah, whilst paying attention to learning the reasons behind these rulings, so that they will have knowledge with which to refute the specious arguments of those who seek to attack Islam, and this will enable them to call people to Allaah with proper insight and understanding.

And Allaah knows best.

EVIDENCE and EXACT WORDS...so that they will have some trivial thing to argue over in front of some "judge." :-)

The mystery of the ages... :-)

One slight omission by "Barrister" Heil: His USAF MOS (Military Occupation Specialty). Was it ever mentioned by him?

Did Heil operate ANY radio (other than a BC receiver) while "in a country at war?"

During the Vietanm War only two transceiver types made up the vast bulk of communications. I've not seen Heil mention either one of them, despite an eighth of a million of those two types made and operational.

>> A number of >> individuals here have pointed out that an amateur radio license is only

>If the exam is only the beginning, then multiple exams and multiple

True. One ham = one license should be good enough for a hobby activity.

But...a long time ago the "amateur community" decided it wanted (terribly) the RANK-STATUS-PRIVILEGES of multiple classes, especially the morsemen holding on (with dear life) to their beloved morse code. The "upper" classes could then look down (and put down) the "lower" classes in great personal glee.

Now IN the electronics industry (where the rest of the radio world's equipment - and some amateur gear - is designed and made), the vast majority of those involved do NOT have amateur radio licenses! Those involved in everyday work with radio and electronics found it a fascinating, challenging activity all by itself. No "ham ticket" was necessary...indeed was a superfluous thing since amateur radio licenses are NOT needed for the rest of the radio world.

WE just don't know for sure what Heil actually did unless he states his USAF MOS, what he worked with "in a country at war."

:-) I think he tries to be a "Johnnie Cochrane" in some "court" and winds up sounding more like he drank too much Johnnie Walker.

He has a terrible personal NEED for that "superiority."

He MUST be above all others. The Latin phrase "Primus inter pares" suits him ("first among equals"), a Latin oxymoron of all things.

Notice he is getting to be more like The Robesin all the time?

Maybe Heil CHANGED HIS MIND? People are allowed to do that, change their mind, that is...

Oh! But NOT in amateur radio newsgroups! No, NEVER, according to Miccolis! Once one says something, regardless of how long ago, to Miccolis that is a LIFE GOAL Never To Be Changed!

Brian, it only works ONE WAY, Heil's Way.

Sort of like "Heil's Way or the highway." :-)

>> He's been a radio amateur >> for several weeks. He's green.

NO, NO, NO...FACTUAL ERROR BY Heil. I am not green. As a caucasoid type human racial type I am various shades of PINK commonly referred to as "flesh color." Blue eyes, light brown hair (with a little grey here and there).

I recycle recyclable trash every week...although the LA City Sanitation supplied can is colored BLUE. :-)

My specific amateur radio equipment is "basic BLACK" with white legends and a little chrome and aluminum trim (Icom - LDG - MFJ - Heil Sound - chosen colors). It sits on a nice desk (melamine surfaces) of BROWN. The credit card I used to pay for it is mostly BLUE with RED and White trim.

>> Despite the tenor of some of his posts,
>> he's a novice in amateur radio. He's just begun.
>
>You're the one who's green - with envy...

I'm not a tenor. More of a baritone. I do have "perfect pitch" as far as the standard chromatic scale of musical notes is concerned.

There is NO "novice" class for new US amateur radio license class grants. That ended almost seven years ago.

Neither is there any AGE discrimination in FCC regulations, age low or high. It was perfectly permissible by law to take and pass ALL test elements in one test session...which is what I did on 25 Feb 07. The ARRL VEC accepted that, the FCC accepted that. Heil and Miccolis still can't "accept" that.

I BEGAN in big-time radio in the US Army in 1953 with my first posting to an HF transmitter site. That involved not just KW RF output transmitters but VHF, UHF radios, then microwave radio relay terminals (late 1954), plus HTs and backpack radio use common to "line" outfits (infantry-artillery-armor). So my "beginning" happened 54 years ago, not a "month" ago. The laws of physics applied equally well to radios in that time (and to fields and waves) as it does NOW.

Heil and Miccolis really OVERWORK their look-down-their-noses attitude of "beginners." When someone proves that amateur radios work with "different" laws of physics than all other radios, I might consider myself as a "beginner." Until then, the REAL difference between amateur radio and the rest of radio is just some man-made adminstrative details...and from the ham bigots busy with self-righteous, I-am-so-important-because-I-know-code sneering and insulting of new licensees.

Words and their meanings are important, Len. Hot-ham-and-cheese wrote
"according to Heil..." except that it wasn't according to me at all.
You wrote that you obtained an Extra out of the box, but you keeping trying to skip over the word "right". You used it when you told us that you were going for an "Extra right out the box."

I've not claimed to be a barrister, Foghorn. I've omitted much about my time in the Air Force. It seems to drive you crazy.

It can't have been mentioned by me. I'd have pointed out that the Air Force doesn't use the term "MOS". It uses the term "AFSC" for Air Force Specialty Code.

I surely did, Len, but not 24/7. I maxed out at ten hours per day, six days per week.

I used no low power, tinker toy radio equipment during my time in the military.

I've told you a number of times that the FCC nowhere uses the word
"hobby" in defining or describing amateur radio.

That seems to be your version of events and it seems that, despite of reality, you're sticking to it. You've always had a perceptible inferiority complex.

If someone wanted to participate in amateur radio, passing an amateur radio license exam was the only way to gain entry. That is still true today.

The Air Force does not use that term, Leonard. If you're going to play

Where did you see me writing of myself? You have a terrible personal

You aren't Jim's equal in amateur radio or civility. You're a beginner in one and you have yet to practice the other.

To CHANGE MY MIND, I'd had to have made the statement that hot-ham-and-cheese attributed to me. His big dilemma is that I didn't make such a statement. Oh deary me. What will he do now?

You've been caught with your brogans in your yap on a number of occasions, "Anderson". A smarter being probably wouldn't bring further attention to himself by braying about it.

The Air Force technical schools award one the "3" skill level, an apprentice level. The Bypassed Specialist is also awarded that same apprentice level. Further on-the-job training along with bookwork are the way to the journeyman or "5" level. I completed the same OJT and study course as every other "5" level candidate. It wasn't my way or the highway, but the Air Force way.

As a "boot" is to the military, you are to amateur radio. You're green--a beginner.

Sorry, Len. There was a Novice Class, but no novice class.
I wrote that you're a novice in amateur radio. That is the case.
You're a neophyte, a beginner.

I'll let Jim speak for himself on this issue. I fully accept that you've passed requisite exams currently in place for the Amateur Extra.
You've been issued a license. I couldn't find anything above where I commented on your age. You now have an amateur radio license. Use it and gain some experience in amateur radio.

I congratulate you on your brand new amateur radio license. Keep your ears and eyes open and you may learn a great deal.

That attitude won't help you in gaining experience in amateur radio.
Amateur radio is not solely concerned with the physics of radio. The fact is that you are a beginner in amateur radio. You have much to learn. You aren't an instant expert, Len.

Dave,

What you're seeing in this and other exchanges with Len and "hot-ham-and-cheese" is their attention-getting behavior by means of factual errors.

They're clearly so desperate to get others' attention that they put obvious errors into the postings in the hope of getting a reply that corrects the error.

> >>>>>   Of course it

There's another method: name-calling mixed with factual error.

No such thing as a 4 year old Extra - the youngest on record was 7 years old. See how it works, Dave?

Yup.

Only if he's an active radio amateur for those forty years.

The funny part about that statement is that it's not clear whether "hot-ham-and-cheese" is trying to insult Len, myself, or both...

It clearly got to Len because of the tirade he unleashed about me.

Yup. I don't think we have to worry about him outperforming us anytime soon, Dave. Like making a higher score in the November Sweepstakes.

In many ways, it does not. The regulations are different, the Basis and Purposes are different, etc.

For example, is there any other radio service where any licensee can design, build, align repair and operate their own radio stations on any frequency allocated to that radio service, without any documentation or certification?

>It is >   "different" and can never be compared to other radio.

You can compare it, but the differences must be considered. You don't consider the differences.

> It's
>   experience is totally different. Uh huh...

In most ways it is different.

For example, with all your claimed experience as a "PROFESSIONAL in radio", if you had the opportunity and permission to operate my amateur radio station, you wouldn't be able to use most of the equipment at all. K8MN, on the other hand, would have no problem.

We, on the other hand, would have no problem using an Icom transceiver like yours.

The Morse Code operators won that contest, Len.
And they weren't even going half the record speed.

It's true. Not that their's anything wrong with it!

Len will soon have 40 days experience as a radio amateur. I will soon have 40 years.

Len, you're just reaping what you have sown. In fact,
you are treated much better here than you treat others.

Ah, there you go, Len, inserting the factual errors.

ENIAC was the world's very first fully operational, high speed, general purpose, electronic digital computer. That's historical fact.

Amateur Radio is considerably different from other radio services in many ways.

Well, Len, I don't now what that "Jimmie" person thinks, but it didn't bother me at all.

It only took you seven years and twenty-some days to go from your "out of the box" boast to actually doing it.

Only as far as the license class. Doesn't bother me at all.

Well, I don't know what "Jimmie" did. But I know what I have done.

K8MN also served voluntarily in the US military.

and have done.

I don't know about this "Jimmie" person, Len. But I don't claim to be an expert about anything.

I do know some things about amateur radio history,
real estate, and the numbers of current FCC issued amateur radio licenses held by individuals. It seems to me that my knowledge of those subjects really, really bothers you.

Sure you do, Len. You pretend to be better than all who disagree with you.

untrue.

others - again.

Yet you associate with them here. Why is that?
I think you are both jealous and sfraid of them.

I agree 100%, Len. I do much more with Amateur Radio than Morse Code.
>
Then why do you behave the way you do here, Len?

You told us you'd leave this newsgroup when the Morse Code test went away. But you're still here, following your classic behavior profile. Why is that?

btw, Len, the telegraphic abbreviation "73" means "best regards". It's already plural.
So when you write "73s", you're saying "best regardses"

indeed tish is a great won two

It was twenty years ago today,
Roger Wiseman forced the boys to be gay
He's been going in and outa their rears
And he's made them into ravin' queers.
So watch out or I'll force on you
The act we've hated all these years,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

We're Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band,
Disciples of the Bucktoothed Choad,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band,
Sit back and watch us shoot a load.
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.
It's wonderful to be here,
But Wiseman's full of crap,
The dirty goddamn pederast:
That fucker gave us syphilis,
That fucker gave us clap.

I don't really want to stop the show,
But I thought you had all better know,
That Wiseman's going to play a song,
On a stickpin that he stuck through his schlong.
So let me introduce to you
The one and only Bucktoothed Choad
And Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

Sharpton and Jesse Jackoff don't say a word about the rappers who talk about women like that all the time. They don't dare to. Nothing but a couple of poverty pimping asswipes. If everyone in America was well off those 2 turds would be out of a job, so it is in their interest to keep poor people poor. Bitching about Imus is just a way to focus attention on something besides their money grubbing asses.

Hey, lardass, I hear they are using this song in Papa John's latest commercials:

That's a-Lllllllllloyd
("that's a more" /kc8jbo)
Vocals: Dean Martin

When you can't get A+ though your head,
And you deliver pizzas instead,
That's a-Lllllllllllloyd

If you hate all "those Jews,"
And you slurp nutsack goo,
That's a-Llllllllllllloyd

When your Mom is your sister,
And for fun you just fist her,
That's a-Lllllllllllloyd

If at 33 it's certain,
That you're still a virgin,
That's a-Llllllllllllloyd

When your food stamps are late,
And two-day-old pizza's what you ate,
That's a-Llllllllllllloyd

If you blame all your tragedies,
On all the minorities,
That's a-Llllllllllllloyd

When you believe wacko preachers,
And you smell like old sneakers,
That's a-Lllllllllllloyd

If your morse code skills suck,
And you waddle like a duck,
That's a-Llllllllllloyd

When you suck up to Herb and kiss TR's ass
like a snake in the grass
That's a Lllllllllllloyd

If you live near a dump
but a woman you don't know how to hump
That's a Lllllllllllllloyd

When the nutsack goo hits your eye
like a big pizza pie,
That's a Llllllllllllllloyd

If you do not wash your hair
But masturbate to Brother Stair,
That's a Llooooooyyyyyyd!

When sperm banks are robbed
it's a Davies' brothers job
That's a Lllllllllllllloyd

If you think Jews aren't human species,
Then masturbate in your own feces,
That's a Llloyyyyyyyyyddddddd....

Oh, that's fine, I don't mind chatting about it. I do find it a little disturbing though.

Bear in mind that I understand that in all things, groups of people start to have their own little language. When I contest, I talk like a contester - mostly. Took me quite a while to figure out what they were texting on RTTY. And I had a chuckle when I figured out that much of CW communication is kind of the original L33T! No wonder I had a rough time copying it for so long. But I will not presume to tell people that they have to speak, key, or text in some manner that I approve.

That's why I was wondering abouut it. No way that second and until we learnd how to talk.

Funny you should mention that. A local Ham is a Truck driver. He is also a new General. The inside of his truck is techno-geek heaven. He's into APRS, HF, VHF, and has just about every Techie gadget there is. He is also a Gentleman, and a decent human being.

He does say "Roger that" when he agrees with another person.

So.

Who is a better Ham, this guy, or a 20wpm Extra who lectures people on how they should speak, and otherwise doesn't do much but grouse about the great unwashed newcomers? (note that before anyone takes umbrage, that is a hypothetical 20wpm Extra - it's a composite of a lot of what I've been hearing. The new guy is real.

Tsk. The phrase "Extra [right] Out Of The Box" is a colloquial amateur radio one referring to one who takes and passes ALL test elements in one exam session. It was used BEFORE the 2000 US amateur radio Restructuring.

You are out of order in this court, counselor. What did you DO in the USAF? Explain it in words. Don't be EVASIVE by misdirecting into trivial chewing out about using "wrong"
USAF titles of occupation specialties.

Oh, my, the ELITIST speaks! All of the US military branches don't consider operational radio communications equipment as "low power, tinker toy." Certainly not for REAL COMBAT operations involving real Life and Death situations.

You are being EVASIVE again. You've NOT described what you DID over 35 years ago "in a country at war." You've NOT described ANY radio equipment you (supposedly) USED over 35 years ago "in a country at war."

Tsk, you are coming across as a clone, a carbon copy of the infamous "Major Dud" Robeson. Like he did, YOU are evasive on details but very BIG on lofty, general-purpose emotional phrases. Do you also hold a "commission" in the Civil Air Patrol?

I can supply very exact DETAILS of what I did for 3 years of my active-duty US Army assignment, pictures and text. See it at:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

Was that "amateur radio" operations? No. It was HF transmitter operations 24/7 in a direct service for the Far East Command Headquarters and Army Central Command, Japan. The radio technology and radio wave propagation was the SAME as was then used for US amateur radio (with the exception of RF power output levels being higher than allowed for amateurs). "Boatanchor" radio equipment afficionados in US amateur radio use the SAME techniques TODAY. Another exception to amaetur practice is that messaging was done by teleprinter (now called "data") and morse code mode was NOT used for all those hundreds of thousands of messages sent per month. Morse mode just wasn't up to the task.

Not only that but the communications involved operation and maintenance of VHF, UHF, microwave radio relay equipment as well as frequency-multiplexed "carrier" equipment for both wired and radio service. In addition we in the US Army Signal Corps also had to use standard small-unit radio communications equipment [PRC-8 family manpack FM transceivers, PRC-6 handheld FM transceivers] when undergoing Provisional Infantry Platoon training in addition to our regular Signal Corps occupational tasks. That was in a country NOT at war (Japan) although the United States of America was IN a war in Korea 55 years ago.

For the USA, the "Vietnam War" ended in 1973. 1973 was 34 years ago. The Korean War is still not settled and remains in a curious continuous Truce condition today...US troops are still stationed in Korea along the Demilitarized Zone. During your Department of State employ help END that Korean War? That hasn't been in the news.

I can't take any credit for BIG national-level policy things. I volunteered, did my duties as assigned, performed honorably and am proud to have done so. I did my part, yet a number of you Elitists of Amateur Radio continue to scoff and sneer at what I and others did in REAL Radio Communications...and then expect to be treated as some kind of "royalty" or "gurus" of "decades of experience" in (amateur) radio.

I KNOW what I did and can talk about it in detail. There is very little of that bound by any US National Security requirements. Yet, a number of Amateur ELITISTS in here have been Unable to supply any Details of what they did. They are remarkably Ambiguous in their most-general non-descriptions, relying only on emotional catch-phrases of "importance" AS IF that was DUE to them.

Please continue as a Robeson Clone. He seems to be gone and his continuing snarling and denigrating has left a big hole in message content of this newsgroup.

So? I took and passed all the test elements for a US amateur radio license on 25 Feb 07. The FCC (not your royal asshole self) granted me an AMATEUR EXTRA class license on 7 Mar 07.

Lets see...before 7 Mar 07 you couldn't say enough bad things about me BECAUSE I didn't have any amateur radio license...now after 7 Mar 07 and the grant of AMATEUR EXTRA you STILL can't say enough bad things, can't denigrate me enough.

I'd say you have one great big whopper of a PERSONALITY CONFLICT filled with hate and bile because you can't put me down, can't silence me, can't change my mind. Ergo, YOU MUST RULE. Sorry, you DO NOT rule. You don't even work in the FCC.

Evasion, ambiguity, attempt to misdirect.

Classic "Major Dud" Robeson responses in here for years.

Are you a Robeson Clone? You sure sound like one.

WHAT did Heil DO in Vietnam? Try to be more specific than "serving his country" or being "in a country at war."

Did Heil spot artillery fall? Was he under "incoming?" How did David Heil get the experience-granted "authority" to denigrate anyone who has had that experience?

Try answering challenges DIRECTLY and not evading or misdirecting every single question. [not that I expect such things but one has to ask...]

>Where did you see me writing of myself?

Everywhere that is free...certainly here in describing your adventures in Embassy postings...on two websites elsewhere.
I'm not that concerned with boy-wonder rock musician turned "diplomat" that I care to look unless someone sends me the web addresses.

For example, you described your "synchronization of TTYs via morse code communications"...in 1980...as a "good idea."
AS IF radio teletype hasn't been used for 50 years before that.

>JIM has forty years more experience that you.

He has? He was born in 1892?!?

"Radio" has been around as a communications medium only since 1896. JIMMIE Miccolis must be a "true pioneer" in radio!

Hmmm...let's see...born in 1892, the first US radio regulating agency begun in 1912...he got his Amateur Extra at age 20?

Wow! I can't top that, nossir! Neither can you, your Grateness.

>You aren't Jim's equal in amateur radio or civility.

Who is "Jim?" :-)

Welp, I looked through Part 97, Title 47 C.F.R. and NOWHERE does it say I have to bow down to any Grate Ones in amateur radio nor even disturb them (into being "honked off") by comments in a newsgroup.

What are you going to do NOW, your Grateness? Write Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth and demand the FCC take away my amateur radio license due to "bad attitudes?"

Poor baby. Still honked off because you can't put me down, can't silence my comments with all your mighty denigrations and put-downs? You must be. That seems to be all you do.

Ya know, nowhere in Title 47 C.F.R. does it say anything about
"beginners, neophytes, wet-behind-the-ears tyros" or other blabbering to me you and JIMMIE Miccolis have done. I am a United States Amateur Extra class amateur licensee by a grant from the United States Federal Communications Commission. I took and passed all the required tests in one license exam session, thus qualifying for the colloquial ham radio expression of "Extra out of the box."

YOU don't like that. MICCOLIS doesn't like that. Both of you think I should have "tested for International Morse Code cognition" during my amateur license exam. Sorry, but that wasn't a legal requirement.

No matter, both of you would have tried to PUT ME DOWN because the old code test rate was only 5 WPM and you
"masters of radio operating" can do much faster code. :-)

Heh, the actual test-and-passing wouldn't have made any change in your Gratenesses' attempts at put-downs. You both have been doing that since before and after I tested-and-passed! :-) Only your steamed Gratenesses' words were interchanged slightly before and after my test. :-)

>To CHANGE MY MIND, I'd had to have made the statement that >hot-ham-and-cheese attributed to me. His big dilemma is that I didn't

Then WHO writes all your postings for you?

An alternate personality? [getting to be more like The Robesin every day...]

If YOU - or whoever is impersonating you - writes a statement in here, then whatever you write "is attributed to you."

Is that too complex for you to understand?

If MICCOLIS were MORE CIVIL he wouldn't constantly be bringing up OLD arguments, OLD postings, that were dropped by others long ago. Neither would he be trying to MANUFACTURE "errors" and "facts" OUT OF CONTEXT. You do that also, but JIMMIE Miccolis makes it a de facto career.

>> Sort of like "Heil's Way or the highway." :-)

So you DID get the free USAF training. You said you hadn't.

Oh, my, such inconsistency in your "factual" statements!

>As a "boot" is to the military, you are to amateur radio.

The United States Army does NOT use the term "boot" except for foot apparel. "Boot" is a USN term for RECRUITS.

You want me to attend Basic Training ALL OVER AGAIN?

Stupid man, you just can't stop your attempts at put-downs of others, can you?

Stupid man, the laws of physics work the SAME for amateur radio as it does for ALL OTHER RADIO SERVICES. The only "differences" lie in the (sometimes warped) mental attitudes of others...such as yourself, plus some adminstrative differentiations applied by the single U.S. civil radio regulating agency, the FCC.

United States amateur radio is NOT a military or paramilitary "service." It is not a craft, a guild, or union that has "apprentice, journeyman, master" skill levels.
It isn't even a "national service." US amateur radio is defined by the FCC for administrative purposes in differentiating between different radio services. The word "service" as used in all of Title 47 C.F.R. is a regulatory term defining the type and kind of radio activity being regulated by them.

>You're green--a beginner.

You are an antagonistic asshole who can't stop trying to put down your newsgroup "enemies" with the slightest denigrations you can dream up.

>I wrote that you're a novice in amateur radio. That is the case.
>You're a neophyte, a beginner.

You've REALLY got a hard one in trying to put me down.
You ought to experience some catharsis, such as writing
Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth about my "negligent attitude at now taking your Grateness 'advice.'" Maybe,
with the "help" of your elected representatives, you can
force the FCC to change my license to Technician!

Or, you could get some mental counseling and LOSE your antagoinistic I-am-superior attitude. Nobody has to kiss YOUR ass, salute you, or give up their seat on the amateur bus to you just because you are the Mighty Heil.

>I fully accept that >you've passed requisite exams currently in place for the Amateur Extra.

Tsk, you had to add the qualifier "currently in place!" :-)

Why would anyone HAVE to pass requisite exams for any OTHER era?

How could anyone possibly pass requisite exams for a FUTURE era?

I obeyed the LAW. I passed. In ONE EXAM SESSION.

>You've been issued a license.

NO! I was GRANTED an amateur radio license by the FCC.

If you must be the irritating, anatagonistic asshole about WORDS, try to use the CORRECT ones!

>I couldn't find anything above where I commented on your age.

Tsk, tsk! You've done that consistently, old man.

>You now have an amateur radio license.

Amateur Extra class.

Yes, it complements the First Class Radiotelephone (Commercial) Operators License I was granted in March, 1956, and kept renewed until FCC regulations changed to make it a "GROL" with NO renewals necessary.

>Use it and gain some experience in amateur radio.

Is that a COMMAND, your Grateness?

Believe it or not, individuals are allowed a great freedom to do what THEY want, not what you "command."

I will DO with MY amateur radio license what I choose to do...always keeping within the letter and spirit of the LAW (not working Frenchmen out of band on 6m).

>> I BEGAN in big-time radio...
><snip of irrelevant reruns>

Exactly WHAT is "irrelevant" about MY life experience, your Grateness? Other than my being a perceived newsgroup "enemy" of yours?

The US Army didn't have - or allow - any "skipping of (union-grade) levels." I went to my assigned Signal School and learned my military occupation specialty. I was assigned to the third-largest US Army radio communications transmitter site located in Tokyo. I learned to operate, maintain, and (slightly later after arrival) to supervise fixed station transmitters. I also learned to operate, maintain, and supervise VHF-UHF radio relay equipment other than the microwave radio relay equipment. I also tried to learn all I could about communications, taking advantage of the situation. That station DID operate "24/7" and all (not on authorized leave) were available 24/7.

>> Heil and Miccolis really OVERWORK their look-down-their-noses

>I congratulate you on your brand new amateur radio license.

You act the contemptible HYPOCRITE, Heil. You've spent a long, long message trying to put me down through all of it. Now you try the "nice-nice" route with the "congratulations."

You are about as two-faced a Janus as I've ever met.

>Keep your ears and eyes open and you may learn a great deal.

Keep YOUR mouth and keyboard SHUT once in a while and YOU might learn to be a civil human being.

>That attitude won't help you in gaining experience in amateur radio.

See, the WRONG side of the Janus face gets all the attention and it MUST mouth off with "advice."

> The fact is that you are a beginner in amateur radio.

The "fact" is that you are an asshole of a human being wannabe, Heil.

>You have much to learn.

YOU have MUCH MUCH MORE to learn about getting along with others. OFF radio.

>You aren't an instant expert, Len.

I don't pretend to be. Why do YOU pretend to be an "expert?"

Other than with morse code mode communications, that is.

You come back ONLY when you've had PART of the experience
I've had in OTHER radio services, INCLUDING radio as used by the Department of Defense in various contracting jobs (NO license necessary).

Don't try to snow the other hams with your "State Departement" radio officer stuff. You were a civilian government employee (regardless of the fancy-schmancy Title you love to drop) for under 20 years. Your Big Claim is BEING DX for radio amateurs through your posting in Finland and African countries. Did the FCC post you there? Did the ARRL send you there? NO to both. So try being a HUMAN BEING. It must be hard for you to do that, but TRY.

You are NOT in "command." You have NO "authority." Try to remember that next time you use your "authority" to "command" others to do something, anything.

The BMV doesn't list hobby driving in it's regulations, yet some people collect and drive cars for a hobby. But the amateur radio SERVICE is serious business - 13 second QSOs and all!

Nor are you an expert, even after 40+ years.

Really, what were you doing working out of band Frenchmen on 6 meters?

Are you losing control of yourself, Leonard? I wrote nothing about my being the FCC. I told you that the FCC does not use the word "hobby" to define amateur radio. It's a fact!

No, Leonard, it is not. In fact, if you'll read your own words, just down the page, you'll see a guy with a brand new callsign acting as if he were very conscious of his new found RANK-STATUS-PRIVILEGES.

Wow, you are losing it. I wrote nothing of NOBILITY or God.

Well, when you're an unbearable horse's patoot without an amateur radio license and an unbearable horse's patoot with an amateur radio license, it couldn't have been much of a surprise to you.

You've done that on your own on a number of occasions. :-)

I've never claimed to "work in the FCC." We're in the same boat.
Neither of us works for the FCC.

Why should you change tactics now? I'm used to seeing your evasion,

It can't be much of a classic. There's no Major Dud posting here.

What is it to you, Len? I'm not feeding you information.

I've not denigrated anyone who has had that experience. I have denigrated at least one individual who has not had the experience but who wrote about it as if he had.

I've told you quite DIRECTLY that I've seen what you do with a little information. You don't have any and I'm not providing it for you.

Let's keep you honest, shall we? I reinserted the material you snipped in an effort to make it appear that you responded to something other than that under discussion. Anyone can look at the reinserted material and see your tactic.

> I'm not that concerned with boy-wonder rock musician turned

You must have missed a bunch of bio material, Len. I worked in broadcast radio in Miami and Cincinnati, was an outside salesman for a couple of industrial electronics distributors, played in a traveling rock band and was ten years with Cincinnati's Big Joe Duskin. You can even Google Duskin if you like. Don't forget the other classified info: I worked part-time at Sears as a high schooler and my car is yellow.

> For example, you described your "synchronization of TTYs via

Your quotes are selective and you shouldn't have used the word "your".

I made no statement to the time frame in which teletype was used.

Nope, you may continue with your usual tactics, in which case you'll continue to receive what you dish out.

I'm dealing with your attitude this very moment.

That's easily done. Its effectiveness is indicated when you start coming unglued.

I can't hear your comments. I've never suggested that you take your usenet posts elsewhere or that you stop. You've suggested that newsgroup posters do both.

> ...with all your mighty denigrations

I'm not going to silence you. I'm not going to tell you to go elsewhere. I'm going to counter you and make you an object of ridicule.

That doesn't mean there are no beginners in amateur radio. Everyone with an amateur radio license was a newcomer at some point. Only you are trying to deny your beginner status.

Yep, and you're a beginner in amateur radio.

Yep, you have the license. You're now a neophyte in amateur radio.

I'm rather ambivalent on the issue. I don't want to hang out with you.
I don't want you as an on-air pal. I really don't expect to encounter you on the ham bands.

Well, ANDERSON, I don't really know whether he does or not.

You know and I know and Jim knows that the 5 wpm Morse Code test had you beat. You got the license the way you could get the license.

You got that part right. You waited for regs to change. It was a very, very long wait.

I run into a number of folks who can't do high speed CW and whom I've never "put down". It must be something about you and your attitude. :-)

I disagree. You've trotted out OLD arguments and OLD postings. You've told and retold your "Big time" ADA story countless times. You've used the same, tired, jokes five and six times each. Most of the stuff you classify as "dropped by others" means "swept under the rug" by Leonard

That's a factual error on your part. I said no such thing. I wrote

The inconsistency was in your ability to read and understand words.

That'll come as news to those in the Air Force who are called "boot" as a term of derision. I'm sure you can tell us, Len, what was the term of derision used for new recruits in the Army?

> You want me to attend Basic Training ALL OVER AGAIN?

Did you know that you misspelled "administrative" the last two times you've attempted to use it?

You've made another factual error, Leonard, old piranha. Administrative "differentiations" are not the same as different purposes for various radio service, different protocol in operation, different operating modes used and the like. One example would be the very common used of CW in amateur radio. VHF/UHF users would not concern themselves typically with a knowledge of propagation. Point-to-point HF users would likely concern themselves with the propagation between their station and up to several others. Radio amateurs, not being point-to-point users, concern themselves with weak signal, possible propagation paths.

That tells us pretty much nothing useful.

Tell us how the FCC defines amateur radio. Does the Commission ever refer to it as a hobby?

>> You're green--a beginner.
>

I stated nothing unfactual, Len. You have just obtained your very first amateur radio license. You have no previous experience in amateur radio. You're a newcomer, a novice, a neophyte, green. We all start somewhere. You've started.

>> I wrote that you're a novice in amateur radio. That is the case.

>
> You've REALLY got a hard one in trying to put me down.

It isn't hard at all, Len. You don't like being called a beginner, no matter how true it happens to be. We were all beginners in amateur radio at one time. You really don't like being called one.

> You ought to experience some catharsis, such as writing

You are in no way obligated to take my advice, Len. You may cling to your old attitude and the results it has brought you.

> Maybe,
> with the "help" of your elected representatives, you can
> force the FCC to change my license to Technician!

You'd still be a beginner as a Technician or a General Class licensee.
Any way you slice it, you're a brand new ham. You don't like that part.

> Or, you could get some mental counseling and LOSE your > antagoinistic I-am-superior attitude. Nobody has to

You should take some of those swell ideas and write 'em down in a little notebook. You could look them over when you have your morning coffee

(or before your mental counseling sessions) and ask yourself: Have I, a beginner in amateur radio, come off with an "I-am_superior" attitude? Have I acted in a manner that makes others feel that they have to kiss my ass, salut me or give up their seat on the bus to me, just because I am Leonard H. "I started in big time HF radio fifty years ago" Anderson?

If you do that on a regular basis, you might come to see how it is that you aren't getting the warm welcome you seem to feel is your due. You aren't impressing long time hams, some of whom have done at least as much in electronics or radio operation as you've done. You aren't impressing those who have decades in amateur radio under their belts. You might understand why you are seem by some, as a pontificating blow hard.

It must have been a boring evening in that the Lavender Lads didn't show up in their usual purple-tufted regalia. Roger almost went home...almost. But he held out for Closing Hour.

So sad for Woger that the liquor flowed, but the "likker" he was in search of was not in attendance this evening. Too bad. Mark would have liked to have joined Woger for a bit of "likker", though the two of them would have been at odds over getting the best of the best. Woger and Mark would have concluded the evening at The Lounge arm-wrestling over who "got" the cutest Lavender Lad. Mark would have gone for the biggest 'hulk' and Roger, by nature, would opt for the youngest looking one.

One can see them now. Roger, ever the salivating pervert, looking at the young Lavender Lads while Mark, who as usual has nothing going for him, sits in the corner and tells Roger, "only in your dreams, roger".

Closing Hour: Synopsis.

Woger may or may not go home with a Lavender Lad. Mark goes home alone to be led by his nose by Gavi who has Mark's Bisexual, Pagan, Magickal Jewish agenda laid out for Mark to cowtow to. Mark is a follower, easily led by Gav. Gav's agenda is, by default, Mark's agenda.

Mark is a follower. He has no purpose than to be the weak link.

This week, against all the hints offered by home-brew antenna builders I installed a 200 ft. length of 450 Ohm ladder line from my rigs out through a feed-through pipe that also houses several coaxial cables. Current wisdom says that this ladder line should be isolated from other cables/metals by no less than two inches, but I have found this to be not true.

To date, my ladder line loads quite well. Granted, I run only 100 watts through it, but my tuner works very well indeed and I've worked stations worldwide with no feedback through the other cables that are cramped into the same space. Good grounding? Maybe. But I posit that the placement of ladder line need not meet that "two inch" criteria that is oft written about.

It works for me. Catch you on 17m.

Dave, you appear to be reasonably intelligent, so why do you trip and fall over such things? "MOS" or Military Occupational Specialty is the US Army equivalent of the AFSC.

Dave, what was your AFSC?

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

Brian, don't expect an answer...:-)

Heil isn't going to tell anyone directly. He will cloud his "answer" in generalized, ambiguous terms without being specific.

Heil wants to argue for the sake of arguing, always with the intention of putting down those he perceives are his newsgroup "enemies."

I have yet to meet a veteran of military service who does not recall his unit, where he was, what he did. I have also met a few who wish to cloud the issue with non-specific generalities in order to refuse to admit what their military jobs were...because they wished to elevate themselves as doing more than they actually did.

I've encountered a few civilians in electronics who do the same thing about their civilian jobs. They want to be "more important sounding" to those around them, raise themselves by some mythical bootstraps to be Very Important. Those won't give specifics, claiming some kind of "proprietary information they cannot reveal" or for some fear "of being made fun of" by naming details.

We wind up walking into a dense haze of pipe-dream smoke generated by those folks, unable to see what they actually did...which is the way they want it. They like to cloud issues because that is the first step in trying to sell themselves as something better than They are. All that smoke is bad for them...and not too swift for us, either.

Heil was "in a country at war." Wow!
Heil "worked with NASA." Wow!
Heil "didn't work with low-power tinker-toy radios." Wow!

Yawn.

I was in a country at war without even leaving the country. True. World War 2, first years of the Korean War, the Vietnam War, the first Gulf War, the second Gulf War. No "battles in the boonies" where I lived, no "incoming," no "denied territory," no martial law. The United States was AT WAR. Well, Congress declared (officially) War directly only about WW2. :-)

I have "worked with NASA" as an employee of companies that contracted with NASA (two of them, directly). Only one of them did "rocket science." :-) Literally. Rocketdyne built, builds, refurbishes the Space Shuttle Main Engines (SSME) and I've been present at several engine test firings...instrumented by wired and a few radio telemetry links.

I have yet to see a "tinker-toy" radio in any form. Since Tinker Toys were - in my childhood - all wood, therefore quite good insulating material. I haven't heard of any new state-of-the-art "non-conductor" electronics. Maybe Lego will come up with metalized plastic Lego blocks?

At least none of my "towers" were damaged by any wind storm...that includes some TV yagis circa 1949 in northern Illinois and my pole-mounted discone of 2007 in southern California (that wind storm damaged my 35-year old garage door opener which required replacing). Discone survived nicely, all precautions for proper wind-loading foreseen...without guy wires.

Hey, no sweat, Mark. I didn't decide until February 17, 2007, seeing a very local test session available on February 25; I was busy with other things on Friday the 23rd. For me it was just "cram time" just like college days or the impossible-to-do-in-assigned-timeframe work assignments...download the QPs from www.ncvec.org, do a bunch of on-line practice tests (all of passing grades).

The FCC license grant was legal on 7 March 2007, taking just two days more than my First 'Phone grant of March 1956...back in days when there was NO privatized testing and I had to go 90 miles into the Chicago FCC Field Office to take all four test elements for that. While "airmail" was quick back then, there wasn't any relatively-inexpensive "overnight delivery" services.

True, but veteran battle-hardened, "I was in a country AT war" Heil won't comment on that. He "maxed-out" on only 10 hours per day, poor baby. I once worked 34 hours at a stretch on an emergency (military) transmitter repair, breaks only for meals and nature calls. I've worked 16 to 18 hours at a stretch in civilian jobs, fortunately not often. Thank you, but I'll take retirement any day...and the freedom to tell the control freaks
to "up yours" when they get into "command mode." :-)

Heil won't say what his "AFSC" was "a country at war." He probably is too "maxed out" to admit it? :-)

tell me what could you use the vecctor stuf witht he imagainary number on in Ham radio I learned some that cstuff in college NEVER found a use for it at all

(indeed might make passing the exam easier if I had never seen it

Let's cut Windy some slack.

Had he waited any longer to take those examinations, the "box" he was referring to might have been a coffin!

There's no cloud. I've told you straight out: You aren't getting the

I'm not arguing the issue with you, Len. I'm not providing you the information. It is available elsewhere on the web. Check it out or don't.

I had one unit in Basic Training. I had another during a two-year U.S. assignment. I had a third in Vietnam. My fourth unit was a U.S. tour after Vietnam. I recall them all. I recall where I was. I recall what I did. What I haven't done is share the information with you. Now what?

As an alternative, they've seen your insulting behavior toward others

You never get the big picture, Len. I've seen what I did in the military. You haven't seen it. That is the way I want it.

> They

Let's test that theory. I've told you relatively nothing about what I did in Vietnam. According to you, I'd have to be peddling a different story about my duties in Vietnam in order to elevate myself. That didn't happen. I haven't told you anything.

You don't appear to be very swift.

I've already told you that I was in the country where the war was going on. It wasn't like being in Japan during the Korean War with artillery barrages and threats from yet-to-be-developed Soviet bombers.

That's a relief, Len. I was concerned for your towers and antennas. What size tower have you installed at the Los Angeles home? Have you put up a sizable yagi or are you a cubical quad man?

The tower which failed here was made out your way. It didn't meet its published specs. The winds which rake this exposed hilltop are likely higher than those encountered in a place like yours, a low spot surrounded by hills.

I have another tower and yagi ready to be installed later this month. It won't be a California-made, crank up model. It'll be another Rohn 25 with guys at two levels. My seventy-footer of the same tower has withstood all storms encountered here, even with a 40m beam and other antennas mounted on it. If you're worried about high winds, perhaps Roger Wiseman can recommend a wire multiband antenna with great performance, even when mounted relatively low to the ground. It might even be a better antenna for earthquake country.

Welp, Dave won't talk about his directional loops anymore... must have come down with his tower.

The Real + jImaginary numbers are excellent for handling Impedance and Admittance when there is a requirement in equating the Imaginary part (Reactance or Susceptance)
to zero as in antenna matching over a narrow frequency range. It is also excellent for Impedance/Admittance matching in interstage tuned circuits (both receivers and transmitters).

The "vector stuff" lets one quickly visualize, for example,
the frequency characteristics of any antenna on a Smith Chart. A Z or Y Bridge or "Noise Bridge" (low-cost version of the more classic bridges) tells one the Resistance or Conductance and the Reactance or Susceptance of an antenna or the input to either a transmitter stage or the input to a receiver. Usually a Noise Bridge yields Y and the value of the resistive component (G) and the Susceptive componet (B); that is the equivalent of a paralleled resistance and capacitance/inductance at one frequency. Knowing complex number handling allows easy conversion to Z (the series impedance form) and the equivalent value of R (resistance) and X (reactance).

In one case a few decades ago, I was able to "rotate" the characteristics of 8 different SAW filters around a Smith Chart to equal a near-all-resistive correct value with the capacitive part cancelled to near-zero for best power transfer into the SAW filter...using the determined length of small coaxial cable. Saved a lot of space as opposed to an elaborate matching network.

> (indeed might make passing the exam easier if I had never seen it > before studing it for an ham exam)

Well, yes, but you (and I and everyone else) cannot know future requirements, can we? :-) Handling complex quantities is very basic and can come in very handy.

The usual ham who doesn't build or bother to check antennas more than "open" or "closed' connections won't bother with it, An antenna tuner, manual or automatic, can do all that stuff of matching. But, is it better to remain ignorant of certain operating characteristics of one's station or try to know it in more specific detail? :-)

He "knows where he was" but won't say where or what he

You ACT like it.

Incorrect as to everyone's INTERPRETATION of regulations.

Any activity receiving NO MONETARY COMPENSATION is generally considered as a HOBBY. Of course that could be a CHARITABLE activity...but the IRS can interpret charitable work as the equivalent of monetary compensation and demand some tax payment on that. Amateur Radio MIGHT be considered RELIGIOUS.
Cerainly many are devoted to amateur radio AS IF it were a religion, especially morse code skill. :-)

What do you define amateur radio as? It can't be "broadcasting" because that is forbidden in regulations (very few exceptions there). It can't be for business purposes because that is not allowed by regulations. Are you thinking that amateur radio is a national "service?"

The word "service" as used throughout Title 47 C.F.R. is a regulatory term denoting type and kind of radio activity being regulated; i.e., Private Land Mobile Radio SERVICE, Radio Control Radio SERVICE, Citizens Band Radio SERVICE.

The FCC does NOT use the terms "green," "tyro," "beginner,"
"newbie," "neophyte," or "brand new" anywhere in Title 47
C.F.R. (including Part 97) as any sort of "classification" or other identification of radio amateurs.

Neither can you understand Figures of Speech. :-) Yet you go on phrases AS IF you were a linguistic expert. You are NOT one.

>I'm not going to silence you.

You said you "can't hear me." :-)

You've tried to do that for years. To little effect... :-)

Not the Grate Heil!!! Never! :-)

>Only you are trying to deny your beginner status.

"Beginner?" :-)

>You're now a neophyte in amateur radio.

The FCC doesn't use "neophyte" anywhere in Title 47 C.F.R.

Do you consider yourself "above" the FCC?

>...but not qualifying for the colloquial amateur radio expression "Extra >right out of the box."

Tsk, tsk, I've already told you what the colloquial phrase means, yet you continue to "redefine" it to suit your own hatred.
Naughty, naughty...

>I don't want to hang out with you. I don't want you as an on-air pal.
>I really don't expect to encounter you on the ham bands.

You certainly sound anti-social. Tsk, tsk.

>You know and I know and Jim knows that the 5 wpm Morse Code test had you >beat.

It did? I didn't know that! I quit bothering about morse code skill a long time ago...didn't make sense to me to keep it so long just to satisfy some minority amateurs who favored that mode for federal licensing. The FCC stated publicly in 1990 that the morse code test was not considered a determining factor for their granting amateur radio licenses...but they had to follow adminstrative policy by agreeing to ITU amateur radio regulations ("the treaty" as mislabeled by so many).

Are you saying I could NEVER learn morse code? Tsk, tsk, so many (morsemen) have said that is EASY!

Are you saying I exhibit "sloth" in "not wanting to learn?"
How could you possibly say that without observing how I have worked or accomplished in my life? Of course you could WRITE IT here (no one can hear you scream over the Internet)
but that would be woefully inaccurate.

No, you and Miccolis are carefully phrasing things about me in a highly negative, derogatory way, intended to insult and demean. It's always been that way in here. :-)

>You got the license the way you could get the license.

Brilliant deduction! Did you spend hours thinking that phrase up?

Tsk, if you have some dispute about my getting an amateur radio license, you are free to contact the FCC and complain to them. Mention that I tested with a ARRL VEC examination team, the ARRL VEC in Newington confirmed that, and forwarded my test data to the FCC. Mention also your "elite status" as a supreme authority on amateur radio matters and how you consider yourself as primary judge and jury over and above those who disagree with you. That should go over big.

>I run into a number of folks who can't do high speed CW and whom I've >never "put down".

Tsk, tsk, you are losing your grip. :-)

Is old age finally getting to you? Amateur structures falling down and damaging your house? Worked more Frenchmen out of band?

What was your AFSC?

3987. FFC joke by the cimissioner

FCC Chairman Kevin Martin appeared at an FCC Bar Association event this week, cracking all sorts of jokes (via Broadband Reports) about the workings of the FCC, his policy positions, and criticism that he's overly friendly to telcos.

Perhaps it's nice that the guy can make fun of himself and his fellow commissioners, but some of his jokes sound a little too realistic to really be very funny. For instance, Martin said this was the FCC's new answering machine message: "Hi, you've reached the FCC. If this is AT&T, please press one for our merger approval hotline. If you're calling from a Vonage phone, please hang up and dial from a Verizon phone. If this is the cable industry and you're calling about a waiver, your call is very important to us [extended pause] goodbye."

When you consider Martin's power in the industry, and how his views on all these issues determine the level (or lack) of competition in the industry, it's hard to find jokes like that funny. Perhaps Martin and the lawyers he spoke to are laughing, but the poor service, high prices and lack of competition in several of the markets he oversees really aren't too amusing. "

That was the point of the post. None, nary, nada, of the lines are overloaded with RF. Zero. Zilch.
Granted, it IS only 100 watts though.
Another route could be to do what a friend did in that he drilled two small holes completely through the concrete basement wall and drilled them, I think, two inches apart. Through these holes he ran two small, rubber coated copper rods and sealed the holes with caulk. He solders the ladder line to each end of the rods and says that it makes a very nice feed-through. The only modification I would make would be to design some sort of quick disconnect for the inside ladder line for those "just in case" times when storms roll through.
Any ideas on that?

That's very interesting. Someone who likes to sit on his porch then has a hobby of porch sitting. A guy who drinks a twelve-pack every evening

Wow! If you work for a charity and receive no compensation from that charity, the IRS can demand payment based on the money you didn't ever receive? It is indeed a topsy-turvy world.

The FCC doesn't define it as religious or a hobby.

In my country, people are free to devote as much or as little time as they like to an activity which is not part of their job. So it is different where you live?

That's "cerainly" true, Len. Anyone who is a beginner at anything is considered a newbie, neophyte, novice, beginner or green. It doesn't apply only to amateur radio.

I'm not a military FAKE, Len. I've not lied. I've not claimed any

Then we'd have two more factual errors that you would have made. A man called a fake when he has made no claims. You have a dilemma.

You should think about that. You certainly lost control of dishing out the insults and denigrations. You don't like it at all when someone gets the best of you.

Yes, Len, you're a beginner in amateur radio. That's a fact.

That doesn't matter. The term applies to a beginner in any endeavor.
Someone who has never played a guitar and who buys one and attempts to play it, is a beginner. A man who just obtained his first amateur radio license is a beginner at amateur radio. Live with it.

The continuing is yours. You continue to leave out that word "right"

You told us that you gave up. You quit. Now you describe it as "I quit bothering about Morse code..."

What about it? It was a requirement for obtaining an amateur radio license until very recently. You "quit bothering" a long, long time ago.

> Are you saying I could NEVER learn morse code?

When did you start to learn it? How old are you now?

It was a snap, Len.

You told us that you gave up.

I didn't say you exhibited "sloth". You brought up the term.
As you mention, I didn't observe what you did in your life. I do know that you told us that you reached a point in learning Morse code where you simply gave up.

> Of course you could

I think you found learning the Morse code tougher than you thought. Is that why you gave up on learning it?

> No, you and Miccolis are carefully phrasing things about me

You left out "accurate" in your list of carefully phrased things.

>> You got the license the way you could get the license.

> Brilliant deduction! Did you spend hours thinking that phrase up?

It wasn't necessary to stew on it or to mull it over. You were waiting over seven years back but the FCC only reduced the Morse exam to f i v e wpm. You waited for another s e v e n years until the Morse exam went away. You got the license the way you could get the license.
Be proud! You've finally done it. You were "otherwise qualified." You must have been the guy about whom Carl was writing. You were the "otherwise qualified" guy.

I don't have any dispute, Len. You obtained your license under the regulations currently in place. Be happy!

I don't claim any elite status, Len. I'm just not a Lennie-come-lately.

We had some hail recently. It didn't do any damage. I didn't think to Len wants me to provide the information so that he can live up to the terms of the very accurate profile of his actions which N2EY wrote some years back. It says:

"No matter what job, educational level, employer, or government/military service that a radio amateur has, if said radio amateur opposes Mr. Anderson's views, he/she will be the target of Mr. Anderson's insults, ridicule, name-calling, factual errors, ethnic/racial/religious slurs, excessive emoticons and/or general infantile behavior."

--N2EY

Len likes to refer to the profile as character assassination. The problem with that is that he can be shown to have done all of these things over and over and over. For it to be character assassination, it would have to be shown that Len has not engaged in such behavior.

Len lives up to the N2EY profile of his actions today as he did for all of those years during which he had no amateur radio license. What he claims to decry in others, he does himself.

Allow me the luxury of but a comment or two, then I shall no longer lend any further credibility to Len by discussing this.
I've noted that Len takes, as I said, a childish, perverted pleasure in playing word games while smiling to himself and needling others, yourself especially. He should be left ignored. Len is apparently self-absorbed and, as noted, becomes somewhat disgruntled when his diatribes go unanswered.
Len desires attention...nay...NEEDS attention as evidenced by his lengthy posts. To ignore Len is to insult Len. He needs you far more than you need him.
I look at Len with a sidewards, understanding glance. His comments are bolstered by but a few in these groups and if his supporters, such as the Myna Bird are any indication of his standing...well, that pretty much sums it up.

Personally, I prefer the definition of Amateur Radio provided by the ARRL, RAC, RSGB (and most other Amateur Radio organizations) - a hobby activity.

From a regulatory perspective, it is a service provided to the public.
It's what we do with that service that makes it a hobby - and an excellent one at that!

merit - I'll check that one out this summer <:P

Actually, K8MN will tell people directly. He just

Note the use of the papal/royal "WE" by Len.

And the use of K8MN's last name, rather than callsign or first name.

Len appears to presume that anyone who has done something honorable will tell all about it in a public forum like this. He also appears to presume that failure to do so means the person has something to hide.

In my experience, both those presumptions are simply incorrect as general rules. Often a person who has done something honorable does not feel the need to blab it all over the place.

There is also the fact that if someone is on Len's enemies list, what they have done makes no difference in how Len will treat them. He will use his attack techniques on them regardless of, say,
their actual military/combat experience.

This has been demonstrated so many times that anyone with sense whom Len considers an "enemy" doesn't bother to tell Len anything about their life experience.

Yep. But that's an old version of the profile, which has been refined and updated over the years.

Here's the latest version, straight from the author:

"No matter what employment, education, life experience or government/military service someone has, if that person disagrees with any of Len's views, or corrects any of Len's mistakes, s/he will be the target of Len's insults, ridicule, name-calling, factual errors, ethnic/gender/racial slurs, excessive emoticons, orders to shut up and/or general infantile behavior."

Sums it all up in one long but accurate sentence.

That's one possibility. Another is to accuse the person of having something to hide, being ashamed, or outright lying.

That's what the shrinks call "projection". Len also exhibits classic textbook "transference" behavior, where he attributes to one person the actions of someone completely different.

Then there's the inclusion of obviously intentional mistakes in Len's posts, as a way of getting attention from those who correct those mistakes. That one presents a bit of a moral dilemma, because to leave the mistakes uncorrected may cause some to be deceived by them.

IMHO, it's all about Len somehow "proving" he is better than anyone who disagrees with him.

Agreed. In the end, most people do just that. KH6HZ

Compare the number, length and tone of Len's posts (under a variety of screen names) and the truth of your statements becomes apparent.

I'm not sure who "Myna Bird" is, but I think you are

For the most part. Every now and then I like to needle Grandpa a little, though.

Sharpton, Jesse Jackson and the NAACP were quick to condemn Don Imus for his comments. Where were they when the Duke Lacross players were subjected to a year of hell regarding the accusations of a black female that lied? Sharpton, Jackson and the NAACP condemned the Duke players all year and now that they are proven innocent beyond a shadow of a doubt, {as they said all along} we hear nothing. Why don't they condemn the rappers that make racist comments on every recording they make? These rappers seem more threatening and inappropriate than anything Imus ever said.

Below are a few samples of racist rap lyrics and their producers.
These are MTV sponsored bands. Go to any grocery store and look for Vibe, Source, XXL or any other hip-hop magazine and you will find these performers.

Right. Len's inferiority complex crops up frequently. He certainly doesn't like having it pointed out that he is a beginner in something or that he has less experience than another. He has difficulties with anything he perceives to be rank, class or status, but he's the first guy to do a "look what I've done."

There are times when I'd swear that he sees himself as a short story

There's nobody posting as "Robesin". If you mean Steve Robeson, neither of you has proven anything he has written about his military service to be a falsehood.

Which of Len's statements was mostly accurate?

For that to be accurate, one would first need to make the inaccurate assumption that my QSOs were all of thirteen seconds or less. Time spent listening also counts. Finally, there's little chance that I'll be going through all of my logs and presenting a statistical analysis

Now we've heard from the anonymous "John Smith". Well "John", what is it for which I haven't the sense? Is it that I haven't the sense to care who is asking or are you stating that I haven't the sense to be ashamed of my military service. It has to be one of those. Either way, your comments don't make sense.

That's another interesting take you have, "John". A couple of characters want me to disclose information on my military service. I haven't provided it, yet the quizzing doesn't stop. Where is the bickering coming from? You have no information on whether I'm a slob of any kind, but you're quick to make such a claim.

You haven't disclosed much about yourself, "John". Feel free to send Len and hot-ham-and-whatever your military service information if you like.

Again, I stand by my earlier statements that nobody, especially Dave, "owes" anybody any kind of details or history of any military service. For those who ask, no, DEMAND such details, I submit that it is nobody's business.
John is merely employing the school yard taunt that Len has perfected. He is challenging you to prove that you engaged in some sort of military service while "John" makes no such claims of having done same.

"John" apparently suffers from undersized cujones....

I've yet to see Dave attack others. Dave is one of the nicer respondents in this group and comports himself very well. He responds accordingly, but has never, in my experience, attacked anyone. His responses to the attacks of others, yourself included, are most often met with a great amount of civility. If you can prove otherwise, Morkie, please quote the posts.
Oh, and Mork? May I remind you that Dave long ago killfiled you, so your snippets to his responses go unseen by him. Unlike myself, Dave feels that responding to you is beneath his dignity.

I should follow Dave's example, but sometimes I cannot help but lower myself into your dysfunctional gutter and post an occasional response to your delusional comments.
At the very least, Morkie, I can climb out of your gutter and continue with my life. You, on the other hand, have no life other than Usenet and the Nim board. You are hopelessly stuck in your gutter and have no way out. I pity you.

Nobody fills this newsgroup with anything, more than Mark Morgan. He has only a few persecutors and, as far as I know, only one of them is actually insane. My posts are few when compared to Mark's. My posts are far fewer than Len Anderson's and don't run to lengthy, pontificating diatribes. In contrast with your own posts, I post using my own name and my callsign. Give it a try, "John."

If your example were used, we'd all act like people in a witness protection program. It is quite easy to hide in the shadows of anonymity and snipe.

You're a fellow who won't even use his own name or his callsign.
You sit in the shadows and make statements about the courage of others.
You're pathetic.

It really is interesting to read what you find to be petty bickering.
If you're really reading the newsgroup, you can surely find at least two

The mistake is used to bait those who have an unreasonable need to correct others. Miccolis, Heil and Robesin fit that profile.

It seems that your response includes intentional mistakes, used purely for baiting others.

snicker

"guy's car", "girl's clothes", "Sue's home"

You have very little idea of how to use an apostrophe, much less a capital letter.

Sorry John.

Dave is right. You are incorrect.

Contractions are formed as 's: He Is = he's.

Posessives are likewise formed as 's: Heil's contacts all used CW.

Plural possessives are formed as s': Heil's contacts' radios were set to CW mode.

Don't sweat it.

Amateurs (plural, and NO apostrophe) frequently attempt to argue the incorrect to be correct, and so look imbecilic.

Part of the new amateur policy should be to attempt to correct this image. The image of the unwashed, illiterate ham needs to go ... I tire of the smirks-behind-the-back given by professionals.

I think what Imus said is pretty scummy, but I think what you hear from many rap artists is pretty scummy too. The difference is, he was scummy on public airwaves and he has advertizers to keep happy.

Rap artrists aren't held accountable because their CDs sell. They do not have to keep advertizers happy. They just have to sell records.
They are accountable only to themselves and their record companies.
MSN didn't fire Imus so much as MSN's advertizers fired Imus. If Kellogg's Cereals, or Chevy, or IBM are sponsoring Imus's show, they are not going to want to be associated with that kind of crap. When a rapp artist is offensive, there's no one to say "I'm going to pull my advertizing."

In this instance, one anonymous fellow--maybe a radio amateur and maybe not--has attempted to do what you describe. I wouldn't call him an imbecile, just unschooled.

I don't know that there is such an image. You could do your part to better things though. You might use the internet to undergo a crash course in the use of the apostrophe.

I have no knowledge one way or the other regarding said smirks.

However, I do believe it is malfeasant on the part of anyone to not -- tactfully -- correct something they know to be incorrect.

At what point in today's society did it become politically correct to allow ignorance to flourish?

4054. On apostrophes

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy
Date: 2007-04-15 15:59:21 UTC
From: Dave Heil <k8mn@earthlink.net>
Message-ID: <tZrUh.3990$3P3.2608@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>
Source record: 189111

"John Smith" insists that his version of using the apostrophe is correct. Those pointing out his mistaken ideas are called morons and imbeciles. Three seconds of Google search brings enlightenment.

For the apostrophe-challenged from:

http://www.write101.com/sample.htm

---

1. To show OMISSION

What's a nice kid like me doing in a place like this?

We started with two words, what and is, but because this is informal writing, we want to express it informally, so we omit a letter from the word is. Because we're well brought up little Vegemites (remember?), we let people know what we've done.

I could've danced all night ... (could have, not could 'of')

It's time for breakfast (It is time ...)

It's been raining all day. (It has been raining ...)

So, in future whenever you see an apostrophe, make a conscious effort to work out what the original word was before the letter was omitted.
Sometimes, as in the case of could've and would've, more than one letter has been omitted.

This will establish good habits and alert you to the role of the apostrophe.

2. To show POSSESSION

We went to Marmaduke's restaurant for dinner. (Marmaduke owns the restaurant; it is the restaurant of Marmaduke.)

Notice how the apostrophe comes at the end of the noun (Marmaduke) and is accompanied by the letter 's' - a bit like a chaperone.

We knew whom to blame for the missing pie; there was cream all over the dog's whiskers!

We're only referring to one dog and it owns the whiskers (and the pie and a very satisfied smile, no doubt).

Some words sound awkward when an apostrophe 's' is added:

Jesus's disciples.

The accepted form here is to just use the 's' apostrophe:

Jesus' disciples.

N.B. This only applies to names of Biblical or historical significance e.g. Jesus, Moses, Zeus, Demosthenes, Ramses ... the rest of us whack in the apostrophe and add an 's.'

Moses' followers, Zeus' priests, Demosthenes' teachings, Ramses' pyramid

Others don't have the same clumsy sound:

The princess's chair.

The important thing is to be consistent in your use of the form - nothing is writ in stone!

Confusion arises when the apostrophe is used with a plural noun.

At the zoo, the children were most interested in seeing the lions' den.

More than one lion owns the den, so we add the apostrophe after the 's' (this is the den of the lions).

So, the general rule is:

* if there's one owner - add an apostrophe and then 's'
* if there are two or more owners - add 's' then an apostrophe.

However, (and of course you're not surprised to hear this, are you?), there are exceptions to this rule.

For words which form their plural by changing internal letters (instead of adding 's'), the apostrophe comes before the 's'.

It was the children's turn to wash up.

Children is already a plural word, so we don't need to make it doubly plural by adding 's' apostrophe; however, we do need to indicate the idea of ownership, so we use apostrophe 's'.

Some other words which follow this rule are: men, women, people.

When you have 'double possession' - when two or more people (or subjects) own one item and both (or all) of their names are mentioned, the apostrophe is applied only to the second (or last) name.

We had coffee at Ermintrude and Marmaduke's mansion.

When you're using names that end in -S, you follow the same rules as with any other name and add apostrophe S:

Chris's car, Bridget Jones's Diary.

Plural names also follow the same rules:

Bill Thomas's car; the Thomases' new house (add -es to names that end in S to indicate plural form).

The apostrophe is also used with many expressions of time (to show that the time period owns the other noun):

an hour's time; a year's holiday

BUT notice that we do not use the apostrophe with possessive pronouns (remember, these are the little guys who step in and lend a paw to nouns).

After dinner at Marmaduke's restaurant, we went back to his place for coffee.

The bird's feathers were ruffled. (The bird owns the feathers.)

The bird ruffled its feathers. (The bird owns the feathers, but the pronoun its is being used instead of the noun, so there is NO apostrophe.

You'll see it's and its used incorrectly nearly every single day and in places where it should never happen. An easy way to make sure you never confuse the two is to ask yourself (do this quietly, you don't want to alarm those around you), if the words it is can be substituted in the sentence- if the answer is yes, then whack in the old apostrophe.

If the answer is no, then sit on your hands so you won't be tempted.

The bird ruffled its (it is?) feathers. (NO)

It's (it is?) a lovely day. (YES)

To summarise, here is a good way to check if you need an apostrophe - for future reference:

If you can substitute the use of "of" then you use the apostrophe.

e.g. This is Marmaduke's house ... it is the house of Marmaduke.

The children's mother phoned ... the mother of the children phoned.

Three months' work ... the work of three months.

If "John" likes, he can print this and keep it near his computer.

4073. 5A7A -- the Untold Story

I just read this on the WVDXA Bulletin Board and it made me ill. What do you think? Maybe it is time for the ARRL to rethink its DXCC policy regarding credit for operations with restrictions like this. Even better yet, radio manufacturers stop supplying free rigs to DX operations that refuse to contact stations based on politics. If we cut off the funds and the glory, maybe this kind of discrimination will finally end.

DXers,
I apologize for the length of this post up front. I'll simply ask that you draw your own conclusions and respond as you feel the need. And of course, sometimes no response is a response as well.

Actually, I have hesitated sharing this information for the past couple months but events in the past week have compelled me to speak my mind and at the very least, ensure that the DX world is aware of a situation that I find unbelievably depressing and depressingly unbelievable, given the fact our hobby is supposed to transcend this sort of thing.

Let's rewind the tape to November 16, 2006. Excitement abounds as 5A7A hits the airwaves and DXers around the world celebrate this rare DX entitiy as they enter it into their logbooks. It's been a good while since a 5A was QRV and the seemilngly relentless pileups bear witness to the need by the DX world. The operation, headed by a team of veteran German operators does a first-class job of making sure that it will be an even longer while before 5A hits any of the Top-10 lists of needed entities. DXers around the world are literally gorging themselves on 5A7A QSOs-- all bands and modes! The signals are great and everyone is having a blast enjoying this great hobby! "Hey, here comes another new band for me, by golly!" "Aren't they doing a great job operating the pileups?!!"

Well folks it wasn't quite like that for all the DXers. Some of our Order didn't get to experience the joy of a 5A7A QSO. Why?? Simply because of who they are and where they live. You see, they are

Israelis. Yes, that's right, these 4X ham radio operators, these Jews in Israel cannot be contacted. This was the restriction that the 5A7A operators accepted from the Libyan licensing authorities before they even made the first QSO with the rest of the world. They apparently signed some kind of blood oath that they would not make QSOs with 4X amateurs. And so, when an excited 4X DX operator called the 5A7A, he was simply told, "I cannot work you," "We are not allowed to make a QSO with you."

>From November 16 to November 29, 5A7A logged over 112,000 QSOs. You will not find a single 4X station in their on-line log. Oh, there was one up until last week. That was for an 80m contact that Burt Cohen W3GG made during the CQWW CW test with his 4X0G operation. That QSO has since been mysteriously purged from the on-line records. I am curious if it is still in the 5A7A Contest Entry submitted to CQWW authorities however.

During the time that 5A7A was QRV, emails, phone calls and pleas from several interested sources were made to the ARRL, the Daily DX, CQ Contest advising of this discriminatory action. It was argued that the 5A7A should be DQ'd for breaching the "no-politics" code of conduct that most of us try to adhere to in the hobby. Amazingly, we were told that we, as opponents of this conduct, were crossing the political line. Therefore, all the movers and shakers of the DX and Contest world, in essence said, "No harm, no foul." Let the rest of the world enjoy this feeding frenzy. It is good for business, of course. Oh, it was suggested that this sort of thing had happened a long time ago and that one way the 4X ops might get around this was to give a modified prefix with their callsign. "This is what has been done before and perhaps they can contact the QSL manager after the DXpedition and provide their correct callsign and get their QSLs after everyone is safely out of the country." As an example, if my callsign is 4X0WV, I would use "UX0WV" or "VX0WV" to call the 5A7A.

Hey great idea! Use a "modified" callsign.... but under the circumstances.... Why not! So yes, this is what some of the creative 4X boys did. You can find clever examples in the 5A7A on-line log if you want to spend the effort. And so now, I know that some of these 4X ops this past week have contacted the 5A7A QSL manager, DL9USA and have provided him with the information from these "unusual" QSOs with exact times, callsigns used and frequencies expecting cooperation in the spirit of the hobby so they can get their QSLs. Everyone can now be happy, right?

Well, guess what? DL9USA says, "No QSO's, no QSL's to 4X." 5A7A Team Coordinator Andy DJ7IK was at least somewhat apologetic in his response, "I'm very sorry that we are not able to send QSL to 4X-stations, as we got our license with the restriction not to work with 4X. Because we like to keep in touch with our partners in 5A to support the growth of ham radio in Libya, we accepted this restriction, knowing that this is not hamlike!"

Poor Andy even seems to recognize that this wasn't in the real spirit of the hobby.

So this is where it stands folks. This is where I struggle. I wonder what would have happened if the 5A7A license held the restriction of "No USA QSOs permitted?" No, it isn't my battle. I should just bow out of this and say, "Big deal, it's just a stupid hobby. Hey who really cares about a handful of DXers over in this tiny Middle-easten country." But I just can't bring myself to take the easy way out. These guys are fellow ham radio operators, fellow DXers and Contester and although they would probably be too embarrased to share this information themselves, I want people to know the truth. In this day and age where we should place ourselves above the daily BS of politics in our hobby, we shouldn't have discrimination of any sort. It doesn't matter if your a Jew, an Arab, a black, a white, a man, a woman, handicapped, an astronaut, a whatever.... we are all ham radio operators. We have a common bond in this hobby and it is 2007 for crying out loud! And so if we start licensing to exclude a nation, or a group or class of people or religion, then don't we have a problem? At that point it's time to rethink the priorities and take action.

Again, I apologize for the bandwidth. But I think the DX world needs to know the rest of this story. I think the 5A7A sponsors need to know about this too. I'm only one voice. Are there any others out there?
73,
Hal W8HC

Well I think the places that this needs to be addressed are the ITU and the IARU. They are the ones who establish international standards and treaties. The DXpedition's choice boiled down to follow Libya's rules or not operate at all. Correcting "stealth calls" after the fact could lead to denial of future DXpeditions if Libya were to find out about it. I'm curious though: Does Libya apply this same rule to those of its citizens who may be licensed?

Well, "John", it is an upside-down world you inhabit, where incorrect becomes correct, where those who know and understand something become morons and where a phrase such as the one you wrote (above), becomes a sentence.

You're welcome for the lesson in how to use an apostrophe.

Yes, Dee, and the policy is followed by many Arab countries. For a number of years, the FCC maintained a "banned countries" list which forbid U.S. radio amateurs from contacting the radio amateurs of countries which either outlawed amateur radio or had amateur radio and desired that their radio amateurs should have no contact with the U.S. Thailand was such a country.

Before U.S. entry into WWII, American hams were forbidden to contact with certain countries, including all or almost all of Europe.

Third country nationals have no choice but to follow the amateur regs of the country in which they operate.

Except that your statement isn't the end of the story. The moron would be the guy who made the statements on punctuation which you made and, in the face of facts to the contrary, continued to bray that he's right.

Your actions and reactions of today ensure that the title is yours. There's no shame in it, "John." After all, you're anonymous. You can simply choose another pseudonym if you're embarrassed.

They will shunt enough current to earth that the lead in line will vaporize outside the home thus breaking the circuit. It is vital that all surge and spike protection devices are bonded to the same grounding electrode system as the electrical system.

That's fine, hot-ham-and-cheese. Was it the numerous examples of the proper use of apostrophes--almost all wrong--provided by "John", which reminded you?

You might have forgotten the fellow who suggests that someone who uses an apostrophe correctly is an imbecile or moron. Now that's smug.

Another Morkie double standard? Notice how It is "copyright infringement" when somebody copies something from Markie's blog. But according to Markie, it is perfectly ok when he does the same. Notice how his blog is riddled with posts stolen from my blogs.

Copyright infrigement has nothing to do with giving credit. It has to do with giving permission to use such. Nevertheless, doesn't the material lifted from your blog count as fair use? At least that was the arguement you presented last time the copyright issue surfaced.

Come to think of it, it was your thread hi-jacking which drew my attention. I probably wouldn't have noticed it otherwise. There's only so much of your nonsense that I'm going to read, so this one squabble of the many squabbles that you've gotten yourself into would likely have been missed.

words are incapable of leadership. Smug? Youbetcha.

That's interesting. I didn't hijack the thread at all. I corrected
"John's" use of "heils'" in the course of my response. If anyone hijacked the thread, it was "John." I even created an entirely new thread on the use of apostrophes.

It was otherwise and you noticed anyway.

It seems to me that you see pretty much every word I write in this newsgroup. You're busy trying to read between the lines.

Is a misspelling the same as a typo? Len claims he made a typo when he misspelled Attila--three different times. Heh.

I think you're mistaking confidence for smugness.

The fact is, nobody has abused this newsgroup with more strangled cries for attention than Mark Morgan.

You needn't be embarrassed by your apostrophe debacle. You can always choose a new pseudonym. I don't think anyone is using "John Doe" right now.

Not to mention of course that current Israeli policy forbids Israeli Hams from speaking with Saudi ones, even if the Saudi ones were allowed to talk to them. Palestinian hams are pretty much banned

A chimera, the US has maintained banned lists, so has every other country on earth at one time or another. The Israeli hams know this, otherwise they wouldn't have violated their countries own regulations and used phoney callsigns. I travel to Cuba for vacations on the beach, every time I go I have to perform a passport switch in Mexico, using my American passport to leave the US and my Aussie one to enter Cuba. It's all part of life.

I can think of many areas where my experience

have nothing to do with Morse Code or amateur radio.

Yet there is no shame in being a beginner, novice, neophyte, greenhorn, tyro, wet-behind-the-ears newcomer. But for some reason Len takes offense at those words.

Len is all about rank, class and status - as long as the system used puts him at the top of the list.

Sure it does. For example, if someone is always correcting others, even when wearing the "cloak of well-meaningness," Len is not deceived and responds appropriately.

So if by military service an asshole were to be given a pass, what would you say about that?

On the other hand, why would some panty-waist claim that they've served in other ways?

At least when Len gets his point across, there's no fake cloak of well-than your example.

"Look what I've done" is a little different than "Look at what tests I've passed."

knowledgeable than Len? Kindly make a list.

Heil once said that a person who cannot spell correctly couldn't lead. Shortly thereafter he made a spelling error which I pointed out to him.

Now he's running for an ARRL office...

Seems to me that a person should at least adhere to their own convictions.

I think there's precedent for a little leeway, Jim. A person doesn't necessarily have to disagree with Len. We've seen examples of Len biting the hand of one who is in basic agreement with him. There are also examples where Len has lashed out at someone he perceives as having higher rank, status or class than Leonard.

it drives Len nuts.

It doesn't matter to him. Len has attacked my work in the Foreign Service. Len has no experience whatever in that area. He knows little of State Department communications techniques and practices of the past or present. He knows little of the workings of the diplomatic community in general. I can easily guess what he'd do with detailed information about my Air Force service, based upon what he has written about my State Department employment.

Also true.

Remember what the shrinks call "projection" (when a person thinks that everyone else thinks the same way they do) and "transference" (when a person blames someone for perceived wrongs committed by a completely different person). Those are also in play.

True enough.

In mathematical terms, such information
"drops out of the equation".

If a person doesn't give information, Len demands it and insults the person for not giving it.

If a person does give information, Len uses
it to make up new insults.

Exactly.

Doesn't matter. The information you did give offended him in some way, and so it became the base for insults.

However, I recall that at least some of your information involved the use of Morse Code to arrange RTTY radio communication for the Foreign Service. That alone was enough to set Len off.

Of course - and not just that. Look at the classic "sphincters post", most of which consists of Len disparaging the work of a US military radio operator.

Actually, I made a mistake in my previous statement. We've seen how Len behaves outside Usenet in comments to FCC.

The problem isn't with the self-esteem issue, but with the interpretation.

Here in Radnor Township, the educators I know think that having clear and consistent high standards is an essential part of building a student's self-esteem. Accepting poor work, in their view, actually damages a student's self-esteem far more than a correction.

The idea is that if you expect, for example, proper spelling, grammar, capitalization and punctuation, and follow up by marking mistakes, you are telling the students that those things matter and that they can do all of them correctly.

But if you accept shoddy work and don't call attention to mistakes, you are telling the students that they aren't smart enough to do it right.

Most students know the difference. They see proper spelling, grammar, capitalization and punctuation all around them. Most will live up to - or down to - the expectations of the educators.

The term "educators" includes parents, btw.

Yawn. "Retired" being the key word, asshole.

Yeah, sure he is. Like you never worked out of banders on 6 meters and were "in country" doing the "Rambo thing." BWHAHAHAHAHAHA, but

The dumbing down of arrl is an interesting concept (if that is possible.)

A while back ago, I seen a guy downtown with a partially full wine bottle having visions he was the messiah. Guess that is going around ...

indeed why is asking these guys to stay moderately on topic such a burden?

or asking them to explain how something they think is ontopic but you do nott such a burden

Indeed Robeson or Heil could have saved this NG (and myselfthe memeory of Stevs kid etc) a lot of hassale by smply coming up with an explaination of why My sex life was relavaant here, or weven agreeing that "upon further thougt perhaps it is not relavant" and moving on

A LOT thin-skinned. :-)

Jimmie Noserve has a personality conflict with me because I am an "atheist" to the religion of morse...or perhaps
I allow myself to change my mind like other human beings.

Brian, these creatures just aren't acquainted with the Nature of the computer-modem beast. They are new to the jungle and resent not being accepted as a Tarzan. :-)

They be Cheetah. Ook, ook.

Jimmie Noserve knows not about "assholes" nor military service.
He's never served. He might have gone to a lot of movies and seen war films, though...

Good question!

I'd say NO skin. All hyper-sensitive nerve endings. :-)

I can. Morsemanship.

Jimmie REALLY did his thing on that, "serving the nation in other ways."

Brian, don't hold your breath waiting for an answer on THAT! :-)

Indeed! Jimmie Noserve must have "served his own constitution"
by making up "profiles."

Maybe he swore under oath to serve the "constitution" of his fantasy world?

Well...not many thunderstorms happen here in southern California.

Why does Jimmie think I'd be using OOK CW? :-)

Er, I've never traveled steerage. Never herded any steers.

I've steered automobiles successfully for 56 years...even in eastern Pennsylvania! :-)

Tsk, I never went to a parochial school. From what I've heard about them, I wouldn't want to be "taught" by Sister Nun of the Above, either. :-)

>Then why do you try so hard to make it so?

Jimmie must think that "amateur radio" operates ENTIRELY DIFFERENT and with DIFFERENT LAWS OF PHYSICS than all other radio. Perhaps he also thinks that "amateur radio" procedures and protocol are SO COMPLEX AND DIFFERENT than all other radio services?

Now, if he has bought into that fantasy, then, of course,
he would be "right" in laying into "newbies" about them being "beginners, novices, neophytes, greenhorns, tyros, wet-behind-the-ears newcomers!" Jimmie loves the fantasy role-playing of being a ruff and tuff dill sergeant "chewing out recruits" and "putting them in their place!" :-)

Trouble is, ALL radios work by the SAME laws of physics.
Each radio service has its OWN jargon and procedures.
Jimmie not know this, never having any experience with anything BUT amateur radio.

Jimmie have experience IN military radio? Absolutely not.
Jimmie have experience IN broadcasting service? He hasn't admitted it. [has he had experiences with broads? we don't know that, either] Jimmie have experience IN aviation radio services, either on the ground or in the air? He hasn't said so.
Jimmie have experience IN maritime radio services? He no say that either.
Jimmie have experience IN Private Land Mobile Radio Service?
No, Jimmie not say that.
Jimmie have experience IN radio working with Department of Defense contracts? Jimmie not admit that.
Jimmie ever use a CB? :-) Probably not, no place to plug
in a code key on those.
Jimmie ever use an FRS HT? He no say.
Jimmie ever use an amateur radio above 30 MHz? He no say dat (not much Morse up there, some but sparse)
Jimmie ever use a cordless or cell phone? He no say dat.
Jimmie ever use a "keyless entry" transmitter to lock or unlock his car? Does Jimmie own a car?

Tsk, I've done all the above, all legally. Over the last 55 years. Sometimes using voice, sometimes using data, sometimes using modulation that isn't allocated or allowed by the FCC for radio amateurs. No sweat. It's all RADIO of one form or another.

Ah, but in Jimmieworld, amateur radio is SO DIFFERENT, SO COMPLEX that one MUST go "through the ranks" from raw,
"duh" level recruit to apprentice, then progress to journeyman level. Only after YEARS of dilligent hard work can anyone begin to approach the majesty of his Master level (naturally by morsemanship).

Jimmie once write that amateur extra is too complex to reach for me. Poor baby. I took and passed all required US amateur radio tests to reach Amateur Extra in one test session. Jimmie very pissed I do that. I not ask his majesty's permission first. Tsk, tsk, I so bad...

Jimmie get pissed I can pay for Icom 746Pro on credit card without time payment. Poor baby. I work long time to earn money, put away in accounts, earn interest. I spend and Jimmie get angry...he no got money put away?

>> Len is all about rank, class and status - as long as the system

Jimmie earn BS and MS degrees at college long time ago.
He be very smart, he say. Jimmie not say how smarts allow him do things at work or even what work is.

>So, Jim, what have you done? In what ways and areas are you more >knowledgeable than Len? Kindly make a list.

Jimmie have MS. That better than BS he speak about Morse.

Jimmie be code-tested Amateur Extra. Very smart, very big on amateur knowledge, "renowned amateur historian" self-description for ham history knowledge cribbed from League sources.

I not smart enough for Jimmie's crowd. Not know fast OOK CW, never do it. Bad, bad, wrong attitude for olde-tyme hamateur radio, not appreciate Jimmie pioneering radio airwaves while helping Reggie Fessenden back in ought-six.

I have sold NO fiction to Ham Radio magzine. None to Byte, none to Microcomputing, none to Call-A.P.P.L.E., none to ELECTROMICS magazine (that was). All FACT, all articles that had information that could be duplicated by others, all compensated by monies duly reported to IRS.

I've sold some fiction to non-electronic, non-radio, non-computer interest magazines. That doesn't include the fantasy-oriented radio amateurs in here. :-)

I think that's good. It's a long distance from West Virginia to Newington, CT. The exercise will help him lose his excess baggage. Maybe Jimmie can run alongside him and help him along? :-)

>Seems to me that a person should at least adhere to their own >convictions.

Well, I've never been arrested, much less convicted of anything.

I've been TO a couple jails but never locked up in one. :-)

I once squeezed out too much crazy glue and it adhered to three fingers.

I made a statement seven years ago and Jimmie thought that I'd made an Oath for Life! Bad me. I thought some folks could take a turn-of-phrase correctly but Jimmie be a hidebound conservative Literalist and doesn't EVER accept that folks can change their minds!

Am I having fun yet? NOT in here! :-)

Well, I hate to break this to 'ya. But it'll get worse.

Some days you'll find yourself wishing your 10 meter rig would cover the chicken bands! 10-fer gud buddy!

No strain, JS, already have two CB transceivers. Old and dusty but they work! :-)

The IC-746Pro won't transmit on "11m" due to clever little program stuff in its innards. :-)

That's quite a rich fantasy life you have there, Roger. You've managed to conjure up visions of prostitution, lesbian sex and male homosexual acts in one neat little sentence. My wife never worked as a prostitute and she isn't a lesbian. Neither she nor I know anything about a place called "Twice As Nice". You seem to know something about it though. What kind of place is it, Rog? Do you go there often? Do the perverse acts in the sexual movies in your head get you hot and bothered?

Isn't your medicine working, UnWiseman, or have you stopped taking it? Would you like me to see if I can arrange for you to be seen by mental health professionals?

Len:

At the end of this post is your text taken from the moderates hangout (rec.radio.amateur.moderated) ...

One major invention you didn't mention, which is just about poised to shake the world, is the invention of "cultured diamonds." Cultured diamonds are absolutely real, indeed, they are more perfect and flawless than any diamond which has ever been found in nature. Their purity is the same as the absolutely pure silicon quartz crystal, silicon semiconductor material, germanium, etc. which is used by the electronics/semiconductor industry. This URL explains them rather well:

http://www.wired.com/wired/archive/11.09/diamond.html

Why is this new development so important to the electronics world?

Well, present silicon technology is about at its limit. What now limits major increases in computing speed is the temperature limitations of silicon. Diamond far exceeds the capabilities of silicon and will allow much faster computer speeds. Until very recently diamond pure enough for use in semiconductors was not available, and even if it was, its' use would be cost prohibitive.

It is interesting the russians actually developed the technology to manufacture these cheap diamonds (present cost to make a one carat diamond? Approx. $5.00 USD.) Just one more example of how the US is lagging behind russia, china, australia, etc.

Yes, real diamonds are almost cheap enough to pave your driveway with; and not only that, they are more perfect than anything found in nature. No jeweler can tell the difference between a "cultured diamond" and one found in nature. Only expensive testing can find the differences (and only then because the "cultured diamond" is perfectly flawless.) De Beers is poised to mount an ad campaign expounding the desirability of nature (natural?) diamonds over these cultured diamonds. Their motivations are only too transparent. At present, each "cultured diamond" must be marked by laser to denote it is synthetic. However, get a ten carat diamond and cut it into smaller gems and who's the wiser? (without a high-tech lab.)

You might think this is a great boon to women and wedding rings (not to mention the poor jerk who must put up the bucks for the purchase of one.) But no, the news media seems to have clamped a pretty tight lid on news about these diamonds. De Beers avoids any mention or comment on these diamonds, if at all possible. Call any major diamond wholesaler/retailer and they will most likely claim ignorance to their existence. I found only one outlet on the east coast where one could obtain them, they were priced, retail, about 1/3 the cost of diamonds found in nature.

We live in a much more controlled world than anyone would care to imagine or admit. I suspect the dollar controls our education and knowledge ... (and information in general.)

At present, I only wonder if this is hampering/slowing their use in electronics ... and what else is like this which I am unaware of ...

I am appalled we have let ourselves become enslaved by very wealthy interests which now appears to affect even news media, mans developing technologies and semiconductor manufacturing ...

JS

"Once upon a time" is approximately the time period prior to World War II...the first 44 years of "radio" as a communications medium. Trying to judge progress in a technology area involving hobbyists solely by the information contained in hobbyist publications is inaccurate, if not outright braggadocio by hobbyists. "Radio" as a communications medium is now 111 years old. The innovation, invention, and quantum-jumps in increases of the communications (and radio) arts of the last 67 years have totally eclipsed those early pioneering days done by everyone involved with any RF emission activity. Some of the highlights:

1. "Discovery of 'shortwaves' enabling worldwide communications: Already known by non-hobbyist technologists. Radio amateurs were forced upwards in frequency use by politics, not pioneering. It was fortuitous for amateurs, yes, but not necessarily of their own and objected-to at the time by amateurs.

2. SSB: Already used in wireline communications by long-distance telephony providers in the 1920s; use on HF as "carrier" (multi-channel) service by commercial and government groups in the 1930s.
Single-channel SSB given boost by USAF contracts for such in the immediate-post-WWII time.

3. Quartz crystal control of frequency: Already known by academics and other physical standards workers; WWII needs resulted in mass-production of crystal units reaching a million units per month; synthetic (man-made) quartz crystal growth perfected by industry in the 1950s. Growth techniques helped the semiconductor industry with similar growth of germanium and silicon ingots.

4. VHF FM voice: Pioneering already begun about 1938 by industry to improve Public Safety mobile communications and adopted by military for universal manpack and vehicular radio in WWII; broadcasting use pioneered by Edwin Armstrong in 1930s for broadcasting industry applications, including music.

5. Superheterodyne receivers: Invention of Edwin Armstrong in 1918, led to almost universal use of superheterodyne architecture
in receivers to the present day in all radio services.

6. Quartz and mechanical-torsion-resonator narrow bandpass filters:
Originally developed by telephony industry for "carrier" long-distance wireline and multi-channel RF communications providers;
development of "modern filter theory" spurred by this same application plus long-distance frequency-multiplexed microwave radio relay (transcontinental service). Adoption to most radio architectures possible by man-grown quartz crystal blanks (3).

7. "Channelized" (step-increment) frequency control of Rx, Tx:
First wide use in DoD/USAF contracts for post-WWII single-channel SSB, followed shortly thereafter by air carrier and general aviation radionavigation and radio communications.

8. Use of internal ("embedded") microprocessors for general purpose control of function and frequency: Almost simultaneous in both test equipment and various radio communications services beginning about the mid-1970s. Such enabled reduced interior space, number of total components by eliminating mechanical couplings of controls. Adjunct advantage of providing displays of controls settings and mathematical results of some functions heretofore unavailable with older methods.

9. Digital Signal Processing (DSP): Probable first widespread use for submarine and anti-submarine military use, typically SONAR variations. Followed closely by applications to "music synthesizers" and similar (PC sound cards) and consumer electronics and instrumentation displays. This and item (8) made possible by Large Scale Integration of solid-state devices beginning their explosive growth in the mid-1970s.

The preceding items are just a short list of major innovations as they apply to common amateur radio use of today. It does not begin to cover major innovations in all electronics, including applications
to medicine and architectural engineering nor the physical standards
organizations worldwide.

> >Ham radio ceased to be forward > >looking and innovative and has devolved into something more akin to > >stamp collecting - interesting to practitioners, useless to the world at > >large.

"Xxx," to paraphrase Hans Brakob, I would "throw that out with great force."

The activity of amateur radio is basically a hobby, an activity done primarily for personal enjoyment...worldwide, I might add. It is a fascinating one, a technically-challenging one, one of use in communicating with like-minded enthusiasts, local to worldwide. Hobbies are FUN for their participants. There is nothing at all "wrong" with having FUN doing anything, whether stamp collecting, rebuilding classic cars, flying model aircraft by radio control, or being advisors for Scouts.

Radio amateurs, by and large, are not into amateur radio for the sake of being inventors, scientific researchers, manufacturers of radio-electronics devices, or being emergency and disaster volunteers. They CAN, of course, as can any citizen without an amateur radio license.

I could cite an equally-long list of "post-Sputnik" innovations that have appeared in amateur radio use and technology, done by radio amateurs themselves. Some, if not most, are citizens of other countries. However, the more widely-used innovations and inventions has, from the beginning, come from academicians, engineers and producers in the electronics industry, and communications providers. The history of all that explosive growth has been continually documented in hundreds of trade journals, professional associations, and scientific journals. It isn't exclusive to appearing in amateur radio interest publications.

Please feel free to document all those "advantages to the economy." I see very few such cases of the last 111 years of "radio." What I have seen are a number of claims for same that very conveniently "sin by omission" [of incorrect attribution to the overall world of radio and electronics]... something that marketeers know by the simple acronym of "PR."

> > My guess is that the > >FCC was willing to ignore the complaints of the ARRL and the old Morse > >code cultists because they (the FCC) see it that way, as well.

I must disagree with that as well. Since the FCC must regulate ALL United States civil radio RF emissions, they are chartered to be aware and informed of almost everything in regards to "radio." They DO that on a technical level, including having an Office of Engineering and Technology for their own advisement. The FCC is aware of nearly ALL radio use, not only in the USA but worldwide (we are globally interconnected in many communications ways). The FCC also asks for advice on use and technology and, as chartered by law, input from ALL citizens. Such "input" is made available to the public at large, freely.

Anyone can fault the FCC for some alleged political bias. That is frequent and also many-sided. Such is normal in politics, but it is not per se some "truth." The ARRL ("my" club) is no more a paragon of truth than any membership organization and the FCC is not bound to 'obey' the ARRL 'advice' than any other special-interest group.

The FCC made a decision on a contentious subject in amateur radio license examinations. The FCC has the final say on who is licensed and who is not. The public comment period was long and over 3,700 citizens commented. The FCC took about a year to reach a decision on the matter, then made it law by legal means. Let us accept that and go forward.

As usual, Woger is wrong. If you go to http://nimbusters.com, you get an "account disabled" message. Looks like N9OGL finally took NIM Busters down, just as he said he would.

Or maybe it was Lloyd. Huh, Woger? What if it was LLLLLLLLLOYD!!!!!

I did not include carbon crystal growth for the simple reason that it does not have any DIRECT application to electronics.
The push to grow quartz crystals by man was an outfall of WWII quartz crystal unit production with a war priority topped only by the Manhattan Project. Some 37 to 38 MILLION quartz crystal units were produced during WWII. (reference from a paper available at Corning Frequency Control Div.)
There was only one source of natural quartz crystals pure enough for oscillator crystals during WWII, Brazil, a neutral in WWII. No other country had a good supply of natural quartz, allied, axis, or neutral.

Some, not all, of the man-made crystal growth processes were applicable to semiconductor material growth and refining, most especially refining...first of germanium, then silicon, and in a much later experiment, carbon (whose crystalline form is diamond). The Army Central Electronics Command did experiment (or contracted out) manufacture of crystalline carbon as a semiconductor basis. The end result turned out to be extremely difficult to perform cutting and slicing, then the precise "doping" to introduce P- and N-type zones to make the proper junctions. While there were quite obvious advantages to withstand much higher termps than silicon (that much better than germanium), the end result was a terribly-expensive transistor that wasn't practical for military electronics hardware.

It should be noted that there were a LOT of "blue-sky" trials in industry and government of the 1960s, including "flat" vacuum tubes with no filaments...everything about a triode structure was heated to stimulate electron emission...most of those were just experiments, the "what if" kind of thing. Many of those appeared as PR squibs in the trade papers of the 1960s AS IF they were "already developed" and makers were "ready to take orders." :-)

There were so many of these experiments during the '60s that it prompted a couple of engineers to present a "paper" at a WESCON (big West Coast Convention, annual) about their "Linistor," a "Linear Resistance Semi-Conductor." The sharp folks caught on immediately that all it did was describe the already-long-available carbon composition resistor! :-) Needless to say the WESCON papers judges were much embarrassed; my STL Lab Chief was on that papers committee at the time. [carbon in crystal form is diamond]

Russian researchers are no dummies. A few years ago they announced and demonstrated an X-Ray lens (which memory sez might have been made of synthetic diamond?). That lens was used as a collimator for lithography needed for area doping and masking at extremely-small dimensions, a goal of all semiconductor makers. X-Ray wavelengths are shorter than deep UV now used.

Cheap quartz crystals' availability made possible the post-WWII NTSC color TV receiver architecture (internal color sub-carrier oscillator lockable in phase to the received color burst). Man-made quartz crystals are the mainstay of today's ubiquitous crystal oscillators, once in channelized radio frequency synthesizers (brute-force method of mixing banks of crystal frequencies) to microprocessors and microcontrollers in everything from high-end ham transceivers to lawn sprinkler controllers. One can get hundreds of different stock frequency crystal units now, all under $2 apiece, from all suppliers, OSE to Digi-Key.

Please save your diatribes of "decadent capitalist fat cats" where they gobble up all the wealth. Go watch "American Idol" or some other PR-driven BS show about "talent" which is really all one big marketing exercise.

Or, you could read the "HF Digital Voice" article in QST of

It's not a lie. It is based upon statistics from my own news server.
Here are the raw csv data for April:

Date,total,rram,rrap,arsf

20070402,51,25,26,0 20070403,11,3,8,0
20070404,3,2,1,0
20070405,11,0,11,0
20070406,34,5,29,0 20070407,39,21,18,0
20070408,50,22,26,2
20070409,43,12,30,1
20070410,60,17,43,0 <-- April 10th peak of 60 posts.
20070411,30,15,15,0 20070412,28,13,15,0 20070413,4,2,2,0
20070414,5,1,4,0
20070415,29,3,26,0
20070416,10,5,5,0
20070417,17,5,12,0
20070418,30,11,19,0
20070419,10,2,8,0

As you can see, you only hit 30 posts max after April 10 - a clear indication that you are distracted by something. If you keep this up, we'll have to find another flooder to track.

One thing that seems everlasting is the RRAM attitudes by moderators. It seems that the RRAM powers almost kill-filed me for daring to speak of things radio in words not accepted by the league. :-(There was a day pause between my posting of the message you quoted while someone "considered" it. A prompt I got said that the thread on Before and After Cessation of Code Testing was CLOSED.

CLOSED. Not "you are a bad boy, AF6AY," just closed.

Then it OPENED, when, today? It's okay there for an obvious anonymous poster to continue (xxx@yyy.zzz) but someone who has been around a while in radio (like over a half century) has to be "reviewed by moderators."

No wonder that way-post-WWII ham radio innovation is being done in the UK, Germany, and Japan now. :-(

When my oldest son was just a child, if something was spoken which he did not like he would cover his ears and say, "DON'T SAY THAT!" r.r.a.m has taken this to new heights, but we already knew that would its' outcome, didn't we?

My son was able to outgrow this behavior ... I fear some will never.

Groan. How you DO distort English syntax in an effort to "be the one who is right." It is quite painful to watch, because it makes you look so foolish.

Everyone but you knows exactly what I meant. That's because they speak and understand colloquial U.S. English. You, on the other hand, continue to live in an oddly different world where only you can see that the sky is orange and that gremlins live under your bed.

Heh heh...it seems that RRAM has suddenly turned indulgent. They didn't obliterate my posting in reply to Mike Coslo or The Miccolis. :-)

I think it helps to add all sorts of specifc reference quotes (which I did).

Interesting that Miccolis keeps up his little game of adding question marks to quotes of my postings. I didn't write all of those yet the moderators "approve" of such games there.
Also, Miccolis seemingly MUST be provocative on my postings over there...which is, apparently, okay for him but I dare not downplay anyone's enthusiasm and league-speak.

"Interesting" in a weird, wired way. :-)

Let's see how this all plays out...

No, someone is using an odd character set, or maybe an odd character to show quoting, and it's getting garbled as it gets passed on.
I just checked, and I think there are three different different things being displayed. In your message, it came as " =A0 " but at least one other had more than just question marks representing that.

I don't know what caused it, or who is the originating point, but someone's using an odd or proprietary character set. It looks fine to them, but others not using the same software (or at the least have things set for the same character set) can only display the character(s) as they interpret it. ANd different newsreaders will interpret differently. Hence two or three interpretations.

John. Let me nitpick. You should have corrected this to "Len's" observations.

Unless of course there is more than one Len, then you could have used the plural possessive...

I thought you, in light of your recent misuse of the apostrophe, would have been more aware of that than the rest of us...

It is that, during Roger's absence, you are the next, easiest target of opportunity open for ridicule. And you lend yourself SO easily to that end!

It appears the Libyan government has a "banned countries" list which consists of a single country.

For many years the USA had a "banned countries" list which consisted of about a dozen countries.

Thanks for the explanation, Michael. Unfortunately, I don't buy it for Miccolis. I go straight to Google for newsgroup reading-writing, using only ASCII that is in MS Notepad.
There's a reason for not using a reader program but it has nothing to do with newsgroups or their access.

Miccolis has been dogging me for roughly a decade due to his whatever condition and the "question marks" came through only recently...and only on my quotes, not quotes from others in the same message. For evidence, I just look at his posts [if it quacks like a duck, looks like a duck, it probably IS a duck]. :-)

Oh, for crying out loud! I wish that Mark, despite his gibberish, would at least ONCE make an honest effort to get off his Dyslexic, unemployed arse and speak English.
You really should make an effort, Mark. And in the interim? Maybe you should take the extra step to clean up your disshevled and filth-laden home. You should put all those boxes full of "stuff" in order and unpack some of them. Look, for instance, at the garbage in your yard, You and Gav see your collective tires and old appliances as "treasures", while your neighbors see the two of you as garbage collectors.

You claim to have several degrees, but your yard looks like a county dump.

It does correlate very well. I think the sunspot number may be directly proportional to your brain wave activity. Unfortunately, we are at the solar minimum right now.

Ahem, "artifacts?" Why they start showing up about a month ago? Why do they only appear in Miccolis' quotes of my text?

Jay-suss...it must be time to trot out the old venerable LIST

Yes, nine (9) sequentially issued for Hawaii. Here's a query that I hard to disassociate himself from the guy that hijacked his PO Box.

Of the EIGHT phony clubs' callsigns, six are presently unassigned, "not in the database." KH6DDP is presently granted to Yukio Higa, a General class ham in Honolulu. KB1CCE expired on 20 Feb 07 and does not appear to have been renewed.

"KH6HZ" is the phony-area callsign Mikey got away with...but that's already been discussed at length with Mikey almost bragging about doing so...even with the protestations and denials of Jeffrey Herman who also had P.O.Box 8282, Honolulu. Coincidence? NO!

My callsign area is "6" on the mainland, arrived at by the FCC sequential callsign system, HONESTLY. I've lived AT my postal address for 43 years, 11 months. "Ego?" No. I believe in following both the letter and the spirit of the law.

I'm simply following your example, Mork.
It is a relatively slow evening here in La La Land so, like you, I am going to take a few moments to shit on your posts as you do with those of others. But it is not my fault. You cause me to do it. I must defend my honor, just as you do yours.

I think, Mark, that I am going to henceforth adopt your Eternal Victim status and take a page from your own coloring book.

You made me do it. You left me no choice.

Typical Len. Don't say in three sentences that which can better be belabored in ten paragraphs or more.
Len has managed to define the fine line between being a Wordsmith and a complete Boor.

Indeed. You are correct. Anyone who'd emulate you HAS to be stupid.

Call it what you wish, but nine out of ten in this group say that you shit on posts. And, indeed, you do.

Is your name Mrak? That is a rather unusual name, is it not? If "Mrak" is your name, show me some legal documentation proving same. If not, then shut the Hell up and stop whining that someone is using your name. Nobody likes crybabies, Mark. And fewer yet like you.

Note: No "artifacts" were used, incorporated, introduced, intended,

No sweat to me, Mark. Poor "Mrak" must have ADD and can't handle more than one paragraph... :-)

To "Mrak Mrogan" I just say fruck yu. :-)

...so I was assisting my youngest son with research on a 'waning moon' project for school...

Thus, I searched the term 'waning moon' on Google.

And one of the links (result #11) that appeared in Google was:

a.. www.geocities.com/gaypagans

For a moment, I thought that I had stumbled upon Mark Morgan's Secret HomePage.

However, as it turned out, when I saw the proper spelling and grammar contained in the little site summary under the link, I immediately concluded that it could not be Mark's secret home page. There were no spelling or grammatical errors.

No, although the technical term was either "waning crescent" moon or "waning gibbous" (part of the assignment was to define the difference between the two), I thought the term "waning moon" would be a catch-all.

Turns out I caught more than I intended.

A strong xmitter and a rubber ducky in front of a corner reflector (parabolic reflector formed out of "chicken wire"--even better) and moon bounce would most likely be a given.

A walkie talkie with you standing in front of a reflector would be chancy ... :-(

Quite A number of (Years or Moons ago) depending on how you keep track of time, someone came to one of the hamfests in Gaithersburg, Maryland, in a large box type of truck, and mounted on top of the truck was a CAPACITOR CANNON of sorts.

I think that I need to clarify a bit - apparently the capacitors did not really explode, but SNAPPED IN DISCHARGE STATE causing a louder than life noise, and could be recharged to do it continuously.

At a push of a button this object sounded like a number of VERY LARGE CHERRY BOMBS going off in succession.

Yes - it was an attention getter.

Does anybody else remember this device and or have a schematic for it?

Well - I would like to thank everyone who submitted a story about getting rid of power line noise, transformers & other hardware falling from top of poles, etc, but nobody has answered my question yet!

What I am looking for is the object described, to make NOISE. Not interference type of noise on a receiver, especially during contests and the like, but as an attention getter! Also, this unit would have NOTHING to do with cannons or other types of units set to actually explode say "gunpowder or the likes" that would cause a harmful explosion to damage any person or property!

I have a specific need for an item as of such!! Originally I said that it might sound like a bunch of Cherry Bombs going off, maybe I should rearrange the wording and say it sounds more like the noise coming from the muzzle of a machinegun!

These are the number of current, unexpired FCC-issued amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains.

Percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding.

These totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period, nor do they include club, military and other station-only licenses.

Effective April 15, 2000, FCC no longer issued new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced class licenses, so the numbers of those license classes have declined steadily since then.

Also since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician.
It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

On February 23, 2007, the last Morse Code test element, the 5 wpm receiving test, was eliminated as a requirement.

The ARS License Numbers:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice- 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of February 22, 2007:

4382. 60 Days Since Code Test Cessation Compared

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy
Date: 2007-04-26 17:16:15 UTC
From: AF6AY <LenAnderson@ieee.org>
Message-ID: <1177607775.657346.22300@n15g2000prd.googlegroups.com>
Source record: 189439

[Reposted from earlier posting in Rec.Radio.Amateur.Moderated]

U.S. License Changes over two 60 Day Periods from www.hamdata.com:

Hamdata information sorted from FCC publicly-available database of 24
April 2007
and [in square brackets] 24 January 2007:

New Licensees 2,730 [1,342]

Expirations 2,314 [2,101]

Class Changes 4,342 [985]

Call Changes 1,130 [214]

All Updates* 15,038 [16,536]

* Renewals, address or name changes, plus other administrative changes.

The number of new licensees have approximately doubled since the advent of code testing cessation on 23 February 2007 compared to the December 2006 to January 2007 60-day period when code testing was required.

The number of license class changes have approximately quadrupled since the advent of code testing cessation on 23 February 2007. The number of callsign changes have almost quintupled.

Expirations are approximately the same. In the last 60 days the number of new licensees is greater than the number of expirations; for December 2006 and January 2007 the number of new licensees were less than expirations.

The overall losses of all licensees (all classes including Club and Grace Period) over the previous two years were 11,143 [11.528]. This is approximately the same for each period.

indeed this is perhaps the most telling sat in the bunch becuase it has hardly changed at alll

there fore it tends to validate the rest

The data is most likely skewed because of inherent errors in the "license census" tally.

These errors are, again, most likely because of the "baby boom bubble" which is working its' way through the system (large numbers of amateurs expiring and leaving the planet.)

And, unless the death of an amateur is reported to the FCC, it can take a bit for the lost license (or deceased ham) to show up (lag time.)

Frankly, as under-reported as the cessation of CW testing is, I am surprised there has been the increase in new licenses we are seeing.

Perhaps we will get lucky and something not even on our "radar screens" will happen and promote untold new numbers of hams ... the intellectual/college crowd might be made licensees if the present image of amateur radio is changed and somehow made to relate to the intellectually gifted/inclined.

A few articles in computer/technology magazines describing projects which meld computers (both hardware and software based) with amateur communications certainly would not hurt ...

Regards,
JS

One more thing, perhaps it would be good to further sub-categorize this data into two main and distinct groups:

1) Those WITH false teeth.

2) Those WITHOUT false teeth.

JS, there is no "census" of numbers on the www.hamdata.com site.
They take their data download from the FCC's huge amateur radio database file and sort that. That's what the ARRL does, that's what QRZ does, that's what everyone else does.

The FCC database has specific fields indicating who is NEW and the duration of all granted licensees. Adding two years to the given expiration date is a trivial program task. The two years are for the grace period.

The FCC does the record keeping for the licenses the FCC grants.

No "baby boom" enters this simple picture of numbers, no inferences.

There are just licensees in the U.S. amateur radio service.

I don't. FCC database records only have licensees...unless, in a rare event, a family member corresponds with the FCC that a licensee is gone.

My wife and I had ham the other night. I hope it wasn't anyone you knew...

Hi Folks:
This is relative to a business band actually, but I can't find an apropriate group. Anyway,;
This isn't a repeater, but a remote half-duplex radio that uses only one frequency. Narrow FM.
CW ID's. We're going encoded audio for security reasons and was wondering what the latest policy is for CW ID's. One said every 10 minutes while in communication, and once an hour when not. Then it seems the FCC is reconsidering CWIDs all together. So, does this mean non-coded voice ID? I was going to program a PIC or basic stamp to send ID. Or is this required at all anymore?
Thanks!
Harry

I like your idea of programming the PIC.

While you are at it, get a solid state relay or reed switch and a driver transistor to drive the relay/reed, then, program the PIC to key the xmitter with the relay/reed and for a few measly bucks you are off and running.

Here's a pic of my PIC12C509 that I use on the LOWFER frequencies. I was initially wanting to put this on a model rocket! Fox hunt kind of thing. It sends code on something like 185kc. Clock frequency is something like 8kc. Pretty easy to program. I'd like to play with the timers for a CW id that needs to wait 60 minutes. .

The FCC doesn't just regulate amateur radio. "Business bands" regulations are covered in another Part of Title 47 CFR. You can look those up at www.fcc.gov and click on the Regulations link at the left edge of the home page.

If you are going to use amateur radio bands then you have only a few choices, but ALL of them must be under the control of the Control Operator (the licensee). You can have one-way automatic transmission using a Beacon mode (minimal information, intended solely for others to observe propagation effects to their location). You can have automatic operation as with Repeaters where an incoming transmission is sent out on another frequency. You can have "telecommand" (better known as remote control) at low power but only under specific conditions: either remote control of devices such as model vehicles; or as the control of a transmitter on the amateur bands. What you seem to want (a security service of some sort) just isn't covered under U.S. amateur radio regulations. That isn't what amateur radio is for, nor is it regulated to be just anything anyone can dream up in front of a computer screen.

Hard-nosed reply? You betcha. Think my reply was hard? Wait until some federal marshalls and an FCC officer knock on your door...

No offense taken. However, it is habitual with the adolescent mindset of many in here who turned this newsgroup into a rotting pile of excrement to constantly get on anyone's case who vaguely mentions some physical or away-from-"normal" sexual anything.

This thread started out with some simple statistics based on FCC database information that ALL the amateur statistics sites use (even the ARRL). The main thing it showed for the first two months since the end of license exam code testing was UPGRADING of existing licnsees. There were NO hordes of "unwashed CB types' entering amateur radio as so many of the pro-code olde-tymers kept saying "would happen." Note: The pro-coders kept saying that, the no-code-test advocates did not.

There is some hint of a slight increase in newcomers to amateur radio, but only a hint. That could be a statistical anamoly (nothing to do with tooth enamel). Or it might be an actual boost of interest.

The number of expirations remains relatively the same, these last 60 days or the 60 days prior to about the end of January (when General and Extra still required a code test). The overall licensee totals remain relatively static yet the population of the USA keeps increasing.

Sorry, but I had to put some "teeth" into the subject of this thread...

More like rude, obnoxious, and non-responsive to the question.

The OP was specifically asking for the RULES AS THEY APPLY TO BUSINESS BAND and making an honest effort to find out how to comply with the rules.

Yes, this is an amateur radio newsgroup, and perhaps the query is mildly off topic, but so are your long boring solliliquies about your 50 years or so as a bench technician.

One thing is a certainty, the death rate of baby boomers is accelerating. Although it is hard to pick any certain date to pin point the start of the baby boom, around 1940 might be a good pick.

Be that as it may, it's been implied to me that knowledge and skill at morse code is an almost guarantor of immortality!
Of course, that was before a couple of pro-coder regulars in here died. <shrug> :-)

Also, I've been told that nearly all the expirations of US ham licenses were all due to the no-code-test Technician class licensees reaching the end of their 12-year license span and quitting. That doesn't jibe with the "SK" page listing in QST, but those pro-coders just won't quit on their mythology.

Anyway, you are correct, after the war the "big bubble" formed.

The time-line is something like this:

America declares war on japan: 12/8/41
German forces in Italy surrender: 4/19/45
Germany surrenders: 05/8/45
Japan surrenders: 09/2/45

Our whole involvement in the war (other than supplying weapons/intelligence to our allies) is about 3 years and 3 months.

Rather amazing really, two nations beaten in a heartbeat, now we can't even nuke one small middle east country, go figure. No men left like that American president, military leaders and general population with cajones ...

However, historians note a small increase in birth to death rates just before or at the war start. Advancements in manufacturing, transportation, cities, etc. are usually noted as the cause. How much this all interacted with the war to increase population growth is still debated in the halls of academia ...

Actually, technically, yes. Has been for 54 years. The Korean War went into some curious "forever truce" in July, 1953, and that hasn't been settled yet. Over ten times the casualties in Korea than in Iraq and Afghanistan combined.

Yanno, that text of yours, above, is too bad, I guess what I seen as the only redeeming aspect of amateur radio has died.

I always valued the "experimenter amateur" who could and did (in the very early days, and finally tapering down to nothing) affect the course of radio.

I guess now we just sit and wait around for the gov't to come up with something innovative (in which case that is NEVER!) or some private concern who will come up with it to make $$$ (or, cha-ching!)

Bummer, when you think about it, that is at the root of what has killed American/Christian values, the family, motherhood, brotherhood and the colors of green and grey :(

Now now, Skeleton Man, let's not make rude, obnoxious, and non-responsive comments. :-)

The prime site for questions on BUSINESS BAND radio operation is www.fcc.gov and their Wireless Telecommunications Bureau. They can and do answer questions specifically on PLMRS (Private Land Mobile Radio Service). Whole different kettle of worms.

It's better than being some kind of Amerind "Legend" come to life.

JS, the experimenter amateurs are Out There and you don't need a Sculley from the FBI to find them. :-)

Trouble is, the experimenters are busy experimenting while all the olde-tymers are sitting around gassing about how they got Extra class at 14, made hundreds of kilos of contacts, can do CW at fantastic rates, and have expensive equipment to drool over. And if they aren't, then they are busy knocking anyone who dares Challenge Their Authority! [They Rule!] :-)

The first experimenter who made a single PIC frequency counter for HF was a Brit and not licensed as a radio amateur! Takes a while to do the trace on that, but it be true. Ever USE a Vector Network Analyzer (VNA)? I have. Expensive beasts. Yet several amateur experimenters have made their own and published plans or have kits available for it...at down-to-earth prices, even if not for the $2 some cheap hams insist they must be. Some VNAs are incorporated in auto antenna tuners and antenna analyzers.

Ever really look inside one of the "radio modems" that can handle data in most any format? Stand-alone goodies needing only a display and keyboard ('dumb terminal") to do I/O on the air.

My IC-746Pro does 5-level RTTY decoding to a little 2-line text display on its front panel (as well as tossing the digitized signals out to peripheral equipment). Doesn't do 8-level at 100 WPM but I won't ask for the world in it. Everything in that transceiver centers around its microprocessor suite.

> I guess now we just sit and wait around for the gov't to come up with

G3PLX came up with PSK31. There's two digital voice adapaters available for 3 KHz voice-bandwidth use, from Japan and Germany as to the experimenters' origin.

If you want to stick around and experiment with using PC soundcards as some prime mover for experimentation, feel free. Dozens have already done that for a variety of purposes. You think ALL experimenters
are altruistic and are doing it solely for "love" or something?
Sorry.
No deal. Unless they have Donald Trump bank accounts to live from.

There have been some RF gadgets that automatically respond to interrogations for at least 30 years, not counting the transponders used in Civil Aviation and military. Those aren't amateur.

You want to be an experimenter? Go ahead. If you got a plan, do it, don't look for "appreciation" ahead of time just on an IDEA.
Problem is, too many just jabber about ideas which haven't been anywhere close to fully formed or analyzed, even on paper. :-(

JS, "new ideas" are seldom, if ever, realized in jabbering in newsgroups or blogs. That's just the usual dreaming. A new idea (on equipment) had better be breadboarded and analyzed, tested FIRST. "Appreciation" and "congratulations" have to wait until the experimenter sweats a bit on his/her gizmo.

How about coming up with this fantastic all-speed, fully-adapatable morse decoder that can work down to the noise floor? I've seen one that comes close to that, done in nothing more than software. Better than what is/was on the market.
Done by just a software experimenter. Not even a licensee in radio. Just the ticket for software honchos.

Mark doesn't lisp, at least not to the best of our knowledge. To determine that, we'd have to hear him on the air and he has no radio service capable of transmitting past local VHF repeaters.
His antenna, if it is that, is laying prone on his porch rails and is out of service. He currently uses the mast as a dog tie.

And how is life in the slow lane in Glen Dale, Roger? Still peeking from behind your curtains to see who comes knocking? You never know who may show up next....

Accusing Mark Morgan of "net abuse" on the basis of his posts and x-poasts to rec.radio.amateur.policy smacks more than a little of extreme and outright unabashed homophobia, considering that said group is full of net.abusers of all kinds, including Dave Heil, Lloyd Davies, and Woger Wiseman, among many others (all the regs of RRAP, basically).
But then again, you would appear to be an extreme and outright unabashed homophobe, so no matter.

The European Commission has just announced an agreement whereby English will be the official language of the European Union rather than German, which was the other possibility.

As part of the negotiations, the British Government conceded that English spelling had some room for improvement and has accepted a 5 year phase-in plan that would become known as "Euro-English".

In the first year, "s" will replace the soft "c". Sertainly, this will make the sivil servants jump with joy. The hard "c" will be dropped in favour of "k". This should klear up konfusion, and keyboards kan have one less letter.

There will be growing publik enthusiasm in the sekond year when the troublesome "ph" will be replaced with "f". This will make words like fotograf 20% shorter.

In the 3rd year, publik akseptanse of the new spelling kan be expekted to reach the stage where more komplikated changes are possible.

Governments will enkourage the removal of double letters which have always ben a deterent to akurate speling.

Also, al wil agre that the horibl mes of the silent "e" in the languag is disgrasful and it should go away.

By the 4th yer people wil be reseptiv to steps such as replasing "th" with "z" and "w" with "v".

During ze fifz yer, ze unesesary "o" kan be dropd from vords kontaining "ou" and after ziz fifz yer, ve vil hav a reil sensi bl riten styl.

Zer vil be no mor trubl or difikultis and evrivun vil find it ezi tu understand ech oza. Ze drem of a united urop vil finali kum tru.

Und efter ze fifz yer, ve vil al be speking German like zey vunted in ze forst plas.

No, and definitely NOT "original." The original has been cribbed by dozens, rewritten for a specific subject, and tossed out as "new"

next to them?

Well, maybe in Glendale, West Virginia ...

P.S. Sheryl Crow suggests only one sheet per sitting. DO try to comply.

Heck. Mark has been writing like that for decades. He even said,
"I realy don't write that badly I do write in ore european mode [sic]"

So, what you call laziness, Mark calls economy of effort. Maybe he is simply ahead of his time.

Or stupid.

Roger. Did you make up yet another word? What is "expereience"? I guess we can submit this one to the ever growing Roger Wiseman Dictionary, can we not?
I'm positive that nobody with your alleged education (Mark being the exception) would misspell so many words so often. I'm betting that there is something defective with your keyboard, right, Rog? Maybe your keys just randomly move about when you aren't looking, right, Rog?
Maybe you could correct this malady by gluing the keys in place. Use caution with any glue, Roger. The fumes, especially in closed and locked rooms, can cause behavioral problems.

Where were you when the Heils came a-calling? They didn't stay in their vehicle.
They were on your porch, knocking on your door. I'm sure you heard them, even above the knocking of you knees as you retreated to the back bedroom.
You missed a golden opportunity there, Rog. You could have answered the door and apologized and acted like a grownup. Who knows? You might even have been able to make a friend or two in the process. Lord knows you need all of those you can get.

Heck. They, the Terrorists/Muslims are already doing so in Dearborn, Michigan. The Muslims are demanding that the City Council allow them to blast their call to prayer sirens five times a day. The local non-Muslim citizens are outraged that 40 percent of the population should dictate to the majority.
How much you want to bet that the pussy politicians give in to Political Correctness and let the Muslims rule the day?

And just last year, two 22 year old Dearborn, Michigan Muslim kids were arrested on the Toll Road for having six thousand pay-as-you-go throwaway cell phones in their car. They were arrested for speeding. Having that many throw-away cell phones was not illegal, but it takes not a rocket scientist to figure out what they were doing.

Improvised explosive devices? Sending cell phones to terrorsist cells?

Islam is NOT a religion of peace. It is a religion of violence, vengeance, and wanton slaughter.

All I need to know about Islam, I learned on Sept 11th, 2001.
And when Christians start televising beheadings on the internet, then you can cast stones.

How have I stolen your name and call? You really have a wild imagination. There is nothing on my new blog that claims or implies that I am you, and I just checked the FCC database, your call is still correctly listed under your name and address. I haven't sent an application for your call, so apparently you are wrong again. So sorry Mark, better luck next time.

Actually, I just posted a disclaimer on my blog which clearly states that my new blog is not associated with you or your amateur radio station. In case you don't know, you do not own your call, you have no ownership rights to same, or the combination or the letters and numbers. Outside of your on-the-air amateur radio activity, your call has zero meaning in the realm of the internet or anywhere else.

OK Mark, I will not get on the air and legally ID with your call, I think I would rather continue to ID with my own call, Thank you very much.

I can't address your second remark, I misplaced my Morkie decoder ring
so I can't decode your secret message.

Dloyd.

The problem for you is don't have an on-line internet call. When the FCC starts issuing on line internet call signs let me know...LOL.

Still proof that your are just a whining idiot. I don't know what your are whining about? You need to ask yourself, "How in the hell did I lose control of my blog?" If it was voluntary, what are you

How is I using letters and numbers that are similar to your call sign in the web address for my blog have anything to do with your sex life. Don't start bringing up your sex life again, no one really cares. Do your really think your sex life is the reason everyone treats you the way they do? I don't know about anyone else but I treat you the way that I do because you are a thread hi-jacking, spamming, ASSHOLE.

Oh gawd Morkie, don't revert to your little school yard antics, it is so hum drum.
An asshole is a comtemptable annoying person, just because you have an affliction with the anus, doesn't mean the rest of the world does.
Nevertheless, I hope you enjoy only reading my new blog because you not going to post there unless I let you or I give up the blog.

BTW, don't try to crap on the group too much the rest of the night, you already started a bunch of Dloyd threads in response, exercise a little self control, give it a rest for the night.

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

That's the problem and the major stumbling block to field unification. For Dr. Einstein held out that a physical based field theory should be sought out and not left to quantum uncertainty of how the universe primly base works. Man made coordinate systems are fine without knowing from where or what is the base essence of what the space as deduced field is composed of, but not totally satisfactory. Anomalies keep space cropping up and scientists have to keep adjusting for these unexpected events. They don't televise abortion clinic bombings or cross burnings. They didn't have television during the Crusades or the witch trials. Not excusing either party's actions, only pointing up facts.

letting it idle and phone in his babbling instead of getting out of the truck and coming to the door. Roger wasn't home,

No, my ID is my own. Dloyd Lavies is my original creation for an on-

Oh, so I suppose you sending 17 OT posts with the same title in a matter of a minute is not spam. Looks like it qualifies as spam to me and is consistent with your spamming behavior.
>
> you think not lying down for abuse is being an asshole that is your > problem

Who is abusing you? Do you feel abused?

My problem with you is you won't stop crapping on everyone's posts and hijacking their threads. Most every thread that is started on RRAM and RRAP ends up with you changing the title and context of the thread, you posting so much assinie spam to each and every post that you kill the topic, and because you must always have the last word, you bombard each and every thread. Go through Google groups and look at the RRAM and RRAP directly, 90% of the threads have been, a. taken off topic by you, b. have more posts by you than anyone else, and c. are almost impossible to read because you are unable to or unwilling to compile a coherent sentence.
